LAKE STORM SINKS TWO BOATS; 6 DEAD

Small Vessels Lost in Lake Erie; Crew Torn From Rigging

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 21.—The terrific storm which swept over Lakes Erie and Huron yesterday and early today had subsided considerably tonight. So far as known, all vessels which were caught in the blow have been accounted for. Two small boats and six lives were claimed by the gale. The vessels which went down were the barge D. L. Filer of Chicago and the steamer Marshall F. Butters of Michigan City, Ind. Both boats sank in Lake Erie. Six of the sailors on the Filer were swept to their death after clinging for hours to the rigging of their tiny craft. Captain John Mattison of Muskegon was the sole survivor. He was rescued by the Detroit and Cleveland passenger steamer Western States.

The tug Shaun Rhue of Detroit is pounding on the shore at Pelee Island, Ont. She was beached there today by her 75-year-old captain, Robert Maines of Buffalo. The tug, manned by Maines and a crew of seven men, was disabled tonight. When the tug C. W. Endries of Kingsville, Ont., approached the Shaun Rhue this morning, Captain Maines refused to leave his boat. Five of the crew went aboard the tug, but the engineer and cook stayed with their captain. After a perilous trip, the Shaun Rhue was towed to Pelee Island by the Endries.

"WILSON HAS SINNED AGAINST MEXICO AND MANKIND'—ROOSEVELT

Why European Nations Are Respected and United States Is Despised Below the Rio Grande—Address at Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 21.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt reached his westernmost point in the campaign today, delivered a speech in which he arraigned the present administration and repeated his recent declaration that "when I was President, I spoke softly and carried a big stick; President Wilson speaks bombastically and wields a dish rag."

The merchants here closed their stores during the address, and towns along the route from daylight until he reached Phoenix at noon turned out at the stations.

Colonel Roosevelt's auditors were crowded into a vacant city block. He concluded with an appeal for the election of Judge Joseph H. Kibbey, former territorial governor, and now Republican candidate for United States Senator.

Colonel Roosevelt is to leave early tomorrow for Albuquerque, N. M.

Depicting Mexico as a starving anarchic, typhus-ridden and bankrupt nation, Colonel Roosevelt asserted that the policy of President Wilson was responsible for these conditions.

"No indictment by me of Mr. Wilson's policy could be as strong as that furnished by himself," Colonel Roosevelt said. "He has sinned heavily against Mexico. He has sinned against humanity. He has sinned most heavily against the United States.

On Same Basis

"Thanks to Mr. Wilson," he continued, "the Mexican bandits regard Americans and the Chinese as equally safe to murder."

The address in part follows:

"What has happened to our people in Mexico and here along the border, offers the clearest possible illustration of what happens to any nation whose government behaves with the vascillation and timidity shown by Mr. Wilson in our foreign affairs wherever he has had to deal with any foe of whom he was in the slightest degree afraid.

"In Mexico when the revolution gathered headway, there were many foreigners. There were English, Germans, Japanese and French. There were also Americans, Spaniards and Chinese. Mexico was afraid of and respected Germany, England, Japan and France. She neither feared nor respected the United States or China, and she did not believe that Spain at the moment could act against her. In consequence it appears that during these disturbances, as far as can be gathered, there has not been one German killed in Mexico, and only one Englishman and two Frenchmen. I cannot find that any Japanese were killed. The minute the Frenchmen were killed, the French government served such summary notice on Mexico that it has been exceedingly careful not to kill any others. When the Englishman, Benton was killed, not merely did England flame up, but it is actually true that far more interest was excited in this country than was shown over all of our own men, women and children who were killed in Mexico. There have been no further outrages on the lives of British subjects.

Respect for Power

The Germans are not only safe, but at Tampico, for instance, enjoy special privileges. The Japanese enjoy the same consideration. But meanwhile, according to the best information at our disposal, the Mexicans have killed over three hundred Chinese, over five hundred Americans, and at least a couple hundred of Spaniards. The Mexicans class the Germans and English as belonging to nations able to protect the lives of their citizens; whereas, thanks to Mr. Wilson they regard the Americans and the Chinese as equally safe to murder, outrage and plunder.

"Thanks to President Wilson and the professional pacificists it is safe for Mexican bandits to murder Americans and Chinese, and to take their property, and the murderers and bandits are encouraged by the acts and utterances of the President of the United States and his authorized representatives. Remember also that these bandits are the worst foes of the decent citizens of Mexico, and that these honest and law-abiding Mexicans have been the people most damaged by President Wilson's policy of tame submission to infamy. What President Wilson's motives are, it is hard to guess. As reported in the press, not a few of Mr. Wilson's own supporters take the round that he acts in this manner because he is influenced by downright fear. On August 3, last, it was announced in the press that Mr. Frank B. Voorman, Democratic national committeeman of Colorado, stated in Denver that President Wilson had wisely avoided war with Mexico because there are 400,000 Japanese soldiers in Mexico, and because both Germany and Japan are planning to overthrow the Monroe doctrine, and therefore, war with Mexico would mean war with both these countries. Mr. Vrooman's premises are unsound. There is slight reason to believe that there are as many as 4,000 Japanese of military age in Mexico. But his statement, if correctly reported (and it has not been contradicted) is a frank admission and assertion of his belief, the belief of one of President Wilson's close political admirers and supporters that President Wilson is afraid to interfere in Mexico, because he is afraid lest Germany and Japan stop us when we try to exact atonement for the murder of American citizens and the destruction of American property.

Germany's Interest

"Recently Vice-President Marshall is reported in the press as having said that for us to take action in Mexico (in defense of the lives and property of our people) would be 'to make war on Berlin', and that therefor we must not act against Mexico. I have seen no denial of this statement. In other words, these champions of Mr. Wilson justify his conduct—conduct otherwise utterly inexplicable—on the ground that he is afraid to protect American life in Mexico, lest he thereby offend great old world powers. Why, if this statement is true, it is itself the bitterest indictment of Mr. Wilson's policy, and proves his abandonment of the Monroe doctrine. His own friends thus announce that he tamely acquiesced in the murder of American men, and the outrage of American women by Mexican bandits for fear that he should offend Japan and Germany. For the three and a half years of his term of office he has kept us in a condition of such military and naval impotence that we dare not assert even such elementary rights as that American citizens shall be secure in life and property not merely in a foreign land, but even within our own borders—for remember, that scores of

HOW WILL MILLER'S ESTATE RAISE EIGHT MILLIONS IN TAXES?

Must Lands Be Sold to Satisfy Federal and State Inheritance Levies?—U. S. Comes First

Estimated value of Henry Miller estate, $40,000,000.

New federal graduated estate tax (10 per cent), $4,000,000.

California state inheritance tax (10 per cent) on balance $36,000,000 amounting to $3,600,000.

Clear loss to the state of California through the operation of the new federal estate tax, $400,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—The new federal graduated estate tax which went into effect September 9 last, will place a first lien upon the $40,000,000 estate of the late Henry Miller whose property included 700,000 acres, or 1043 square miles of land in California.

This tax is to be distinguished from the state inheritance tax in that it is assessed and levied against the estate before distribution, rather than against the shares of the heirs and legatees.

It is estimated that the federal tax against the Miller estate will amount to approximately $4,000,000. This sum having been taken out of the $40,000,000 estate, leaves $36,000,000 upon which the state inheritance tax of 10 per cent will be levied.

The state therefore, will get $3,600,000. Without the operation of the federal tax law, the state would have received $4,000,000. By the operation of the federal law, the state therefore loses, in this instance, $400,000.

Attorney Edward J. Treadwell of the law department of the Miller & Lux estate declined today to discuss the situation. No word of proposed action of the federal authorities to collect the tax, he said, had been received. He added, however, that such action was expected.

Ray Benjamin, deputy attorney general, stated that his office was concerned only in the collection of the inheritance tax, and had not taken under consideration the levying of the federal tax.

Collector of internal revenue Joseph J. Scott, said that the new federal estate tax law merely would take its regular course; that no action had been started by his department and no advice sought from Washington in connection with the Miller estate, as the law was clear, and not to be misunderstood.

There had been provided in the law, he said, no special machinery for the collection of the federal tax. If it became necessary, he added, the international revenue department had considerable powers which it could execute, and finally, the authority of seizure and sale. Field officers, he said, probably would be employed in appraising work.

It was not to be presumed, he said that drastic measures would be necessary or that the executors of any estate would be of a mind to disregard the provisions of the new law.

The federal tax must be paid within one year after the death of the decedent. The state inheritance tax must be paid within eighteen months after the death of the decedent.

Attorney Treadwell and others connected with the Miller & Lux estate offices would not discuss of the raising of $7,600,000 taxes.

Must Sell Lands

How this immense sum can be secured is a serious question, to be solved only, it is claimed, by extensive sales of the Miller lands throughout the state.

Within thirty days after qualifying, or after coming into possession of any property of the decedent, the executor or administrator must give written notice to the collector of internal revenue in all cases where the gross estate exceeds $60,000.

The executor or administrator must pay the tax, which is due one year from the date of the decedent's death. If the tax is paid in advance of this date, there may be deducted a discount at the rate of 5 per cent per annum for the period between the payment of the tax and the due date.

If the tax is not paid within 30 days after it is due, interest at the rate of 10 per cent per annum will be added, running from the date of decedent's death; provided, that when the delay in payment is due to unavoidable litigation, interest at the rate of 6 per cent will be added, running from the date until the cause of the delay is removed, and thereafter at the rate of 10 per cent per annum until the tax is paid.

The act prescribes as a penalty for knowingly making any false statement or return in connection with the estate tax a fine of not exceeding $5000 or imprisonment for not exceeding one year, or both.

ADMITS KILLING HIS WIFE AND STEPSON; IS ARRESTED

Bodies While Yet Living, Were Thrown on Fire and Destroyed

PROPERTY DISPUTE

Barrett, Wealthy Resident of Santa Monica, Suspected by Neighbors

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21—Arrested early tonight on complaint of the district attorney, Benton L. Barrett, aged 64, and a man of wealth, was charged with the murder of his wife and stepson at Santa Monica last Wednesday. Before his victims were dead, the police say, Barrett cremated their bodies.

Barrett walked into the office of his attorney, Lewis D. Collins, late this afternoon and, according to his counsel, confessed to the double murder. Mr. Collins at once communicated with the district attorney and at the latter's request took Barrett to the court house.

After hearing the aged man's story, the district attorney issued the complaint on which Barrett was lodged in the county jail.

Barrett came here several years ago from Circleville, Ind. Mrs. Barrett before her marriage was a widow, Mrs. Irene L. Rodgers of Mount Aetna, Ind.

Says Woman Began It.

The district attorney and Mr. Collins alleged that Barrett admitted to them that on last Wednesday while he was burning brush, Mrs. Barrett attacked him with a butcher knife and when he defended himself, her son came to his mother's assistance with an ax handle. Barrett says, according to his alleged confession:

"I knocked my wife down with my fist and then hit the boy with a board I found lying on the ground. I was so incensed I did not know what I was doing. Then I picked up the knife and stabbed her and before she was dead I threw her body into the flames. The boy was unconscious and I threw his body on the fire. They did not burn quickly enough so I gathered some railroad ties and after their bodies were consumed, I buried the ashes on the rear of the lawn."

Miss Lille La Frayne, a neighbor and friend of the family, missed Mrs. Barrett and upon inquiry learned from Barrett that his wife and her son Raymond, aged 17, had left the city. The actions of the aged man aroused her suspicions and expressing her fears to the police of Santa Monica, they began an investigation of the house and Barrett came to town late today to consult his attorney.

Some Bones Found.

Following the confession, the district attorney sent two detectives to Santa Monica and in the place where Barrett is alleged to have concealed the ashes they recovered two fragments of bone and a dozen teeth.

Recently Mrs. Barrett figured in a sensational suit in which she alleged she had been compelled to sign over title to property amounting to $25,000. Her action was to recover this amount. The case has not yet been tried. Following the filing of her suit, Barrett announced that he would institute suit for divorce.

Mrs. Barrett alleged in her suit to recover the value of the property she had deeded away, there was a preconceived plot to coerce and compromise her. In her affidavit she alleged she was summoned to a hotel to meet a business man with his attorney to deed over the property in which she was interested. While there and after she had signed the deed, she was confronted by detectives whom she charged were in her husband's employ.

RAILROAD RATE CASES RE-OPENED

Hearing in San Francisco Has Been Set for December 4

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The so-called transcontinental rate case, involving rates on a vast traffic in commodities between the Pacific Coast and the east, was ordered reopened today by the interstate commerce commision, it was announced late today.

The commission assigned hearings on proposed rates at Chicago, November 20; Salt Lake City, November 28; San Francisco, December 4; Portland, Ore., December 11, and Spokane, December 14.

The hearings will be continued by Henry Thurtell as examiner and attorney of the commission.

The case, one of the most notable on the commission's docket, has involved in its various angles many decisions in the past years and grows out of the old so-called Spokane case. The main issue involved is the long and short haul provisions of the interstate commerce law. Traffic in both directions between the two coasts is affected, including most commodities, but not the big traffic in citrus fruits, which moves under blanket rate arrangement.

Coast Products Involved

The commission's decision directs that the fourth section applications (for exception from the long and short haul clause requirements) respecting rates on commodities from Eastern territories to Pacific Coast terminal and intermediate points and the applications respecting rates on barley, beans, canned goods, dried fruits and wine from California ports by rail and water through Galveston to Atlantic seaboard points, be re-opened for further hearing respecting changed conditions that are alleged to justify other and different orders than those already entered by the commission.

GENERALLY FAIR AND TEMPERATURE NEAR THE NORMAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Weather predictions for the week beginning Sunday issued by the weather bureau today are: Pacific states—Generally fair, with temperatures near seasonal normal. There is some probability of local rains on the north coast by the middle of the week.

VILLA IS NOW AT BUSTILLOS RANCH, BATTLE POSSIBLE

FIELD HEADQUARTERS, PUNITIVE EXPEDITION IN MEXICO, Oct. 19—(By wireless to Columbus, N. M., Oct. 21)—Villa, with one thousand men, half of them unarmed, is at Bustillos ranch, about 140 miles from El Valle, according to a report given out tonight at field headquarters. The statement is qualified with the annotation that "uniformed" Carranza forces are known to be thereabouts and if bandits are at Bustillos a fight is believed likely.

CAR SHORTAGE IS BAD AND WILL BE WORSE NOVEMBER

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Railroads of the United States are suffering from the greatest shortage of cars ever experienced at this time of the year, according to figures made public here. On September 30 there was a net shortage of 61,030 cars. This compares with a surplus of 131,027 cars on October 1, 1914 and of 78,299 on the corresponding date last year.

The greatest shortage is in box cars, totalling 33,016, while coal and gondola cars total 19,872. The greatest shortage of box cars is in the granger states.

Railway men say the high point of the shortage will be reached next month.

WILSON IS LEADING HUGHES IN POLL OF TWENTY-ONE STATES

Even Break in Change of Affiliations; Hughes Has Lead in Straw Vote in Fresno County

Reports from 21 states, on a poll being taken by the Fresno Republican and associated newspapers, shows Woodrow Wilson leading Charles Evans Hughes in popular vote by a little more than 13,000. Of a total of 99,560 votes reported last night, Wilson had 55,877 and Hughes had 42,525. Allan L. Benson, Socialist candidate for president received 1,158 votes.

The vote by states follows:

	Hughes	Wilson
California	1,145	972
Connecticut	63	93
Colorado	623	689
Delaware	77	990
Illinois	192	110
Indiana	2,271	1,796
Kentucky	1,385	2,077
Maine	84	52
Maryland	527	662
Massachusetts	874	644
Minnesota	6	16
Missouri	7	79
New Hampshire	134	138
New Jersey	519	317
New York	6,118	8,061
Ohio	26,656	37,325
Pennsylvania	618	524
Rhode Island	165	92
West Virginia	806	1,192
Wisconsin	36	18
Wyoming	114	84

Wilson is leading in 12 of the 21 states.

Hughes is leading in San Francisco Los Angeles and in Fresno county where polls have been taken.

Fresno County Results

In Fresno county, out of a total of more than 150 cards returned, the vote last night stood Hughes 79, Wilson 67, Benson 9. The cards showed 43 Roosevelt supporters in 1912 for Hughes and 6 for Wilson. It also showed 13 former Wilson supporters now for Hughes.

In the switch of votes, Hughes has slightly the best of the count thus far in this county. Hughes has secured 13 former Wilson votes while Wilson has secured but 6 former Roosevelt votes and but 2 former Taft votes.

A segregation of the county vote shows the following results:

Roosevelt to Hughes, 43; Wilson to Hughes, 13; Taft to Hughes, 12; Debs to Hughes, 1; Wilson-Wilson, 44; Roosevelt to Wilson, 6; Taft to Wilson, 2; Debs to Wilson, 2; first voters, Hughes 10, Wilson 13. On the Socialist side the following results are shown: Debs-Benson, 4; Roosevelt to Benson, 2; Wilson to Benson, 1; first voters, Benson 2.

Analysis of Vote

In the country at large Wilson and Hughes have about an even break in the transfer of support. The result to date shows that 1,219 former Taft supporters and 2,795 former Roosevelt supporters, or a total of 4,014 have transferred their support to President Wilson. On the other hand, 4,120 voters who supported Wilson in 1912 are now for Hughes.

The result also shows that about two thirds of the Roosevelt vote in 1912 is for Hughes. The count gives 5,542 former Roosevelt voters for Hughes and 2,795 for Wilson.

In taking a poll of the voters of the country, the newspapers are endeavoring to get the sentiment of only a small per cent of the voters, believing however that this will give a general idea of feeling of the voters. In some cities, however, a large per cent of the voting population has been polled. In Columbus Ohio, a total of 41,663 have expressed their position. Wilson has a lead there of about 9,000. In Cincinnati, 21,490 voters have been polled, Wilson having a lead of about 1,800. In Buffalo N. Y., 10,981 voters have been polled and there Wilson has a lead of about 1,500.

System of Polling

The system generally adopted by the newspapers in getting these votes is to select a certain number from each precinct, getting the names by alphabetical arrangement. For an example in one precinct voters whose names begin with "a" are taken. In another those whose names begin with "b" and so on through the alphabet. In Fresno county it is necessary to go through the alphabet about eight times.

Day In War Area

Between the Ancre river and the Pozieres-Bapaume road on the Somme front. British troops, after checking an offense by the forces of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, attacked successfully and pushed forward from 300 to 500 yards on a front of 5,000 yards. The advance was made between Le Sars and the Schwaben redoubt, which was the scene of the earlier attack by the Germans. General Haig's men captured the Stuff and Regina trenches, advanced posts north and northeast of the Schwaben redoubt, and several hundred prisoners.

The Germans also attacked strongly the French positions at Sailly-Saillesel on the Bapaume-Peronne road, as well as positions between Biaches and La Maisonette, near Peronne. The attackers were repulsed generally but Paris admits they gained a footing north of Blaise wood. The French succeeded in an attack further south and gained possession of a wood north of Chaulnes.

Striking the Russian and Rumanian line in Dobrudja, Field Marshal von Mackensen has renewed successfully the offensive toward the Constanza-Tchernavoda railroad. Attacking along the forty-mile front, the forces of the Central Powers have made good progress almost everywhere.

On the Danube, troops of the Central Powers have forced their way into the Entente positions south of Rachova. Along the Black Sea on the other end of the line Tusla was captured the several heights farther inland were conquered. Several hundred Rumanians and 3,000 Russians were taken prisoner, Berlin records.

The Rumanians have been pressed back on their center and left wing, Bucharest admits. Petrograd says the Teutonic attack resulted in the loss of Kogardja. Later attacks were repulsed.

In southern Serbia, the Serbians continue to advance. The Serbs are now four miles north of Brod.

Fighting continues along the Transylvania-Rumanian border, with successes for both the Rumanians and the Teutons. The Rumanians have taken several important positions along the front in addition to more than 600 prisoners. In the Buzeu valley, south of Kronstadt, however, Bucharest admits, the Rumanians have been compelled to withdraw.

Violent encounters have taken place on the Somme front in France, in Transylvania, in Volhynia, and in the Trentino region, but with little damage in the position of the contending armies.

A German cruiser of the Kolberg class was torpedoed by a British submarine in the North Sea last Thursday. The cruiser remained afloat, although apparently severely damaged.

JOHNSON FINISHES VALLEY CAMPAIGN

Packed Hall Greets Governor in Bakersfield; Big Majority Certain

(Special to the Republican.)

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 21.—Completing a campaign tour down the San Joaquin Valley that for enthusiasm and overflow houses has never been exceeded by any candidate who ever sought office in this state, and which has eclipsed even the phenomenal record made by him in his 1914 gubernatorial race, Governor Hiram W. Johnson tonight addressed a packed hall, wildly cheering him as he spoke not only in behalf of his own candidacy for the United States senatorship, but also for Charles Evans Hughes for President.

For two weeks the governor has had a succession of demonstrations similar to the one greeting him here this evening. It has been one continuous ovation for the candidate, whose march to the United States Senate is now all but undisputed. Predictions in the valley are that the governor's majority cannot fall below 200,000, and many do not hesitate to put it much higher.

A. W. Mason, chairman of the Republican county committee, had charge of today's meetings in Kern county. After luncheon at Bakersfield, the candidate made a hundred-mile auto drive over the desert to the oil fields for a speech at Taft, where nearly a thousand citizens heard him. Accompanying him were Mason, Superior Judges Milton Farmer and Pears and a half a dozen others.

Tonight Mason called the meeting to order, and Judge Farmer presided, lauding the governor as the nation's rising leader in legislation for humanity and social justice.

BELIEVE SHIFLETT ROBBED, THROWN ON TRACKS

Details of Tragedy Given By Arthur Drew in Letter Home

Men Still Uninformed When They Will Leave Nogales

A detailed story of the death of George K. Shiflett of Company K, at Nogales, Arizona, is given by Corporal Arthur H. Drew of the same company in a letter to his father, A. M. Drew of Fresno, received here yestreday. It is the belief of Shiflett's friends, says Arthur Drew, that Shiflett was beaten into insensibility and robbed and that his body was then thrown on the railroad tracks. He was run over by a train.

Although the Second California Infantry has been ordered back to California, Drew said, that up to October 18 no word had been received as to when the start would be made. His letter follows:

October 18, 1916.

Dear Father:—

I telegraphed you last evening in regard to the finding of the jury in the George K. Shiflett inquest, and will now report more in detail so that you may inform his family. I make this report on behalf of Captain Fowler, as well as myself.

About 10 p. m. of October 13, 1916, Private Fry of Company "L" of the Seventh California Infantry, was riding on the rear step of a jitney but on his returned from Nogales to camp. The county road parallels the railroad most of the way. In the glare of the headlight of an approaching train, Fry saw a body lying on the tracks between the rails. He jumped from the bus, followed by two companions, but they were unable to reach the body before the train struck it.

Find Mutilated Body

After the train passed, they discovered the badly mutilated body of a soldier, and immediately hurried to camp, about a half mile distant, and informed Lieutenant Dipenbrook of the Second California Hospital Company who, with an assistant, hurried at once to the scene. They arrived about twenty minutes after the body was discovered. It was still warm, and blood was oozing from some of the wounds. In their opinion, George was killed by the train. They stayed with the body until it was removed to the morgue. Captain Fowler was also on the scene shortly after the body was discovered. He made a thorough examination of the clothing of the deceased and of the track nearby. With the exception of some tobacco, no personal effects of the deceased were found.

Holes Made by Bones

On the left thigh and right shoulder were wounds of the appearance of bullet-holes, but the surgeon pronounced them as punctures made by broken bones. Captain Fowler, however, not being satisfied with this opinion, had our own major doctor, Major Hanna and his assistants, perform another and more complete autopsy. These doctors gave the same opinion in regard to the suspicious wounds. The inquest was then continued from Saturday to Monday at 10 a. m. About 8 a. m. Monday I received your telegram requesting me to make an investigation.

At 9 o'clock on the same morning funeral services were held in front of brigade headquarters. The entire regiment turned out, including the officers, and our band. The services were everything a soldier could ask for. As the band played "In Memoriam" and again when the bugle sounded taps over the body, many eyes were moistened, especially in Companies "C" and "K," who knew him so well.

Immediately after the services, Captain Fowler and myself went to Nogales to attend the inquest. In talking with the district attorney, I found that the civil authorities had made no investigation of the tragedy, and he himself knew very little. I then asked him to continue the hearing until 10 a. m. of Tuesday, which he did, and insisted that I conduct the inquiry.

Run Down All Clues

We got busy at once, and with the aid of the militia police, who had been doing considerable work on the case, we ran down every possible clue obtainable. We traced his movements through the day and up to 9 o'clock in the evening of that most unfortunate Friday the 13th. From 6 until 9 that evening he had been in the company of friends at a little Mexican eating place near the railroad, about a mile from the place where his body was found. Two men from our own company were with him at this place until about 8 o'clock. He disappeared from there about 9, and we have been unable to find trace of his movements from then on. Those who were with him saw him have a draft or check for $25 on a Selma bank, a registered letter and a pocketbook. No trace of these personal effects has so far been found. For this reason, we are inclined to believe that he was struck on the head while on his way back to camp, robbed and left lying on the track in an unconscious condition.

We found that he had previously cashed a postal money order for $15 in a Nogales store.

Three Members Arrested

Three members of the Twelfth Infantry were arrested by the military police that same evening for creating a disturbance in a house of prostitution. These men all had spots of blood on their clothing, and one had a .45 automatic strapped under his arm inside his shirt. We have traced their movements, but have in no way been able to connect them up with George's death.

Word has been left at all the banks to notify the sheriff at once, in case the draft is presented for payment. I just received a telegram from W. E. Shiflett in regard to this draft, but am not replying, as Major Kelley answered a similar telegram last evening. The receipt for the registered letter, which contained the draft, was signed by our regimental mail orderly, and this accounts for George not having signed it.

I do not believe that it will avail any of Shiflett's family anything to come here and investigate. In this land of manana, the civil authorities will do nothing, and the military police and ourselves are doing everything possible. General Wankowski, Colonel Bond, Major Kelley and Captain Fowler are all deeply interested in the matter.

Shiflett Well Known

George was a man well known and well liked by all who knew him. He had many friends, and no enemies. Captain Fowler speaks of him as a model soldier. For the past two months he had been a member of my squad and an intimate friend. He was considered one of the best men in this company. Always a ready, willing and cheerful worker, he was one of the few who would volunteer his services when there was any hard work to be performed. In our recent hike to Fort Huachuca, his ready remarks of real humor changed many a care-worn frown to a smile and served to shorten our day's march. He was a man loved by every member of his company, and his vacant place in the ranks will be hard to fill.

Now, about our coming home—you in Fresno are perhaps interested. Likewise are we, and I wish I could inform you of the date of our arrival in Fresno. We have been leaving Nogales for some time now, but seem to have a "— of a time" getting started.

On the morning of October 7 we broke camp in Garden Canyon and hiked to Fort Huachuca, seven miles distant. There we pitched tents and prepared to stay for the night. At 4:30 that evening we held regimental parade and directly after were informed that, as soon as mess was over, we must again break camp and hurry on our way to Nogales to entrain for California, and that the maneuvers we were to have on our way back were called off. This news called for a big demonstration from a happy bunch. The rain and hail that drenched us before we started could not dampen our spirits, and we marched until 1 a. m. We broke all records for this hike, and would have done better than that had we not taken a wrong road and gone some ten miles out of the way, and had not the horses, which the officers were riding, became so tired that we were compelled to stop while they rested.

No Date for Start Home

Our hurry was apparently all for naught. For eight days we have remained in camp, and as yet nobody seems to know when we will start. Taking my one hundredth guess at it, I will say that we will leave here in a week or ten days for Los Angeles, where we will be mustered out. We will probably be in Los Angeles from ten days to three weeks.

At this moment the Seventh California Infantry is entraining just below camp. Although we were the first of the California Brigade to reach the border, for some reason we are not so fortunate on the return passage. The camps of the Fifth and Seventh regiments, which have been on both sides of us, are now deserted. General Wankowski is leaving tonight with the Seventh.

We are now waiting anxiously for our orders to entrain, and it can't come too soon.

Love to all. ARTHUR.

CIVIC CENTER LEAGUE ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Plan to Continue Rural Activities As in Past Years

The Civic Center League of Central California, consisting of representatives from the various civic centers that have been organized in rural school districts during the past two years by the Fresno state normal, gathered for the first meeting of the year yesterday in the normal school, to perfect organization and discuss plans for the coming year. The election of officers and discussion of plans for the year occupied the representatives.

Activities will be continued this year much along the same lines as before. Several centers have already held meetings and others are planned to take place soon. Several new civic center organizations are to be formed in the near future. There are already some 30 active organizations in various parts of the valley. The state normal school co-operates with the rural residents by furnishing speakers, motion pictures and other entertainment.

Officers of the league elected yesterday are as follows: Miss Florence M. Gordon, Kerman high school, president; F. R. Street, Wolters school, first vice president; F. M. Thompson, second vice president; W. B. Givens, Fresno State normal school, secretary; A. E. Balch, deputy county superintendent of schools, treasurer.

A Callot model afternoon costume, in a beautiful shade of sapphire—skirt part, panels and cuffs trimmed with real beaver. The materials in this elaborate affair are pan velvet and georgette crepe; the front and back panel are bordered with wide strips of black velvet, hand embroidered in metallic effect. It is size 40. Original price $125.00. Reduced to $79.50

Another wonderful creation, a "Sphinx" costume, made of black silk net—skirt part in several tiers, showing spangled trimmings underneath; the whole bodice is made of a solid mass of those spangles, gunmetal shade, producing a most fascinating effect in the evening. It is size 40. Original price $137.50. Reduced to $87.50

Then we come to an evening gown—a copy of a "De Lange" model. Original price $150.00, at $89.50

The material is a gorgeous white satin with beautiful velvet flowers, brocaded on same—the whole bodice is of folded taffeta in several shades to match the flowers. Over the hip are the wide drapes—lined in violet. Size of this garment is 38.

Truly gorgeous is this evening gown—a Georgette creation—made of the palest shell pink silk net—the bodice, wide front and back panels of opalescent spangles—the vestee skirt and drop skirt silver tinsel embroidered—fur trimming around skirt. This gown, size 38. Reduced from $145 to $92.75

An exclusive model—exact copy of a Docuillet creation—bewitchingly beautiful—in ultramarine silk net. Bodice of blue spangles and Oriental motifs.

The wide panel in front of blue spangles—with dainty designs of glass beads running through. The drape of silk net is border of spangles and Oriental motifs alternating. This model — in size 38—was priced originally $117.50, and reduced to... $75.00

Another afternoon gown for older people—is a heavy silk net—richly draped over navy satin—bodice of velvet, satin, lace and silver embroidered lace. Size 40—original price $69.50, at $49.75

Again—for the older ladies—is a beautiful black silk net and satin combination. Size 40 — original price $87.50 for $64.50

Very elaborate and rich—bodice trimmed with ornaments and bars of rhinestones.

A $95.00 evening dress for $67.50. Size 38. Made of rose colored silk net over pink satin—a very elaborate garment (copy of a Weeks model). Entire bodice and part of drapes trimmed with band of opalescent beads—a garland of morning glories made of feathers adorns the skirt.

The most perfect, most charming garment for a dainty debutante is an illusion of a shell pink satin. Skirt is hooped—with long and short panels of pink satin alternating—and 15 ruffles of silk net between them. The bodice is trimmed with dainty design of leaves. Shoulder and back trimmed with white silk net cape. The bodice at back is covered with a large butterfly of ribbons and tinsel. It is size 18. Reduced from $65.00 to $47.50

WILL ASK HENEY TO SPEAK HERE

Democrats Want S. F. Graft Prosecutor to Address Auditorium Crowd

The members of the Fresno county Democratic Central committee authorized Chairman Russell Uhler at a meeting held in headquarters yesterday afternoon to invite Francis J. Heney, former Progressive, to Fresno to speak in the interest of President Wilson's re-election. Several committeemen expressed regret that Bainbridge Colby was unable to keep his date in Fresno last Wednesday night and urged that Heney ought to be called upon to tell his friends why he is supporting Wilson for a second term. The probability of bringing Dudley Field Malone to Fresno was discussed, but definite action was deferred.

It was decided that each member of the committee would arrange to get reports of election returns and send them to headquarters on November 7. George L. Aynesworth, chairman of the speakers committee, reported that from one to two meetings in every community surrounding Fresno would be held every night during the week.

The names of those present at the meeting are: Russell Uhler, chairman, J. Ed. Hughes, H. C. Harvey, John Rorden, Phil B. Thornton, Henry Hawson, J. R. Gould, Dan Dismukes, Thomas F. Martin, I. W. Nielsen, E. F. Fitzgerald, W. L. Orsburn, E. E. Slater, J. M. Danelis, C. M. Ozias, Roy Traber, H. C. Harvey, H. F. Winnes, J. P. Neil, George L. Aynesworth, C. N. Thorpe, H. H. MANY WOMEN ATTEND WILSON LEAGUE MEET

Hear Wm. Glass Speak on National Political Issues of Day

William Glass, business manager of the Republican, spoke on the "Work of President Wilson for America" at a meeting of the All Parties Woodrow Wilson League at the Fresno Hotel yesterday afternoon. He went into detail on a number of the bills passed during the last three years, declaring that the present administration has passed more good laws than any four previous administrations since 1884. Mrs. Martha Hudson White and Miss Francis Dean made short talks on "Why the Women Vote Should Go to Wilson."

Mrs. S. L. Wiley, chairman, outline plans before the meeting for organizing leagues in towns throughout the San Joaquin valley. She explained that before two weeks, there will be a working league for Wilson in every community in central California. Miss Breeze Huffman, secretary, reported that the Fresno league now has a membership of one hundred and sixty-five.

The league will probably hold another meeting at the Hotel Fresno next Saturday afternoon.

THROWER OF DISHES IS DIVORCED BY WIFE

Selma Woman Is Granted Decree After Showing Before Court

Claiming that her husband threw dishes at her, struck her with his fists and abused her with words and violent acts in the presence of their children, Mrs. Myrtle Day of Selma convinced Judge H. Z. Austin by her testimony that she was entitled to an interlocutory decree of divorce yesterday from Harry Day.

Mrs. Day said that for more than two years her husband, without provocation on her part, was cruel and abusive, and that he frequently came home and despoiled the dinner prepared for him by hurling the dishes and their contents about the house, and, on some occasions, at her.

An order was made by the court granting Mrs. Day $50 a month alimony and the custody of the two minor children. The Days married February 9, 1912.

DEMOCRATS PLANNING RALLY FOR PATTON

Will Turn Out Strong to Hear Candidate and Senator Phelan

The Fresno County Democratic Central Committee is planning a big rally for George S. Patton, Democratic nominee for the United States senate, and James D. Phelan, senator, at the Fresno Municipal Auditorium next Thursday night, October 26. Phelan and Patton have been touring the state together and will probably visit several towns in the valley following the Fresno meeting.

Russell Uhler, chairman of the committee, announced yesterday that Henry Hawson, candidate for the assembly, will preside as chairman of the meeting. A special reception committee for the candidate and senator will be named during the next two or three days.

'KEPT US OUT OF WAR'

Has Wilson "kept us out of war"?

Certainly not in Mexico. For we are at this moment at war, if not "with" Mexico, at least "in" Mexico. It is, to be sure, not a very useful or a very creditable war. But it is at least not peace. And if it were to be said in its palliation that it is "such a little one," it may be demonstrated that it is a little one of the sort which is very likely to grow into a great one in the future. When the European war is over, the Mexican question will have to be settled by somebody. If it is settled by the Mexicans in a spirit of hatred toward us, they will invite an alliance with either England or Germany, across the Atlantic, or with Japan across the Pacific. If it is settled from the outside by England, Germany or Japan, such an alliance will be forced on Mexico. Unless we settle it, then it will be settled in one or the other of these two ways. If settled in either of them, the Monroe doctrine is gone forever and we are irrevocably a party to the next great European war; unless, perchance, a European war should break out on this continent first and involve us even more seriously.

So we are not out of war with Mexico, and we have not dared finish the war we have in the only way that could have prevented its leading to the danger of a greater war to come.

If we have "kept out of war" in Europe, how eminent an achievement is that as compared, for instance, with the skill and firmness which have kept Sweden, Holland and Switzerland out of the war at their very borders? These three nations combined are not as big as California. Each of them has dared protest and resist invasions of their rights to which we have supinely submitted. Sweden has dared seize English mails when England seized Swedish mails, and to patrol the seas against marauding craft from both England and Germany. Holland has dared resist against Germany what we have not dared suppress against Mexico. Little Switzerland has put into the field a bigger and better army than we have even tried to get and has maintained a neutrality incomparably braver and firmer than ours. The rights we have partially and tardily obtained by waiting, watching and yielding, these nations have firmly, promptly and fully maintained. Their problem was infinitely more difficult than ours, and they have solved it incomparably better. Even the King of Greece, against the most complicated and difficult political situation in the world, managed to keep his country out of war until that war by superior force actually took physical possession, and he has managed to avoid formal participation even to this moment.

Compared to the achievements of these nations in keeping out of the war next door, our achievement in keeping out of the war across the sea is as nothing. It is scarcely more notable than the like achievement on the part of Argentina, Brazil and Chile, no one of whose presidents is now running for re-election upon the mere negative claim that he has not got his country into the European war.

AFTER WAR—WHAT?

The war may last six months or two years more, but it will not last five years. Some time within the next American presidential administration, peace will come. What then?

What but precisely the most critical decisions for the whole future of America?

After the war, the world must be remade. It will be remade on stern and ruthless facts. How much America will be listened to in that remaking will depend almost exclusively on whether America's voice is spoken by a man of phrases or a man of facts. As our fathers made the American constitution, the President, in foreign affairs, is the United States of America. Neither the people nor the people's representatives have any voice, and even the Senate has only a veto too tardy to be worth using. President Wilson is peculiarly a man of phrases. Mentally, he is so constituted that he takes them for facts. Charles E. Hughes is perhaps the intensest fanatic for facts in America. Whether America will be ignored or heard depends on which of these men we choose spokesman.

And after the war, the trade relations of America must be revolutionized. Europe has learned to mobilize not merely troops, but industry and commerce. New trade alliances and ententes will compete for the commercial supremacy of the world, and we will maintain ourselves or fail in that competition according as we learn or fail to learn to mobilize our industry also. To do that requires first the intrenchment of a protective tariff. The Democratic party is committed against that. It requires, second, a radical nationalism in our economic legislation. The Democratic party is opposed to that nationalism, and Woodrow Wilson is committed to the "new freedom" which is the negation of nationalism. And it will require, supremely, the recognition, and the constructive, not destructive or repressive, regulation of consolidation as a business force. The trusts must be nationalized, mobilized, and used not busted. Against all this, the Democratic party and its titular head are irrevocably committed. Whether we meet the new competition, or are crushed by it, depends on which of these parties we put in power.

Veritably and literally we are deciding the permanent fate of the nation.

And yet, in the "apathetic campaign" a lot of us think we are doing nothing but choosing which of two [illegible] gentlemen shall draw the salary of a certain much-coveted job.

STRAW VOTES

Straw votes are valuable or not, according to the way they are taken. Some of the returns from Eastern states, for instance, gathered by the newspapers associated with the Republican, and published this morning, are too incomplete or abnormal to be of much importance. There are, for instance, Democratic returns from portions of Pennsylvania known to be overwhelmingly Republican. The returns from New York State also are too scattered and fragmentary to be of importance in determining the only significant question which is whether the inevitable Republican majority up state will be greater than or less than the inevitable Democratic majority in the city of New York. Returns from Indiana are fairly widely scattered and seem to indicate that this pivotal state is going for Hughes. Returns from Ohio, on the other hand, much greater in numbers but concentrated almost entirely on cities, indicate, so far as they go, that Ohio will go for Wilson. How far this will be counteracted by the farmer vote, the returns give no indication. Most of the other states reported fully enough to be useful are not significant, either because the result in them was known already or because their vote in the electoral college could in no case be decisive.

Figures in California, however, are capable of more intelligent analysis, because we know how they were taken and what the local conditions in the various sections are. These figures, gathered through these particular newspaper sources, as well as other figures gathered from other sources even more painstaking, show that California is already definitely safe for Hughes. Other unpublished polls, taken in various ways, show most of them a slight advantage for Hughes, and some of them a slight advantage for Wilson, but none of them any indication that Wilson at the very worst could carry San Francisco by more than an insignificant majority. All the probabilities are that Hughes will have a definite majority in San Francisco, which is conceded to be the weakest spot in California, from the Hughes standpoint. When the surrounding counties of Alameda, San Mateo and Marin are included, the metropolitan area of San Francisco will go very strongly for Hughes.

Returns of this particular poll of Los Angeles show Hughes 573, Wilson 440, with practically three-fourths of the former Roosevelt vote going to Hughes. Other even more careful polls, taken by one of the most experienced and hitherto the most reliable source in Los Angeles, show an almost uniform result, as the votes come in day by day, of two to one for Hughes. These polls, it would be understood, are taken in a most impartial possible way, by selecting names by an arbitrary alphabetical system from the various precincts and mailing return postal cards to them.

The general returns from the interior of California also show Hughes by a safe but not overwhelming majority, with the former Roosevelt vote going to Hughes by almost three to one. Fresno county shows a very decided majority for Hughes.

Taking these results, together with a canvass of very careful estimates from other sources by other methods, the indications of a decisive victory for Hughes in California are practically conclusive. Indeed, the New York Herald's poll shows California going for Hughes by a larger majority than any other state in the United States. This result, however, necessarily indicates that the poll must have been somehow one-sided.

The most conservative estimate of the Hughes majority in Southern California is 50,000. Actual computations, in fact, on the most careful canvass yet made in Los Angeles indicates a [illegible] majority in Los Angeles county alone. To discount these figures by merely claiming the 50,000 for the whole of Southern California is therefore the ultimate extreme of conservatism and may be taken as a maximum. In Northern California information is not yet sufficiently complete to base an estimate with quite the same exactness, and therefore an extremely cautious conservatism makes even greater discounts from the conclusion of such figures as are at hand. But even by this method it is impossible to squeeze the majority in Northern California below 25,000. To claim California for Hughes by 75,000 majority that vp?N2 emfwyp shrdlu is therefore so cautious an underestimate that no discounts for contingencies need to be reckoned with.

RADIATORS MADE ORNAMENTS

As a rule radiators will not be found to add to the appearance of the house interior, and for this reason professional interior decorators have long sought satisfactory means of making the radiators less obvious.

There are several ways of achieving this. One is to build the radiator into the wall or floor. The window seat is one of the most popular places of concealment for the radiator, especially where it is installed after the house is built; a neat grating can be bought to fit over the opening, and when enameled or otherwise treated to blend with the rest of the trim is a most inconspicuous and satisfactory covering. The radiator that stands against a light wall should be treated in silver or white. In case the walls are of dark tones, it will as a rule be found most satisfactory to treat the radiators dull black, although in certain cases the ordinary gilt bronze finish is good.

In the matter of radiators, as with lighting fixtures, much improvement can be made by the amateur decorator at home, if it is not feasible to have professional aid in the installation or renovation of the radiators. Where the long, low radiator has been installed it is sometimes practicable to build a seat along the top, covering it with cretonne or other decorative material and dropping a curtain before it. Except in extreme cases enough heat radiates for warmth.—Raymond Comstock in the Mother's Magazine.

AN EASY LESSON, BUT—

Teacher—Robert, how is it that you haven't your lesson? It couldn't have been so very hard to learn.

Robby—No, please teacher. It wasn't because it was so hard to learn; it was so easy I guess I forgot.—From the Boston Transcript.

Forty Years Ago Today

On Sunday evening H street was the scene of a war of words between Max Walsh and Mike Bass, which ended by the latter producing a revolver and firing at Walsh. The pistol was discharged in front of the Larquier House, and, although a number of persons were in the vicinity, no one was injured. Both parties to the affray were arrested on charges of assault and battery. We shudder to think what might have been the effect of a careless shot among a crowd of innocent people, and hope to hear no more of promiscuous shooting in the principal street of Fresno.

It is time for daughter to begin planning the arrangement of the sparking room for the winter. In the first place, it must be properly heated, otherwise he may wander away and warm himself at other firesides.

THE IRON WAR

Brazil's Large and Rich Deposits of Ore are Safeguarded From the Rapacity of the Vanquished Only by the Monroe Doctrine

(Copyright, 1916, by The National Editorial Service, Inc.)

The war in Europe has had conferred upon it names of all kinds, but probably the designation most fitting would be the Iron War. Not only have iron and its alloy, steel, been prime essentials to the waging of the struggle, but the question as to which nation shall possess certain iron ore deposits in that continent of conflict will be undoubtedly of greater moment than any transfer of mere areas.

The fundamental consideration is that on iron and its associate products depends the progress of all nations—in fact, the very independence of their existence. A merely cursory glance will show that in those nations which have grown in strength and prosperity, like the United States, Great Britain and Germany, the increase in the production of iron and steel has paralleled the advance in prosperity, while other nations, such as Italy, Spain and Portugal which have no considerable manufactures of iron and steel, have remained industrially torpid. Since the modern iron age began, every industrial and commercial development has demonstrated the continued increase in wealth, power and prestige of the iron producing countries and the corresponding decline of the non-producers of iron, until the majority of the latter countries have become neutrals that are altogether negligible.

A brief glance at the early military manoeuvres of Germany, in the fall of 1914, makes it apparent that she realized the overwhelming importance of iron. Her first blow aimed at control of the coal and iron deposits of Belgium and her next at the iron deposits of France located near the Alsace-Lorraine boundary. Occupation of those iron ore districts not only dealt France a serious blow by cutting off her supply of raw products for the manufacture of iron and steel but assured to Germany additional supplies which could come out of lands under her direct control.

Prior to the outbreak of the war, France had 3,300,000,000 tons of ore unmined as a reserve and was consuming that ore at the rate of 20,000,000 tons a year; which meant, if France did not increase her production, a supply adequate for more than 156 years. Germany, with a reserve unmined of 1,250,000,000 tons in Germany proper and 2,330,000,000 tons more in Alsace-Lorraine, consumed 30,000,000 tons annually. Her ore supply, therefore, was good for about 123 years at her previous rate of consumption.

Should Germany win the war and be able to retain her own deposits, the 270,000,000 ore tons in Luxemburg, and the 2,330,000,000 tons in Alsace-Lorraine, she will be well fixed for the future. If, in addition, she can withhold from France the French ore deposits near Alsace-Lorraine, now under German occupation, it must mean to France the loss of more than 90 per cent of her iron ore supply, and the gain by Germany of 3,300,000,000 ore tons—enough for 100 years' supply beyond the 125-year provision within her borders. That will constitute the industrial death of France and the dominance of all Europe by Germany.

If France and her allies win the war and take from Germany the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, it will mean to Germany the loss of 85 years' supply, leaving her only enough ore for the next 40 years and with the remaining ores located at such a distance removed from her greatest manufacturing plants—like that of Krupp at Essen—as to render those plants commercially inoperative under any conditions of world competition. Germany, as far back as the Franco-Prussian war, staked her all upon the retention of Alsace-Lorraine. Should Germany lose those important ore supplies, she cannot count for aid on Austria-Hungary, for the realms of Francis Joseph embrace only 235,000,000 reserve tons, which will last the present owners, at the 1914 rate of consumption, only 57 years, and would last Germany, at her rate, only nine years.

The so-called enormous deposits of Sweden and Norway amount to but 1,500,000,000 tons, controlled by the respective governments; it is doubtful whether the two Scandinavian countries, with their democratic principles, would permit the exhaustion of their greatest natural resources in aid of any other nation. Nor can Germany count on Spanish ores, for they are little over 700,000,000 tons, and Great Britain, although she herself has 1,300,000,000 tons of ore, is using more than 15,000,000 tons per year, which means exhaustion within 85 years if she does not receive imports. And ore can be delivered from Spain more cheaply to England than to Germany. In the event of German retention of the Northern French territory comprising the ore lands of France, it would be possible for France to draw on Spain; but all the ore she could get thence would be insufficient for the maintenance of her industries.

The indispensible terms of peace, therefore, must be the surrender to the victor of all Northern France, of Alsace-Lorraine, and probably of Luxemburg as well. The vanquished will have to look elsewhere for supplies of iron ore. One or the other party to the struggle must, in self-preservation, take to that recourse; and nothing can suffice except absolute sovereignty over the newly sought source of supply.

There remain in the world four great deposits of iron ore. They are those, first, of the United States, with a reserve of more than 3,000,000,000 tons of high grade ore, now being consumed at the rate of 50,000,000 tons per year—60 years' supply before this country must begin to draw upon its so-called potential reserves, all located and accessible, of 75,000,000,000 tons. Thus the United States is safe for nearly 1,000 years at its present rate of consumption. Second, there is Cuba, with 3,000,000,000 tons, owned and controlled absolutely by the iron and steel industry of the United States. Third, there is Newfoundland, a British colony, with more than 3,500,000,000 tons of reserve, much of the output being imported by the United States. Fourth, there are the ores of Central and South America, where most of the deposits are on the Pacific slope, in Mexico and Chile. Those in Mexico, by reason of revolutionary conditions, are at present unavailable for anyone. Those in Chile are controlled by an American steel company. Neither of the two deposits because of geographical location, is available for the nations of Europe.

But in South America there remain open for Europe the great deposits of very rich ore in Brazil, amounting to [illegible] tons, part of which is already controlled by English owners. One ton of the Brazilian ore yields as much iron as two tons of any ore in Great Britain or in Europe, with the exception of the relatively small deposits in Sweden, Spain, Belgium and Greece.

Shortly after the signing of peace in Europe, the vanquished in the struggle must, for the preservation of bare industrial existence, seek to levy on the deposits of Brazil; and that levy can be profitably made only in the form of conquest, as being the sole means of assuring permanent possession. Nations, as this war has evidenced, are prone to seek where they can find. What is the United States going to do about it?

John L. Birkinbine is one of America's leading experts on mining and the allied trades. He is an engineer of wide experience in South America as well as in Europe and the United States. He has written many books which are considered authorities on mining problems. He is a regular contributor to the National Editorial Service.

In a world which is as entirely industrial as the Western Hemisphere is to-day, the outcome of a great war is not decided by the extent of territory conquered. The resources of the conquered territory are of even greater importance. In this sensational article Mr. Birkinbine tells of one great source of friction in the future, in case the mines of Alsace-Lorraine are lost to Germany.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 21.—Harold Vaughan, a student at the University of Wisconsin, has been signed by Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics Baseball Club.

NEW THEATER TO BE BUILT HERE

Local Investors Announce Plans for Modern First Class Show House

On the completion within a few days of negotiations for the purchase of several pieces of property, active work will be started in Fresno on plans for the construction of a modern, fire-proof theater building that will cost when completed, close onto $50,000. The announcement that the project was now in process of formation was made yesterday by M. R. Parra, owner of the Plaza theater at Van Ness boulevard and Fresno street, and Hugh Sparkman, local realty operator. The men are jointly interested in the proposition and promise that within a year this city can boast of a new theater building that will rival anything of its kind in this section.

The purchase of property in a desirable location has been going on quietly in Fresno for a considerable period, but this stage of the deal is now about completed, say the operators, and the next few days will see the signing of property transfers involving considerable amounts. As soon as this is brought about, plans already drawn up will be submitted to contractors and the real work of tearing down present buildings to make way for the proposed theater will be placed under way.

PRODIGAL SOLDIER IS GIVEN HEARING

A preliminary hearing was yesterday given H. Rupert Douglas, former British soldier, who was arrested here a week ago, after he had passed fictitious checks aggregating $1500. Just to create excitement." Judge Briggs conducted the hearing and took the case under advisement. As Douglas did not realize any money on the checks, but gave them in payment for property he proposed to buy, his case is not looked upon in the same light as if he benefitted from his wholesale check writing. Among other things, Douglas gave checks to a motor car dealer for a machine, to a music house for a phonograph and to the Y. M. C. A. for a membership in that organization.

Pupils Apologize to Hardwick Ranchman for Theft of Fruit

HARDWICK, Oct. 21—Thursday afternoon the school children of the smaller grades, after a strenuous day with their books, felt the need of refreshments Mr. Hampton's orchard across the track from town, looked the most inviting. The bravest of the children, about thirty-five in all, slipped through an obscure corner of the fence and helped themselves to apples. After eating all they could hold, the little boys filled their pockets, and the little girls not having any pockets, carried the fruit away as best they could, then all slipped away, so they thought, unobserved. Next morning the teachers called the little folks together and sent them to Mr. Hampton to confess, and apologize. They did it bravely, and Mr. Hampton says the speeches and apologies the children made were worth all the apples in the orchard.

JOHN W. SHORT BACK FROM SUMMER OUTING

Says State Will Give Hughes Majority; S. F. Slightly Wilson

John W. Short returned yesterday from a summer outing of several weeks at various places on the coast. Short states that his son, Douglas, who passed the recent bar examination with high rating, will continue in the Hastings law school for the present and will probably enter law practice in San Francisco upon the completion of his school work. Short spent the last few days with his eldest son, James, who is engaged in the management of a successful dairy at Modesto.

Regarding the political situation in California, Short's observations satisfy him that the state will give Hughes a substantial majority, but that Wilson is likely to have a small lead in San Francisco.

U. S. AGENTS NAB LIQUOR SELLERS

Chinese Who Sold Liquor to Indians in Jail. Another Warrant Out

An investigation of all the crimes among the Indians of the county, covering a period of three months, which included one murder, has been traced to liquor, and as a result, Sheriff Thorwaldson, co-operating with government agents, yesterday caused the arrest of Ah Jim, a Chinese, who is charged with distributing liquor exclusively to Indians.

A warrant will be served on George J. Petcovich, a wholesale liquor dealer, who it is said furnished liquor to Indians who were acting under instructions of the federal agents.

The investigation was begun by Sheriff Thorwaldson three weeks ago when Jim Lewis in a drunken brawl, killed Henry Bob, a fellow laborer. Jim Pumpkin, one of the Indians who was present at the vineyard when the killing occurred, confessed to having brought the liquor to the vineyard, upon which the several tribesmen became intoxicated. The liquor, he said, was purchased from Ah Jim, an aged Chinaman, who lives in a little shack on G street.

Further investigation showed that he had furnished the Indians, both men and squaws, with any amount of cheap whiskey or wines for several months.

The Indians are also said to have little difficulty in obtaining liquor from the Petcovich store at 914 I street.

E. C. Kennett and O. E. Blaine, government agents, stated last night that they had not fully decided upon what course they would take. Ah Jim will be arraigned Monday before United States Commissioner Miles Wallace on the federal charge and before Justice Graham for the state offense. Petcovich will be arraigned before Graham also. He was out of the city yesterday and the warrant will not be served until his return Monday.

Ah Jim, when arrested yesterday, had several flasks of whiskey and bottles of wine in his possession. He is over 80 years of age.

'COMMERCIAL HONESTY' IS UNITARIAN THEME

County Sealer H. P. Jayne to Speak at Community Religion Prelude

County Sealer of Weights and Measures H. P. Jayne will give the community religious prelude on "Commercial Honesty" at the Unitarian church this Sunday morning, and in the after church class will exhibit a considerable part of the testing apparatus used by his office, with some specimens of confiscated false weights, etc. The California State department of weights and measures has asked that churches throughout the state observe the day as a means of educating the community to co-operate with the department. Jayne is an enthusiast in his specialty and recently made an impressive talk at the state convention of county sealers on "Confidence as an Asset."

Rev. Christopher Ruess will give the second of the series of Whitman sermons, dealing with "The Religion of Being Tolerant." In the evening he will speak before the Reedley-Dinuba Unitarian Fellowship at Native Sons hall, in Dinuba, on "Whitman, Our Most Religious Poet."

Skunk on Stroll Occupies Billiard Hall and Remains

If a skunk wishes to take a stroll down Fresno's most crowded street at the fashionable hour of 9 o'clock at night, who is to say him nay? If the same polecat decides to invade a poolroom, and, after driving cigar clerks and players over tables and counters, takes up his lodging behind a cigar counter, who is in authority or disposition to remove him.

With the nonchalance, Brer Skunk completed his J street constitutional last night by walking into the Brunswick billiard parlor, 1034 J street. A crowd in the lobby scurried for cover. The skunk calmly walked behind the cigar counter, and carefully tucked himself away behind the back display case.

Bert Maul, the proprietor, appealed to the police "to do something," and inferred he meant the skunk to be the object of the doing. It appears, however, that no ordinance has been broken as yet, and the officers have not volunteered to kill the polecat. The skunk held the fort at midnight, while a board of strategy planned his destruction from a safe distance.

"Honest Weights and Measures"
Slogan of Today, a Policy for Years With The Owl Drug Co.

"Honesty in trade should be a principle, not a policy."

Every principle set forth in the campaign being carried on throughout the state this week is already a part of The Owl Drug Co.'s code of ethics.

We believe in honest weights and measures, and show our belief by practising this principle in every transaction.

In April, 1914, the "Net Weight Container Act" went into effect, requiring that the net weight be plainly printed upon drug and food packages.

Long before that time, The Owl Drug Co. had recognized the rights of the customer and had been for many years printing the net weight upon each of its packages.

Every package of drugs and food products put up in The Owl's laboratory and bearing The Owl's Orange Label bears a printed label plainly stating the guaranteed net weight of the contents. Every one of these packages is weighed by hand. We use the most accurate scales that money can buy.

The same policy applies to the weighing of every drug in an Owl Drug Store — the costly ingredients for prescriptions as well as perfumes, sachets, herbs and all goods sold in bulk.

All our lady customers and friends are invited to visit our ladies' rest room. Many conveniences and comforts are provided.

GOOD ROAD FIGHT IS NEARING END

Boosters Working Hard to Get Autos and Checkers for Election Day

With but one more day left in which to lay before the voters of the county their appeal to them not to neglect the good roads bond issue on Tuesday, the good roads advisory committee has arranged a program of activities for tomorrow that will keep the supporters of the project hustling from morn till night.

Satisfied that everything within their limited means has been attended to throughout the county in the way of arousing interest and securing pledges of support, the committeemen are now giving their complete attention to the problem of scattering checkers about the entire county to keep tab on the vote at the polls and the scheme for furnishing transportation from homes and business houses to the polls and back again. This angle of the campaign has been left in the hands of a special committee composed of H. E. Patterson, chairman, and Gus Wentzel, M. L. Neely and N. R. Cooper. One hundred and twenty-five automobiles with drivers are needed to cover the county thoroughly and the committee feels certain that if this number is forthcoming the victory of the bond issue will be assured. In addition to the autos needed, the committee is casting about for an army of about 75 men who will be asked to remain at the various precincts throughout the voting day to checker off the bond supporters as they appear at the booths and to direct the automobile drivers to the homes of the bond supporters who have not yet appeared.

All who will volunteer their services are to report at the headquarters of the committee at the Yosemite Stage Company's office in the Hotel Fresno building, Phone 109, at 7 a. m. Tuesday. The committee will be ready for them and each will be assigned to his particular task as he appears on the scene. The committee has worked out this end of the proposition to a nicety and promises that no delay or confusion shall take place.

All members of the Commercial club boosters were urged in communications sent out by the advisory committee yesterday to get behind the bond issue Tuesday and to do all in their power to bring about the success of the proposition.

"If the bonds are to carry it is going to require the united work of every person in Fresno who is favorable to this issue," was set forth in the circular. "This organization has an opportunity to make a reputation for itself by getting out and helping put this over. If you have real red blood in your veins show up and help us out. Do it now!"

Another circular was directed to all business men and read in part, "You have been appointed a committee of one, to get out a full vote of your employes and friends for the good roads bond issue.

"Two years ago a similar issue failed in Sacramento not because a majority of the voters did not believe in it, but because they were so indifferent to the demands of their community that they neglected to cast their vote."

With each communication, and it is estimated that the letters will enter practically every home in the county, was sent a card of "Good Roads Facts" on which was printed full particulars concerning the construction of the proposed road work.

Yesterday was to have been "Button Day" for the good roads men, but because the scheme interfered with the Armenian Relief Day program, the small army of women and girls who reported for the sale of the road buttons were called upon to give their efforts to the relief fund.

WILSON FIT; I'M FOR HIM SAYS EDISON

Inventor, Life Long Republican, Strong Roosevelt Supporter, Changes Heart; Tells Why

"President Has Been Up Against Succession of Serious Problems and Has Proven His Mettle"

"He's Kept Us Out of Serious Trouble; He Is With Public Opinion; He's the Right Man"

SARATOGA, N. Y., Sept. 3—Thomas A. Edison, inventor, life-long Republican, and a strong supporter of Theodore Roosevelt's candidacy for the Republican nomination, made announcement to-day of his intention to vote and work for Woodrow Wilson. He dictated the following statement:

"Not since 1860 has any campaign made such a direct call on Simon-Pure Americanism. The times are too serious to talk or think in terms of Republicanism or Democracy. Real Americans must drop parties and get down to big fundamental principles.

"More than any other President in my memory Wilson has been faced with a succession of tremendous problems, any one of which decided the wrong way would have had disastrous consequences. Wilson's decisions so far have not got us into any serious trouble, nor are they likely to.

"He has given us peace with honor. This talk about the United States being despised is nonsense. Neutrality is a mighty trying policy but back of it are international law, the rights of humanity and the future of civilization.

Mexico Policy Praised.

"With reference to Mexico, I think that the President has acted wisely, justly and courageously. It was right that the United States should not have recognized such a murderous personality as Huerta. I do not think that we should have intervened nor do I believe that we should intervene now. Mexico is a troublesome neighbor just now, but war and conquest is not going to make her a better one. Both against England and against human slavery the United States worked out its salvation through revolution and it was a pretty slow, trying process.

"It has been said that Wilson at first was against preparedness. Perhaps he was, but when convinced that intelligent public opinion was overwhelmingly in favor of it, he changed. That is the proper thing for our Presidents to do. A president defiant of public opinion would be a dangerous man in our Government.

"His attitude on the tariff shows an equal openness of mind. A tariff commission will take the whole problem out of politics. It is my hope that experts will be named and that the body will be continuing and vested almost with the dignity of the Supreme Court.

Pardon For Blunders.

"They say he has blundered. Perhaps he has. But I notice that he usually blunders forward. You can't get one hundred per cent efficiency in a democracy; I don't know that we ought to want it. We would be machines, and we would have to sacrifice too much of freedom.

"As I said at this start, it has been just one big thing after another with Wilson. I have never known so many dangerous questions brought up for decision to any one President. He has just had the general strike of the skilled railway men, which, if it had been carried out, would have thrown the whole country into confusion and proved a calamity that in certain eventualities would have had results bound to extend over a long period of time. He acted with his usual courage and sanity.

"In my opinion, Mr. Hughes, if President, would have found it difficult to decide on the best course for the Government to take in this strike. His capacity for hindsight, as we learn from his speeches, is highly developed, but as to his foresight we are not equally well informed.

"Mr. Wilson has now had about four years of experience and he has earned faith and trust. I do not think it a logical or sensible thing to change to an inexperienced and untried man just for the sake of change or without much better reason being given for the change than I have noticed.

"Roosevelt was my choice. He has had experience and is one of the best of Americans, but the machine-controlled Republican party would not have him. Therefore I am for Woodrow Wilson."

Train Your Hair as An Actress Does

No class of people devotes as much time to beauty as do actresses, and naturally no class must be more careful to retain and develop their charms. Inquiry among them develops the information that in hair care they find it dangerous to shampoo with any makeshift hair cleanser. Instead they have studied to find the finest preparation made for shampooing and bringing out the beauty of the hair. The majority of them say that to enjoy the best hair wash and scalp stimulator that is known, get a package of canthrox from your druggist; dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water and your shampoo is ready. It costs less than three cents for this amount. After its use the hair dries rapidly, with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.

ADVERTISING MAN IS AUTHOR OF BOOK

E. A. BERG

The advertising opportunities that this locality offers the local merchant, the mechanical facilities on hand, the various advertising mediums and the principles of advertising in general are discussed in a book being published by E. A. Berg of the Berg Advertising Agency of this city.

The book is entitled "Hide Not Your Light Under a Bushel" and is illustrated by reproductions of advertisements, mediums and engravings, each forming a basis for the different subjects under discussion and accompanied by letters from local business firms who have profited by advertising.

The "Preface" points out that advertising has been an important factor in the success of many local business firms, that the people of this Valley have demonstrated their willingness to respond to any appeal worthy of consideration and that every business firm that applies to his business the thought that "Hide Not Your Light Under a Bushel" suggests and determines to be constructive, has a reasonable chance to succeed.

A brief review of some of the advance proof sheets of popular interest follows:

Inspiration as a Factor in Advertising

Some subjects lend themselves readily to advertising while others are extremely difficult to exploit and it is in the latter case where the value of inspiration becomes most apparent.

There is generally some one thing at least, in any business that one can draw inspiration from and from that, work out a successful advertising campaign.

This was strikingly demonstrated in the California Associated Raisin Company's fight for sufficient acreage to control the markets. Here was a subject that had been hammered upon for years, a subject that did not lend itself to a very extensive line of arguments.

But as the plans for the campaign developed they opened up new avenues of approach, gave opportunity for advertising to aid a worthy cause and help to put a business on a safe and profitable basis.

This is the part that advertising plays in the business world and any business built on the right foundation will furnish ample inspiration upon which to build a successful advertising campaign.

Co-Operation From the Advertiser

No advertising campaign can bring maximum results unless the co-operation of the advertiser is secured. No one knows better than the advertiser just where are the weak spots in his business and what are the peculiarities of his particular business, for every business has to contend with individual conditions.

Advertising is not a task for one man alone. It requires the co-operation of every one.

In every business there is room for improvement and advertising is generally the quickest way to bring about a satisfactory condition.

If your business will not stand the search light of publicity don't start anything. If you expect advertising to win along without your hearty co-operation, don't start anything for advertising alone cannot perform wonders.

On the other hand if you are willing to reveal your uttermost secrets if necessary in order to find the germ of discord in your business and if you are willing to back up your advertising with merchandise that you can guarantee to your customers, then advertising will almost do wonders.

Importance of Truth in Advertising

Many apparently successful businesses today are still pursuing the old methods of exaggeration in their advertising; but a new spirit has entered into the business world and that spirit is the manifestation of a desire to follow more closely the dictates of the golden rule.

The day of exaggeration is rapidly going the way of all unsound, impractical methods of doing business, for the telling of the truth is admittedly the better road to success.

The merchant or manufacturer who regards advertising as an investment realizes the folly of investing his money in building up a desire for his merchandise by exaggerating values for a repeat order or a repeat call from a customer is the only way any business can prosper permanently. The new order of things calls for permanent results, not the mere getting of a customer in the store once.

The Business Building Theory in Advertising

Working on the business building theory of advertising, being more concerned with ultimate results than with the immediate results, is the conclusion that has been reached by the most successful institutions today.

It matters not what immediate results may be gained from an advertisement inserted today.

This is the big thought that predominates in the minds of the most successful advertisers. An advertisement read today will bring results a year from now and every announcement should be prepared with that thought in view.

To bring a customer into the store once to purchase a particular item at a special price or for some other reason is not sufficient. They must come again and again and the constant exploitation of the advantages that your store offers, be it price, service or both, will eventually bring new customers and keep the patronage that has already been secured.

The Conservation of the Advertising Appropriation

Millions are annually wasted in advertising.

Many causes contribute to these failures, chief among them being wrong analysis and the inability to get the right perspective of the advertisers' problems.

One factor that contributes to the waste in advertising in almost every local community is successful solicitations from agents representing mediums of doubtful value.

Many also seek to sell the advertisers good will instead of actual advertising and this is a direct road to disappointing results.

No advertiser should invest in any medium on the strength of friendship or reciprocity, or respond to the "good will" appeal. Advertising is rapidly reaching a basis where its operation and its results may be reduced to an exact computation, and the business man is justified in giving careful consideration to the merits of every medium presented.

Sincere good will or friendship cannot be purchased and the question of reciprocity should not influence the buyer of space for these same things can be attained by the use of mediums of recognized value—plus the advantage that representation in meritorious mediums will bring to any advertiser.

The Value of a Firm or Name

Too much emphasis cannot be given to the value of building up a prestige for a firm or trade name.

Stop and think what the name "Ivory Soap" is worth today in actual cash! Think what a tremendous prestige the name "Marshall-Field" has! Names like these are invaluable. Firms owning them would be able to realize enough on these names alone to begin business over again should they lose their entire fortunes through disaster or unforeseen circumstances.

While it is more difficult to popularize a firm name than it would be to popularize a trade mark, yet it is not impossible.

In almost every instance where a firm name has been converted into an asset, it has been done mainly through exploitation and likewise the tremendous prestige of a trade mark like Ivory Soap, for instance, has been gained chiefly through constant and persistent advertising.

Right here the fact must be emphasized that advertising alone could not bring about these wonderful results as the article or business advertised must be meritorious. All the advertising that money can buy, or that brains can conceive will never bring about a permanent success if it is not supported by an article or business that will stand the most rigid test for quality and service.

Localizing National and Foreign Advertising.

An advertisement prepared by anyone living in another locality cannot hope to carry its message to local people as effectively as an advertisement prepared locally.

You can talk more intelligently to an audience you know than to an audience of strangers and it is the same with a written argument.

It may be conceded that the average advertisement prepared by experts employed by large manufacturers are perhaps technically superior to advertisements prepared locally, yet when all is said and done the main thing is to get the message across and the local advertisement becomes the better, if it accomplishes this object.

Local advertisers could make their announcements more effective if they would study factory and national advertising matter pertinent to the article they wish to exploit and then prepare their advertisements from the knowledge thus gained, but tell the story in your own way. In this manner you will lessen the possibilities of "shooting over the heads" of the readers of the local newspapers.

Persistency Necessary to Advertising Success.

While some advertising campaigns are immediately resultful, yet the majority of successes are only attained after continued and persistent effort.

Advertising is educational and cannot produce the maximum results until the readers have had ample time to be influenced. Some subjects are more susceptible to advertising efforts than others, therefore results are more quickly gained.

Persistency and continuity are the big factors that make for success in advertising—the constant hammering away until the message is firmly impressed upon the minds of the readers. No one ever made a success of spasmodic advertising. If you have not enough faith in real advertising to make it a component part of your business, then don't start it for only by keeping everlastingly at it can the advertiser hope to make his advertising an investment instead of an expense.

Special Sales and What They Accomplish.

There are very few business that manage to get through the season without carrying over a certain portion of the season's stock.

This is not very serious for the first year or two, but it soon becomes a menace as the stock accumulates and can not be invoiced at first cost.

The time to dispose of this surplus is when it still possesses a selling appeal and the quickest way to effect a disposal is by reducing the price.

The worth of so many articles is determined by their style and not entirely by their quality, therefore an article offered at say $25.00 in the height of the season is not worth as much to the purchasers three months later, although it may not have deteriorated in quality.

If all merchandise was put on a staple basis there would be no occasion for special sales as one could then govern his supply by demand, as the grocer does today, but as long as style determines the value there will always be a necessity for price reduction.

The Force of a Good Illustration.

An illustration adds much to the value of an advertisement.

It not only performs as an "attention getter" but it tells enough of the message to create a desire to know more. It gives emphasis to the story told in the advertisement and makes the whole more attractive and pleasing.

An illustration makes individuality more attainable and it injects life, snap and vim into an otherwise cold, technical presentation.

Some advertisers depend altogether on an illustration to deliver the message, eliminating type entirely. This however is rarely done until the subject has attained prestige and a following.

An illustration does not fulfill its entire mission if it is used merely as an "eye catcher" for a pleasing typographical arrangement will do the same thing at less expense.

Unless an illustration is good and in harmony it might better be omitted for a poor illustration and one that does not illuminate the subject advertised will not produce a favorable impression on the reader."

Comic illustrations are dangerous although cartoons may sometimes be used to advantage, but in no instance will a misleading illustration add strength or prestige to an advertisement.

QUITE ENOUGH.

"Please, sir," piped the tiny customer, whose head scarcely reached the counter, "father wants some oak varnish."

"How much does your father want, my little man?" inquired the smiling shopman.

"Father says you was to fill this," replied the little fellow, handing over a pint jar.

It was duly filled and handed back. "Father will pay you next Saturday," said the recipient, casually. Then the face of the shopman grew dark.

"We don't give credit here," he said. "Gimme back the jar."

Meekly the small boy handed back the jar, which was emptied and returned with a scowl.

"Thank you, sir," he said. "Father said you'd be sure to leave enough around the sides for him to finish the job he wants to do, and you 'ave, sir."

MANY MEN, MANY VIEWS ON GOOD ROADS BONDS

Challenge's Figures

Editor Republican:—I want to call the attention of the voters to some wrong impressions that have been conveyed to many in regard to the saving that will be made by the paving of about 6 per cent of the roads in Fresno county, at an expenditure of $3,600,000, the annual interest on which will be $162,000 provided the bonds can be placed at 4½ per cent.

We are told that the paved roads will so take place of the present roads that the supervisors will only have to expend $200,000 on the remaining 94 per cent of the present system, instead of $400,000 expended at the present time. Mr. Sutherland states that that has been the experience of the counties where paved roads have been installed. I challenged him to produce the evidence bearing such a broad statement, and as he has not done so, I want to show you what the county of Los Angeles is paying out on their dirt roads since putting in their highway system. According to an official report from that county, they spent on maintenance of their 3500 miles of dirt roads in 1914-15, $688,182.80, or $190.90 per mile. In 1915-16 they spent on these same dirt roads $792,882.95, or $226.64 per mile. Does this look like the upkeep of dirt roads grows less when a few miles of permanent has been installed? Another thing, can any one who wants to be fair and honest claim for a moment that the dirt roads of Los Angeles county compare at all with the dirt and oil roads of Fresno county? There is absolutely no comparison between the two.

Our supervisors worked 293⅔ miles of road during the season of 1915-16 at a cost of $37,676.30, or $129.00 per mile, or almost $100.00 per mile less than it costs Los Angeles county to do the same work, only not half as good.

The writer considers it simply an outrage the way our road-workers have been slandered during this campaign of advertising for paved roads. The cartoon of the tractor pressing the dollars out of the taxpayers' pocketbook and the grader covering them up is a disgrace to the man who suggested such a thing. We venture the assertion that there is not another county in this state that gets as good work done and as much for the money as Fresno county.

I believe in giving credit where credit is due, and being absolutely fair in this matter. If the bonds carry, let us hope that the work of building the new roads will be as honestly and efficiently done as is done on our present system of roads.

The merchants and business men of Fresno city are urging people to vote for the bonds, believing that it will be a great thing for this city by bringing more people here to trade. I simply want to ask if you think any one ever stays away from Fresno on account of the poor roads. There are so many automobiles and teams here now every Saturday that there is no room to park the rigs, and they come on not only good roads, but the very best roads, everything considered, of any county in the state.

Finally, I want to urge every one to go to the polls next Tuesday and vote, whether you favor the bonds or not. This is the most important question that has ever come before the voters of this county, and it is every one's duty to take a part in deciding it.

I. E. DICKINSON.

Favors Present Way

Editor Republican: A lot of us voters and taxpayers of Fresno county are not only in favor of good roads, but of better roads. Yes, $162,000 a year better if the bonds are voted down; for if the bonds carry, then the $162,000 instead of being expended on the roads will have to be sent away, each year, to pay the interest at 4 1-2 per cent on the $3,600,000 proposed bonds. The principal and interest of this gigantic mortgage indebtedness is scheduled to extend over the space of 32 years, making an annual principal installment of $112,500 (besides interest) to be paid back to the bondholders each year for 32 years.

We suggest that instead our assessor be instructed to add the annual principal installment of $112,500 to our present road fund each year, and thereby accomplish the same result in the same length of time, and have the $162,000 annual interest left in our treasury, instead of paying it out to no purpose. This plan would allow us to call a halt either when we conclude the roads were good enough, or when we think we can no longer afford so large an expenditure.

But if the bond holder once gets our votes and mortgages, he will insist on us coming through for the entire 32 years with the full amount of $3,600,000 principal and $162,000 a year interest, even if some of us lose our homes in the effort.

Since the chisel grader and oil have found their places in road construction, and their efficient use is becoming better understood, Fresno county roads are rapidly developing into good roads, and we are not sending away $162,000 for interest on road bonds, either.

If we need to increase our present road fund, all right. But we can not afford to vote a tax on ourselves to raise $162,000 interest every year for 32 years to no purpose. By voting to keep this $162,000 in our own county treasury, it would be available to add to our present road fund, and thereby make $162,000 worth more of better roads each year for 32 years.

Some of us are already struggling under one mortgage on our home, that seems to take a long time to pay. And now, if my neighbors vote another incumbrance on my home, to run for 32 years with the consequent interest all that time, I will at least have two consoling thoughts as I give up the hopeless struggle, to succumb to blasted hopes—first, that I would expect to have reasonably good roads for my family and me to walk out of the county on, and second, we would have a lot of company walking out of the county on the good roads. Misery loves company.

We already have the best average roads, and the most miles of roads, of about any county in the state. Our roads, even now, attract favorable attention and comment from our visitors and would-be investors from everywhere.

A. W. FILSON

Objects to Width

Editor Republican:—Since the question of good roads has opened in your paper let me say the objection to the bonds is not the want of good roads so much as the blamed little dinkey sixteen foot road they propose to build. I go to Fresno quite often but I have yet to make the trip when I was not forced off the road by a machine in going from the Sanger road to Fresno. What is the use in taking 40 to 60 feet from good producing land, construct a sixteen foot road for automobiles to run wild, driven by a crazy or drunken driver and let the balance grow up to weeds? If you are going to give us good roads, why not give us something to be proud of. There were more people hurt on one mile of the public highway than there were on twenty of our dirt roads in the last three months. I am for good roads but I am for safety first.

J. M. Stevenson

As to Crop Damage

Editor Republican:—Kindly permit me, through your columns, to bring before the voters of Fresno, just one or two points in regard to the Good Roads question, on which we are to vote next Tuesday.

A few seem to think that because our crops were partly damaged by the recent rains, they cannot afford to vote for the bonds this year. They evidently do not realize that the taxes have already been levied and that no body will have to pay one penny towards the bonds this year.

"The fact that our crops have been somewhat damaged by the rain, is all the more reason why we should vote for the bonds this year. We need the money to be put into circulation to take the place of the loss. Large numbers of men will be put to work and remember that only local people will be employed. Many of our farmers can put their teams to work and will be able to earn money to partially cover the loss to their raisins.

We must all remember also that it must be a two thirds majority in order to carry the election—so let no good roads booster fail to vote. There is some opposition on the part of those who have been misinformed or who have not given the question due consideration, and they will all be sure to vote against the bonds. It will take two positive votes to offset every negative vote.

The bonds should carry. If they do not, it will be because of over-confidence. Therefore, everybody in favor of better roads and a greater Fresno County must do their duty on next Tuesday and vote "yes", on the bonding proposition.

If Fresno County turns down the good roads, we will get a back-set that it will take years to overcome. Let's look at it from that standpoint if from no other, and vote to increase our standing as the fourth county of the greatest state in the world.

Yours for Better Roads

The Sunny Side branch of the Main Circle met the same day at the Hamilton Cove Home and the Welcome branch met Wednesday at the Oscar Peterson ranch. The latter branch gave $10 which the ladies made this summer, to apply on the piano fund of the church. The ladies' aid, with the cooperation of the branch circles and other organizations of the church, hope to make this bazaar a big success. The place of holding this bazaar will be made known publicly at an early date.

Rev. Charles White has returned to his home in Pasadena after visiting at the G. W. Buck home.

J. W. White, who lives on the John R. King ranch, is getting along nicely from the severe cuts he sustained the other evening, while he was driving six horses to a gang plow. In turning the plow overturned causing Mr. White to fall upon the sharp edge of the plow, cutting gashes in two places below the knee. In order to stop the blood from flowing he wrapped the whip above the cuts and lay down on the plowed ground. J. R. King went out to the ranch later and found Mr. White in this condition and the pool of blood showed he had been lying there for about three-quarters of an hour. Dr. Barrinan was summoned and after attending to the cuts, White was able to be taken home by midnight. He was plowing 3 or 4 miles out west of town at the time of the accident.

PARKS END SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Yosemite, Sequoia and General Grant Are Well Patronized

The Yosemite, Sequoia and General Grant National Parks have just closed one of the most successful seasons in their history, in point of general interest. The number visiting the Yosemite was not as great as in previous years, but the average length of stay was longer. Those who went there this year seemed to have more of the get acquainted with the park spirit than that of merely being recorded among the "I have been to the Yosemite" class.

The patronage at the Sequoia and General Grant parks was the largest this year in their history. In fact the total number of visitors to the two parks was nearly equal to the number who visited the Yosemite.

The Department of the Interior is taking more interest in national parks than it ever has before, extensively advertising the beauties of all of them.

In the Yosemite there has been keen competition between concessionaires resulting in more advertising. While the attendance fell off some in the Yosemite, the increased advertising has stimulated interest and all look forward to 1917 to break all existing records for attendance.

Walter Fry, supervisor of the Sequoia and General Grant parks says that the liberal patronage in these two parks this year is accounted for largely by reason of the splendid climate and also by reason of the fact that in the counties of Fresno and Tulare, adjoining the park, there is such a large and prosperous population which is able to enjoy the scenic wonders.

Famed for Trees.

The Sequoia and General Grant parks are particularly famed for their big trees. They are the largest in the world, exceeding even the famous Mariposa Big Trees and the Sequoia Giant Forest is the largest forest of big trees in the world.

The Department of the Interior now favors extension of the Sequoia Park to take in the wonderful Kings River canyon and Mt. Whitney, the highest mountain in continental United States.

There was but very little rain in the two parks this year and visitors seemed to enjoy them thoroughly. Visitors in general, Fry, said, were inclined to observe the park rules and regulations.

In the three national parks, rules and regulations are much less stringent than ever before. The result has been that people have been able to visit them with very little fear of being upbraided for infraction of some rule.

There were 10,687 visitors to the Sequoia National Park and 15,226 to the General Grant Park this year, or a total of 25,913. Of the number, 25,220 were residents of California: 650 from 27 other different states and territories in the union and 43 from seven different foreign countries.

2,438 Autos Registered.

There were 2,438 privately owned automobiles and 42 motorcycles entering the two parks, carrying 12,118 passengers. A total of 2,079 people were brought in by transportation companies; 5,327 by wagon; 4,521 mounted on horse and 1,868 afoot.

Fresno expects to take its position as the gateway to the Sequoia, General Grant and Yosemite parks. It first became generally known as the gateway this year and far greater results are expected next year.

It is estimated that more than 7,000 people passed through Fresno this year en route to the Yosemite. In addition to this number, 533 were registered from the city of Fresno.

More automobiles entered the Yosemite by the Wawona gateway than through all the other Yosemite gateways combined, according to the figures given out from park headquarters.

Transportation in and out of the valley is handled by three companies—the Yosemite Big Tree Auto Stage Company, operating from Merced and Fresno by way of Wawona; the Desmond Park Service Company, operating from El Portal (this was formerly the Yosemite Transportation Company's road, but the lease expired and was turned over to Desmond), and the Big Trees Auto Stage Company, operating from El Portal by way of the Merced and Tuolumne grove of Big Trees.

Desmond has complete control of auto sightseeing about the valley, and runs side trips to the Mariposa Grove of Big Trees and the Merced and Tuolumne groves. All horse hire is in his hands.

Opening Up Lodges

A good thing started has been the opening of lodges in the high Sierras, where good camp accommodations may be obtained at fair prices.

Desmond is now remodeling Glacier Point Hotel and building a hotel on the floor of the valley.

Camp Curry has started construction on several new buildings to house various amusement concessions, and although the present administration has not as yet signified its willingness to give more than a one-year lease to this, the biggest camp in Yosemite, plans are being made to entertain more people than ever during the 1917 season.

Government improvements of roads is going on fast. The main roads have all been widened, and a complete sprinkling system has been put in operation. Bridges have been put in, others strengthened and considerable work has been done on the Tioga road. Trails have been kept in the best possible shape, considering the traffic.

House Work Made Easy by

--Electricity

Electricity is the greatest aid to the housewife.

It can assist her with the preparing of a meal, the cleaning of the house, the ironing of clothes and in scores of other ways help to lessen the burden of house work.

Electricity is becoming more and more appreciated by the modern progressive housekeeper.

New Half Price Rates

After the first $1.60 worth of electricity has been consumed, the price drops to one-half.

This permits the more liberal use of electricity for lighting, cooking, heating, etc.

It will mean brighter homes, better meals, cleaner carpets and rugs.

It means the saving of time, money and effort.

Who Wrote Your Insurance?

Are You Sure That He Understood It?

Was he a well-informed man who had made a careful study of policies and understood them perfectly?

Or was he handling insurance as a "side line"?

The difference is that your policy may have serious flaws in it if it has not been written by one who knows.

If you wish, I will examine your policies for you.

Insurance Is a Study

Have It Written By One Man

Writing insurance means a great deal more than merely filling out a printed form. It means making an examination of other policies, scrutinizing them for flaws, and making them CONCUR.

Select a competent man and have him write ALL your insurance; that's the way to be sure that you are getting the best service.

GROW AVOCADOES IN FRESNO

Several Varieties Producing Here

Avocado Tree in bearing in Kings River Thermal Tract

To the many fruit products, for which Fresno county is now justly famous, it would appear that another variety is about to added.

The avocado, more commonly known as the alligator pear, native of semi-tropical regions, is the new addition. At least one location in Fresno county has been demonstrated as the place where this tree successfully buds, blooms and produces its much-prized fruit. Three years of experimental work seems to have demonstrated the fact that Fresno county offers a golden opportunity for the growth of the avocado.

The experimental plantation of some two dozen varieties was undertaken by the Kirkman Nurseries, in the year 1913, during the month of May. The spot selected is in the Kings River Thermal Tract, where is located one of the Kirkman Nurseries, on the east side road to Piedra. Protected in this thermal locality from frosts or heavy winds, the trees have made a remarkable growth. They are bearing their first crop, in this, their third year of propagation. This indication of early bearing in Fresno county is one of the most valuable results of the experiment. In those districts of the south, such as the Whittier district, where the avocado has been successfully grown, profitable crops have been secured from four to five years after planting. Every indication points to as early, if not earlier, maturity in Fresno county.

Some of the Varieties

Among other varieties planted by Mr. Kirkman were those of the Fowler, Taft, Harmon, Northrup and Blake. Many of these trees are now maturing their first fruit, the crop ranging from 10 to 50 pears to the tree. The trees of the Fowler variety appear to have the greatest number of pears. Mr. Kirkman, however, does not feel justified at so early a stage in the experiment, in naming the varieties best suited to conditions in Fresno county. All the varieties planted appear to have thrived and have made a satisfactory growth. Until all have come into bearing and the fruit has been tested over a number of years, the selection of the most suitable varieties cannot be scientifically made.

The most important result of this experiment to the fruit growers of Fresno county lies in the fact that the tree thrives and gives promise of a heavy production of fruit. This matter of heavy crop yield is vital to any large financial success.

Until recently the avocado has been known only as an epicurean delicacy to those whose bank accounts were more than mildly substantial. Owing to a recent extra large shipment of the fruit into San Francisco from Honolulu, the market was temporarily forced down to 50c per pear. Ordinarily one who indulges himself in a half portion of the fruit, at any of the larger metropolitan hotels, will find this item on his cafe check entered at from 80c to $1.00 per said pear.

How long these high prices will prevail depends upon the growth of the industry and increase in domestic production. The present demand is apparently many times greater than the supply. Computing the possible income from a successful orchard of only a few acres, at present market prices, will very quickly put one in a position to pay for gasoline without pain.

A great deal has recently been written concerning this fruit. The reading public is quite familiar with the fact that near Whittier a single tree has produced, in fruit and buds, the amazing total income of $3,000 in a single year, and that Lloyds engaged to insure this tree to the value of $30,000. This tree has been considerably exploited and should not be taken as typical of what new planters of avocados may expect.

University Bulletin.

To forestall any reckless or ill-advised investment in avocado culture, and to prevent its exploitation by the unscrupulous, Prof. Ira J. Condit, of the University of California, has issued (under Bulletin No. 254 of the Agricultural Experiment Station) a brochure, giving such general information as may be desired by those interested.

Regarding the susceptibility of the avocado to frost, Prof. Condit states:

"Some types will be uninjured by ten degrees of frost, provided the season's growth is properly hardened by reducing the amount of water during the latter part of the season; other types are injured by three or four degrees of frost, while the strictly tropical varieties will not withstand even cold, frostless nights, the leaves and tender branches turning brown and dying back under such conditions.

"Protection from other atmospheric conditions are a requisite, according to the writer, as he further states:

"The branches are rather brittle and should be protected from violent winds. Although bearing trees have sufficient elasticity to enable the branches to carry heavy loads of fruit without breaking, it is advisable to select, for planting, locations where the wind is not too severe."

In general, Prof. Condit cautions those newly engaging in the industry as follows:

"Those who contemplate planting avocados in untried localities should proceed cautiously and not plant any variety extensively unless they are willing to assume the risks of the pioneer."

Regarding irrigation, Prof. Condit advises:

"When very hot days occur in the late summer or fall, water should always be given, if only a bucketful at a time, to each young tree. Avocados require about the same amount of irrigation water as lemon trees."

The food value of the avocado is evidently very high. In the bulletin previously referred to, Prof. M. E. Jaffa has appended a short report of his test analysis of some 28 varieties. He states as a result of his findings:

Is Very Nutritious.

"These data emphasize the value of this fruit as an excellent source of easily digested vegetable fat...... It might almost be said to be in a class by itself...... The tables are replete with interesting points, all very favorable to the avocado...... It may be said that so far as protein in fresh fruits is concerned, the avocado stands far in the lead...... Reviewing the analytical data, it will be seen that ten varieties show more than 23 per cent fat and seven other varieties an excess of 18 per cent. The only fruit comparable with the avocado in this respect is the olive...... The energy values of the edible portion of the commonly used fresh fruits are low—the avocado has a far higher value in this respect—more than twice the maximum noted for other fruits. The maximum, 1325 calories per pound, approaches that noted for some varieties of dried fruits. It corresponds to 75 per cent of the food value of the cereals and is not far from twice that noted for average lean meat."

Altogether it may be assumed from the above facts that the avocado should indeed be welcome to Fresno county. He who does not thirst for wealth may forego the flattering income from an extensive orchard and content himself with building up his brawn and muscle from the fruit of a single tree. But he should use great care in selecting the place where he plants even the single tree or he will neither enjoy the fruit nor fatten thereon, for the avocado thrives only under dependable thermal conditions.

COMING OF AGE

The Growth and Awakening of Russia is the Most Significant Probable Outcome of the War

By Svetozar Tonjoroff

Author of "The War of the Nations." "Russia's Struggle for an Outlet"

(Copyright, 1916, by The National Editorial Service, Inc.)

The population of Russia in 1897 was 129,000,000. It is now more than 182,000,000. Figures recently issued by the government at Petrograd show that in the period between 1897 and 1915 the population of this enormous empire had increased by 42 per cent or 53,000,000 souls. That is a growth in human resources which no other great power in the world can approach.

The rapid expansion of Russia in population is a matter of the greatest import to the world, whether for good or for evil. If, at the beginning of this war, Russia had been as well organized as Germany, Great Britain or France, she could have marched over Europe with the ease of a Gulliver striding over a land of Lilliput. And there are unmistakable indications that Russia has seriously taken up the problem of national organization and is carrying it to a solution.

If Russia continues to grow at the present rate, she will have a population of no less than 300,000,000 by the middle of the next century. Any other European country would face starvation or wholesale emigration at that rate of growth. Not so Russia. The building of the Trans-Siberian railroad has opened up a vast country of agricultural riches. These riches Russia is rapidly developing by a system of government-aided colonization.

It is estimated that the potential agricultural resources of Siberia alone can support a population of 200,000,000, or twice the population of the United States. As for elbow room, there is no [illegible] country in the world which is in less danger of suffocation. Russia possesses more than one-half of the dry surface of Europe and more than one-tenth of the total land area of the world. It will be at least [illegible] centuries [illegible] will be necessary for Russia to seek more land for her people, rapidly though they be multiplying. But when Russia does feel the pinch of a legitimate hunger for land, the world would see some interesting developments.

Indeed, upon Russia's attitude on the important matter of territorial expansion will depend in a large measure the question of the beneficent or damaging effect of Russia's growth upon the other nations of the world. The tendency of Russia in all her history, and especially since Peter the Great has been toward territorial expansion. Peter the Great undertook the task of opening a "window into Europe," and carried it through to a successful conclusion by the sword. Since then Russia has been opening a large number of "windows." One of them was closed with a bang when Japan defeated Russia in the Far East and wrested Southern Manchuria and Korea from the grip of the Bear.

A considerable part of the world is basing its policy upon differing conceptions of Russia's course in the future. Germany is convinced that Russia will continue to annex territory in the future by various wars, big and little, as in the past. Great Britain, after having long regarded Russia as a menace to her Indian frontiers and to her over-sea routes, evidently has reached the conclusion that the Colossus of the north has been sated with soil, and that the acquisition of an open port at Constantinople and an open sea-road through the Dardanelles will mark the end of Russian conquests.

Only the future will show conclusively which view is the correct one. In the meanwhile, it is worth noting that even during this war, in which Russia is fighting in the Near East for her open [illegible] the diplomacy of Petrograd is busy in the Far East. The terms of the new Russo-Japanese treaty suggest an agreement of "spheres of influence" in China and "spheres of influence in China are pretty apt to mean ultimate annexation.

But whether Russia maintains her past policy of conquest or confines her energies to her internal development, her moral and material influence upon the world canot fail to be great. Russia is only beginning to think. She is only beginning to articulate. And the results of these beginnings are Tolstoi, Turgenieff, Tschaikowsky, Repin, Dostoyevsky, Rimski-Korsakoff, Verestchagin.

Russia is also just beginning her great industrial and commercial development. The organization of her men and her resources, at last apparently under way will give her a large place among the productive forces of the world. Her mineral wealth, barely touched as yet, assures for her an industrial future of enormous possibilities.

He has written many books, magazine articles and editorials on Bulgaria and the situation in the Near East which are considered among the most authoriative contemporary works on the subject. He keeps in touch constantly with European statesmen who are watching the Balkan situation. He is a regular contributor to the National Editorial Service.

Will there ever be another European war? If so, who will be the aggressor? Here is one fact which may give food for thought.

DRAFT THIEF IS SENT TO PRISON

J. F. Conee, at one time well known as a lumber salesman in California, yesterday was sentenced to serve three months in the county jail for stealing a draft for $50.05 from A. Arozarenan, an employe of the Hume-Bennett Lumber Co. on September 25. The original charge was grand larceny, but this was reduced by District Attorney McCormick when Conee agreed to plead guilty to a charge of petit larceny.

How to Keep Well, Talks on Health

By. DR. W. A. EVANS
Professor of Hygiene in Northwestern University and Former Health Commissioner of Chicago

MALARIA IN AUTUMN.

There are two reasons why malaria is especially important in the late autumn. In the first place, a campaign to get everybody completely cured of malaria in the autumn is the very best way to prevent malaria in the spring. In the second place, autumn is the season for such cases of pernicious malaria as the following, described by Dr. Ott of New Orleans in the Journal of the American Medical Association:

A man was admitted to the charity hospital in December, 1915, suffering from malarial hematuria, or malarial hemiglobnuria, to speak more accurately. He had lived in a malarial district for more than six months. He had had chills every ten or fifteen days. He had taken quinine irregularly, at times in large doses, since August.

He was a night telegraph operator. When he got in from work in the early morning of Dec. 12 he was feeling bad and he took several doses of quinine about 8 o'clock in the morning. At 4 in the afternoon he had a severe chill, with fever. He began to vomit and to pass bloody urine. In the early part of the night he had another chill, and his fever remained high all night. On the morning of the 13th he was jaundiced, his temperature was 104 degrees, and his urine was almost black. He was vomiting and hiccoughing. These symptoms kept up all day. He entered the hospital that night at 7:30.

When he entered the hospital he was jaundiced, he was vomiting, hiccoughing and voiding small quantities of coffee colored urine from time to time. That night he was given quinine by the mouth, but he vomited it. Quinine was injected into his bowel, but it was not absorbed. The fever kept up, the vomiting continued, and the urine remained coffee colored. The man was becoming very weak. It seemed that death from malarial hematuria was certain. At 11:30 on the morning of the 14th, in desperation, Dr. Ott dissolved ten grains of quinine bimuriate in ten ounces of sterile salt solution and injected it into a vein. The man commenced to improve at once. At 4:30 the injection into the vein was repeated. At 6 p. m. the fever had gone and the patient was better. On the 15th two injections of ten grains of quinine were given. There was no fever. The urine was a light wine color. On the 16th one injection of quinine was given. There was no fever and the urine was lighter in color. On Dec. 17 ten grains of quinine was given by the mouth three times. On Dec. 18 the urine was free from blood, albumin, and casts.

Any person who has lived in an intensely malarial region will recognize this picture. It is a typical case of malarial hematuria, probably the most malignant of all forms of malaria.

The usual history of a case of malarial hematuria is about as follows: The person commences to have chills, or dumb chills, and fever in midsummer. He takes enough quinine to stop the attack. When the chills stop he stops taking quinine. Mosquitoes keep after him. Another attack of chills comes. This time he takes some chill tonic. For a while his chills come regularly—once a week or once in three weeks. The man gets careless about his quinine. When he has a hard chill he takes heavy doses of quinine for one day or two and then he stops it. Or he takes a few doses of chill tonic on the days when he does not go to town or when he does not forget about it. Some time in September his friends notice that his skin is muddy and the whites of his eyes are pale or slightly yellow. He has chills irregularly. He cannot keep track of his chill days. He has an ague cake. Then one day he has a fever, perhaps a chill, begins to vomit and pass bloody urine.

Had a laboratory man been keeping track of this case this is what he would have noted. Ordinary malarial organisms are present in the blood most of the time since midsummer. They disappear when full doses of quinine are taken. The parasites present are mostly of varieties which produce mild malaria, what are known as tertians. After a while it is noticed that quinine does not cause all of the parasites to disappear. Blood examination shows that the man is becoming anemic. An examination is made the day of the attack of hematuria. Very few parasites are found in the blood. The blood is only about half as rich as it should be—red cells 2,800,000 instead of 5,000,000; hemoglobin, 55 instead of 100 per cent. The coffee colored urine is examined. It contains albumin, casts, and coloring matter for the blood hemoglobin.

What has happened? The man began with an infection with tertian malarial parasites. He never succeeded in killing all of the parasites, though he frequently killed so many of them that what were left could not cause a chill. He was repeatedly reinfected. After a while the infection was with malignant or aestivo-autumnal parasites instead of the less harmful tertians. As the taking of quinine became more and more irregular and insufficient the number of parasites in the blood increased. Then came the day of the attack of hematuria. Most of the blood cells which contained parasites went to pieces. They dissolved in the blood serum. When this happened the malarial parasites turned loose in the fluids of the blood died. The dissolved corpuscles appeared in the urine as bloody urine or coffee ground urine. The number of corpuscles in the blood and also the percentage of hemoglobin diminished rapidly.

This is what happened when Dr. Ott injected ten grains of quinine dissolved in salt solution into the veins of the man. The water washed the debris out of the blood corpuscles from the blood. The quinine killed the malarial parasites.

There is no reason why malaria should take this pernicious turn anywhere in the United States. I have never known a case of malarial hematuria that had not had chills from time to time during the summer and fall. I think this is the experience of all men who practice medicine in the malarial districts.

A history of spasmodically treated, imperfectly cured malaria in the late summer and early fall is always given in malarial hematuria. This being true, malarial hematuria is a preventable disease. When the sale of chill tonics is prohibited by law and every person having chills is compelled by law to be completely cured then malarial—hematuria will disappear.

On large plantations where quinine is supplied at cost or less and every infected person is compelled to take enough of it to completely cure it has already disappeared. It is preventable.

The second reason that autumn malaria is especially important is because for the ensuing six months human beings will be the only malaria carriers.

The days of the mosquito are about numbered. With proper allowance for variation in latitude we may say that no more mosquitoes will breed before winter. However, some of the mosquitoes now living will survive for several months. But mosquitoes do not often bite after the weather, and especially the nights, become cool. During the warm hours of the day a few feed on human blood. Most of them are more interested in finding a warm place in which to lay up for the winter and in living through the chill of the night than in sucking blood.

Furthermore, the malarial parasites in mosquitoes will not undergo their cycle of development when the temperature of the night air is below 60. Unless the malarial parasite has undergone this cycle of development the infected mosquito cannot infect man. All in all, the danger of mosquito infection is practically at an end. As Edwards says: "During the winter, man not the mosquito perpetuates the disease." In order that there shall be any malaria next summer there must be people who will harbor the parasites all winter and these people must be bitten by anophelene mosquitoes next spring.

The number of infected people must be rather large. Ross in explaining the disappearance of malaria from Great Britain speaks of its reduction below the "endemic limit". When the number of human winter malaria carriers falls below a certain limit the chance that any mosquitoes will be infected the following spring is very small. This reason necessitates the opinion that in any malarial section the percentage of people malarial in the fall who will go into the winter with uncured malaria is large.

In the summer time if a man having chills does not choose to cure himself his folly hurts him more than it hurts anyone else. In the winter time a man infected with malaria may go uncured without hurting himself so much. The hurt he can and will do his neighbors becomes greater than the hurt he will do himself.

A man with uncured malaria may have a few chills during the winter. It has been proven that a warm spell in the winter time may cause latent malaria to become active. If a man with latent malaria gets wet or gets thoroughly chilled he may develop chills. Caccini gives the following factors which can cause chills to develop in a man suffering from latent malaria:

1—Absence of good food and health.
2—Gastro-intestinal troubles.
3—Fatigue.
4—Traumatism.
5—Sudden chills, damp and wetting.
6—Change of climate.
7—Certain foods and medicines.
8—Intercurrent sickness.
To these Ross adds:
9—Anxiety sorrow shock or fright.
10—Alcoholic or other excess.
11—Sudden exposure to a tropical sun.
12—Premature cessation of quinine.

While chills in winter are uncomfortable, they are not an unmixed ill. It is easier to cure active malaria than it is to cure latent malaria. Some people go to Hot Springs in winter that the hot and cold baths may convert a latent, relatively hard to cure malaria into an active and more curable one. Other people take Turkish baths for the same purpose. Still others pay a visit to a cold climate.

Once the malarial parasites have taken on the latent form they are difficult to poison. In cold climates [illegible] under the influence of baths latent form parasites change to active form parasites, whereupon they can be destroyed by quinine.

FIRST Remember it is a Proven District, the heaviest bearing and largest profit producing tract in Fresno County. A Thompson Seedless Vineyard on this tract, this year, 1916, and just 4 years old, sold on the vines, green, for $250.00 per acre. Emperors, 5 years old, are shipping now, with returns showing in excess of $400.00 per acre. Figs, 4 years old, Calimyrnas, are producing, this year, in excess of $300.00 per acre, and we want an opportunity to prove our every statement to you.

FOR A HOME No spot in California is more ideally located for a perfect and profit producing home, surrounded as it is on three sides by the mountains directly on the Santa Fe Railroad, perfectly desirable neighbors, the kind that always go into a high grade district, numerous improved ranches, producing the finest quality, and quantity, of Figs, Oranges, Lemons, Olives, High Grade Table Grapes, Raisin Grapes, Apricots, Peaches, Plums and every variety of fruit, berry and vegetable grown in California.

WATER A most abundant supply of water, pure, and soft, is secured at depths ranging from 50 to 80 feet, wells need but little casing, only sufficent for elimination of surface water, and for irrigation, a lift of from only 12 to 20 feet is necessary. One well will irrigate 20 to 80 acres of trees or vines, and will "hold up" under long continued pumping. Electric power is now on the tract, for pumping and domestic uses, no waiting for lines to be built. An 8 H. P. Gasoline Engine, and 4-inpump, well, and pit, complete may be installed for you for $600.00 and this is sufficient for 20 acres. Canals supplied from the unfailing Kings River, supply a portion of this tract, but irrigation by your own system is far more satisfactory, for you will want to use water in this locality later in the season than the ditches will supply on account of the longer growing season for vegetables. Electric power also on tract—no waiting, its there now.

SEE NAVELENCIA Its 24 miles east of Fresno—9 miles S. E. of Sanger, 8 miles N. GAST'S RE-TRIAL IS SET FOR DECEMBER 9

Paul Gast, Charged With Assault, to Offer New Evidence

Paul Gast, Fresno dealer in automobile starters, charged with assaulting S. W. Johnson on May Day with a knife, will be re-tried in Department No. 2 of the Superior Court on December 9. Gast is accused of having stabbed Johnson with a knife after the latter attempted to interfere with the former when he tried to compel his wife to get out of an automobile in Mariposa street.

Gast's defense is that he was incensed at his wife at the time and that he was further angered when his wife slapped him in the face. Gast was tried once several weeks ago and convicted. He demanded a new trial, alleging that all of the evidence in his defense was not obtainable at the time of the trial.

MOVEMENT BEGUN TO DEPORT PAUPER MEXICANS

District Attorney Will Ask U. S. to Enforce Immigration Law

Fresno County Now Caring for Scores of Families

Fresno County Supervisors have asked District Attorney McCormick to take up the matter of pauper Mexicans coming into Fresno county. In the past few recent months scores of Mexican men and women have applied to the supervisors for relief. Almost none of them could speak English. County Health Officer Dr. Long has treated numbers of them for various diseases.

District Attorney McCormick has had the matter under investigation for some weeks. It has been found that many of the Mexican families have been brought into Fresno county under false pretenses on the part of certain alleged employment agencies. The male members of the families in many cases gave up practically all they possessed to the employment agents to insure them work in the United States. In most cases the able bodied, men were promised work in railroad construction.

Fresno county has been taking care of scores of Mexican families during the past four months. Health Officer Long has learned from his investigations that many Mexican families in Fresno county but a few days from Mexico had smallpox and typhoid fever. In many instances quarantine measures were necessary, the entire Mexican camps being compelled to remain within a certain enclosure by peace officers.

Yesterday morning a woman and adult son, both Mexicans, applied to the office of the board of supervisors for money for food. Neither could speak English. Through a Spanish speaking Filipino, the woman said that the man with her was her oldest son, and that she had three other children. She said that she reached Fresno a few days ago with her children, after two months of hardships.

Neither the woman nor son could tell how they happened to be landed in Fresno. The son said he was hoping to join some friends in working a vineyard, but that he couldn't find his friends. The woman said she was depending on her oldest son to find work here in order to support her and his two younger brothers and sister.

There was no meeting of the board of supervisors yesterday morning and no official aid could be given the family. A collection of dimes taken from attaches in some of the county offices on the second floor of the court house netted enough to provide the Mexican family with food for several days.

While no definite plan has been determined on as yet, District Attorney McCormick says that he intends to ask the federal government to deport from this county and country all Mexican paupers who have not been here a year, and furthermore to do all possible to prevent the coming into the country of Mexicans who are liable to become dependent on the state.

COUNTY FAIR LOSS UNUSUALLY SMALL

Statement Shows Deficit of $1,450.24 Was Due to Rainy Days

That the Tenth Annual Fair of the Fresno County Agricultural Association would have been the most successful exhibition but for the inclement weather experienced during the closing days was shown yesterday in the final financial report of the five-day exposition. In spite of the rainy days the deficit shown is but $1450.24, which is a decrease of $5120.52 under the loss sustained at the end of the 1915 Fresno County Fair.

That the weather was chiefly responsible for the financial loss is shown by the fact that the grand stand receipts and box receipts during the season just closed fell $5323.90 under the receipts of the preceding year. With fair weather these receipts would have been doubled, it is figured.

The statements from 1915 and 1916 follow:

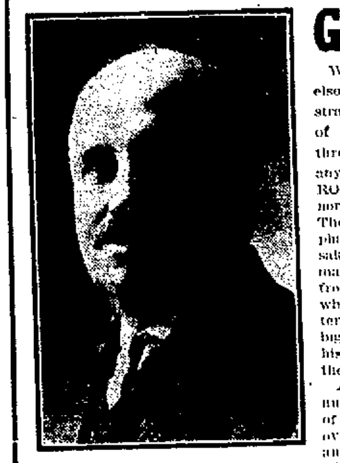
Your Help Is Needed To Make The Good Roads Bonds Carry Unanimously

Geo. C. Roeding and Good Roads



What is it above everything else that first impresses the stranger as to the substantiality of a community when driving through the outlying district of any town or city?—"GOOD ROADS." Can any farmer ignore the value of "good roads"? The word "No" cannot be emphasized too strongly. For the sake of argument, even if a permanent road is several miles from his farm, it is the magnet which draws him toward this artery, permitting the hauling of a big load of products, or bringing his family or himself to town in the shortest possible time.

As a farmer, fruit grower and nurseryman, handling hundreds of tons of the products of the soil over the roads of Fresno County annually, appreciating the great necessity for a change, and a very marked one, to have "good roads" as an actuality instead of the makeshifts we have today, this appeal is made directly to you to stand shoulder to shoulder in a solid phalanx and vote as one for the "Good Roads" Bond Issue on October 24th, for it is to you above every other interest the greatest boon you can have in increasing the value of your properties, lessening the amount of your taxes and keeping you in closer touch with the outside world.

Co-operation is the byword which looms up before the farmer today more strongly than any other one thing. You are demonstrating it in your associations for the marketing of your products and proving conclusively your ability to engage men to do as you direct. Do not let the word "fear" creep in at this time and question the ability and honesty of your public servants to expend the $3,800,000.00 for "good roads," except in the manner that is going to serve your best interests. The California State Highway stands out as a glorious example of the expenditure of public moneys in a manner causing great private interests to comment in the most glowing terms, not only on the thoroughness of the work, but on the economic lines in which the expenditure has been made.

The opportunity is knocking at our very doors. Can we afford at this time to even intimate that we are not ready to act? We have the example of the experience of our State officials in road building before us; we have more actual farms than any other county in California; we produce more products coming directly from the soil than any other County; we have a number of representative men who are ready to put their shoulders to the wheel to see that it revolves in the direction of economy and efficiency. Now, do your part and vote "YES" on October 24th, and once more demonstrate your belief in your "County," the greatest in the State of California, where harmony and progressive ideas predominate, and where the one thought is: That which is good for one is good for all.

(Signed) GEO. C. ROEDING.

W. M. Barr, of Sanger. and Good Roads

As a citizen and taxpayer of Sanger, I take pleasure in stating that I am strongly in favor of the bond issue for good roads now before the people of the County.

I am in favor of it as a matter of convenience, advancement and improvement, but more than all as one of economy.

I look at this only as a beginning, for after a trial of roads such as we will have under the proposed system, no one would be without them and will be quite willing to help pay for a good permanent road rather than such as we now have, especially when the fact is forced home on him that it will cost no more in the long run to build this system than it will to maintain and keep in repair, with due apology to the repair, our present system of dirt roads.

Our three road commissioners are well known, reliable, responsible men and they should receive our support on October 24th, not for their good, but for the good of every man and woman in the county who uses our roads.

(Signed)

W. M. BARR.

Fresno County Should Not Be Satisfied With A Mere Majority, It Should Vote "YES" Overwhelmingly

The Good Roads Advisory Committee calls upon every voter in Fresno County to help in rolling up a big majority in favor of the bond issue next Tuesday, so that Fresno County may tell the world that it stands for progress. The necessity of a good roads system has been proven beyond cavil. Every objection, every opposing argument has been met and answered satisfactorily. Fresno County stands solidly for this great improvement, and now it remains for the voters to turn out en masse on next Tuesday and vote "Yes."

Let everybody do their part, and Fresno County will witness an era of prosperity far beyond the expectations of the most optimistic.

There is hardly a person in Fresno County who has not realized the benefits that accrue from co-operation.

The same spirit that has prompted co-operation in the matter of marketing the crops should be manifested in this movement for the betterment of Fresno County.

Good roads mean closer contact with the markets, it permits a better understanding of your neighbors because you will see them oftener. Good roads will intensify the spirit of co-operation which has brought wealth and happiness to thousands of raisin and peach growers and will make possible the perfecting of other similar organizations until eventually Fresno County will be co-operative from one end to the other.

Every phase of the situation has been covered in these advertisements, meetings have been held to explain the advantages of good roads and individuals have been working hard to desseminate information so that all may become familiar with the details of the bond issue and the plans for the construction of good roads.

Every voter is now in possession of every bit of information available and is guaranteed by the Advisory Board that the construction of good roads will be handled in an economical and efficient manner.

There remains nothing more to be said, but there remains one thing to be done and that is that every voter go to the polls and vote "Yes" next Tuesday.

N. C. Blanchard
Good Roads

Nearly everybody has heard the story of the man who held the penny so close to his eye that he could not see the dollar that was within reach of his hand. I cannot help thinking that those who oppose the good roads bond issue are very much like this man. So far I have not heard of anybody who will admit that they do not want good roads, but there are some who oppose building them by a bond issue, and advance sundry reasons why they think this is not the right thing to do, but as yet I have heard only one good reason given and that is that they don't want to pay the small extra taxes. I should hate to think that there are enough of this kind of people in Fresno County to defeat this great enterprise. We all want good roads. Let's build them now, and pay while we use them

The bonds will supply the money. Let's vote the bonds.

(Signed)
N. C. BLANCHARD.

Tuesday Is Election Day

On Tuesday Fresno County Will Decide For Progress Or Retrogression

We cannot stand still. We must either go forward or backwards.

If the bonds do not carry we will retard the progress of Fresno County and if the bonds do carry Fresno County will go forward by leaps and bounds.

Mr. Voter! It's up to you!

The Advisory Committee and every individual in Fresno County who has the best interests of the county at heart is looking forward with confidence in you to do your duty and give to Fresno County an opportunity to progress and prosper.

MAX HOEN DESCRIBES ZEP RAID ON LONDON

A description of the Zeppelin raid on London, in which one of the Zeppelins was burned in mid-air, is given by Max Hoen, former Fresno boy, in a letter received by Sig Levy yesterday. Hoen, who was filling an engagement in London, saw the Zepp approaching London and saw it burst into flames and fall to the ground.

He also wrote briefly of entertaining British and French soldiers in trenches from which Germans had a short time before been driven. The letter follows:

"Just a few lines to tell you about some of the excitement we are having over here. The letters out of France are not censored, so I can say anything I please. We will be back in England in a few days, and I will have to stop telling exactly what is happening.

"There is very little to tell you about France. It is of England, but there are a few things here that you might be glad to hear about.

"Most of the places of interest are closed until after the war, so I didn't get to see any of these sights, but we, with some other artists, were taken out almost to the firing line to entertain the soldiers. In fact, we were in some of the old trenches which the Germans have been driven out of.

"We didn't do any of our shooting turn because they see enough of that. I did some recitations and sang some popular songs with my ukelele, and the others did their little bits. The show lasted about two hours, and, believe me, they were a great audience. The stage was some boards placed upon sandbags. The soldiers were mostly French, but there was a sprinkling of Tommies among them. Of course the work was all gratis, but I was well paid in war trophies. I have enough to fill a small sized trunk. I have some 'bears,' believe me.

Describe Zep Raid

"Now, we'll go back to England. We were in the Zepp raid of September 2-3, and it was a wonderful sight, although kind of bad on the knees. Mine hammered together so much I lost a lot of skin. The first warning we had that there was anything wrong was at about 10:30 Saturday night. We were playing the Coliseum, and after the show we tried to get something to eat, which is our regular custom, but all the places were closing and wouldn't admit us. I thought it was queer, because they usually stay open till 12:30. The next thing I noticed was that the police were holding up all the taxi drivers and making them cut down their lights to the least possible glow. I remarked to my wife that something was wrong somewhere. When we had gotten to our hotel and up to our room I heard the bobbies yelling in the streets to the people in the different buildings to 'Put out that light.' That cop would have made a great baritone to sing off the top of the court house on a windy day. There seemed to be a lot of bone-heads along our street, because he was at it for over an hour when he finally gave up on one house and yelled, 'Hey, you, in 36, put out that light! The Zepps are coming!'

"We sat up by the window for a long time, waiting to see if he was right, but there was nothing showed up, so we hit the hay. I had been asleep for some time when I was awakened by my wife beating a tattoo on my short ribs, and she was whispering, 'Oh, my Lord, the Zepps ARE here.' And, sure enough, they were. We got up and went to the window, and we could see the shrapnel breaking every few minutes, but could see no Zepp. Finally with her sharpshooter eyes she saw it, and I didn't think it was a Zepp at first, because the shrapnel wasn't breaking anywhere near it. (I found out afterward that they were shooting at another one.) Well, the one she pointed out looked like a big red cigar about ten inches long. Then there were two tiny red lights off to the left of the Zepp, and immediately the firing ceased. I couldn't see why they had stopped, because the Zepp was in plain sight. It sailed along, getting redder every second. Then it wavered, tipped down on one end, came down for a few feet and got on an even keel again. Then the back end went slowly up and she burst into flames and streaked it for the ground. SOME SIGHT! There was cheering from all sides.

"We made a mad scramble for our clothes and went out on the street to find out how close it had fallen. It looked to be not over a mile, but I know how near some of those forest fires in the mountains look, so I didn't start that night, but the next day with thousands of others we were on our way to get a look at it. Instead of a mile, it was nearly thirty. The day was wet, and we were soaked before we got out to where it was. All there was left of it was a tangled mass of wire and the heavier parts. I was fortunate enough to get a good sized trophy, which is against an order sent out from the home office. You are not allowed to keep anything you find in a case like that. They are now selling little pieces of the Zepp made up into rings, pins, etc. There was very little aluminum in this machine. It must have been a very old one.

Hundreds Killed

"On September 23 there were two more Zepps brought down, and there was no shortage of aluminum in them. The damage they did was frightful. Hundreds of people were killed and dozens of houses were wrecked. That's about all for the Zepps.

"I'll tell you something about our experiences while crossing the channel to France.

"We left London on Tuesday, arrived in Southampton that evening; passed through the customs and by the inspectors, which takes hours, and went on board. Well, the boat was jammed with people who had been there for two days. The port had been closed on account of the presence of four submarines in the channel. There were accommodations for 250 people and by the time our trainload got on, there were 50,045. They were sleeping on deck, in the hallways, in steamer chairs, on the dining room tables and every place. I picked out a soft spot right near the pantry and the first morning I was awakened by the cabin boy who dropped a loaf of bread on me. There was a notice posted that anyone who wanted to abandon the voyage could do so, but they were all fine stickers.

Ham and Chicken

"Well, we had to eat three meals a day on that boat, which was only supposed to give you breakfast. We had ham and chicken and then chicken and ham. If you were fortunate you got an egg. It was like an ocean voyage as regards getting acquainted. All the Americans palled together. I got out the ukelele and led all the singing. We had Elinore Franklin Egan among us and she told us of some of her experiences. She writes for the Saturday Evening Post.

"Anchored right in front of us was a big man-o'-war. She seemed to be a mother ship for all the new little submarine destroyers, which England has built to cope with this new warfare. They look something like a very fast motorboat. They are driven by a twin set of six cylinder motors and on the fore deck is mounted a rapid fire gun. It looked to be about a three pounder. There were over a dozen of them and each morning they would leave and come back late in the evening.

"Rumors are peculiar things. This one that started said that three submarines had been caught and the third one was being brought into our port that evening. The rumor was right for about dusk, in came four of these little "babies" with a sub. between them. We couldn't tell much what they had done to it but it was there.

Passengers Pray

"That night we pulled out. Everyone was cheerful but nevertheless scared. We all tried on the life belts to see how they would fit and kept them handy. All the lights were out and when we got out about an hour, we could hear the people back in the second class praying at the top of their voices. It sounded like a camp meeting. If the remaining sub. had ears it would have gotten us sure. We hit some pretty rough water, and little Max, who is a bum sailor, got sick and went below. I was too sick to think about subs. That was the first time I had slept in a berth since we got on the boat. This was Saturday night.

"We arrived without mishap at Havre at 6 a. m., and anchored in the harbor until 2 in the afternoon. When we got orders to dock we grabbed our luggage and waited another hour for the inspectors to let us off the boat. Then into a line a mile long to have our passports stamped and then we had our baggage examined. Well, when they saw those guns of mine they nearly had a fit. Those Frenchmen waved their arms, eyebrows and mustaches. I had a devil of a time. Couldn't understand a word and there wasn't anyone who could speak English to help me out. I showed my contracts for the Alhambra and Olympia in Paris but it was no use. Finally I gave it up and sat on the trunk cursing all foreign countries. Leone had to get a baggage wagon to haul the stuff over to the railroad station, so when she came back everything was all right, because she speaks French.

Women Handle Baggage

"After three attempts we got the baggage over to the station. Of all the rotten baggage systems they have it in these countries. Particularly at the present time. The men are all at the front and their places have been taken by little boys or women and I can't stand by and watch a woman or a boy try to handle my heavy trunks. It would be useless for me to try to describe the pushing, pulling, dragging and hauling that we had to go through to get the stuff weighed. As it was we missed the nine o'clock train for Paris and had to take the next one. Along the way we passed trainloads of cannon, big shells, etc. About half way to Paris I saw hundreds of little locomotives. There were five tracks parallel and at least three miles long. They were all small engines like we use on dump trains. I was very curious to know why they were there, so I asked when I got in Paris. They are all the Belgian railroad engines. They have been stored there until after the war.

"That just about tells all of our experiences to Paris although I have left out a lot of details.

"Our prospects of getting back to England are getting fewer every day. I have just come from the American Express Company (I am writing this in installments) and they tell me there hasn't been a boat in from England in four days and stated positively that there would be none in this week. If we are going to make our date in Bolton, Oct. 5 we will have to swim."

Why Suffer With Backache, Kidneys or Rheumatism, Now?

Letter Tells of Long Looked-for Prescription.

Dear Readers:—I am making a personal appeal to those of you who are bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and rheumatism, to give up the use of harsh salts, or alcoholic kidney medicines that you know nothing about, and in their place take a short treatment of "An-Uric" and be convinced of its superiority, as I was.

I have taken many of the kidney medicines but none with the results of "An-Uric." I am so pleased with the curative properties of this wonderful prescription that I cannot say enough about it.

You've all undoubtedly heard of the famous Doctor Pierce and his well-known medicines. Well, this prescription is one that has been successfully used for many years by the physicians and specialists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for kidney complaints, and diseases arising from disorders of the kidneys and bladder, such as backache, weak back, rheumatism, dropsy, congestion of the kidneys, inflammation of the bladder, scalding urine, and urinary troubles.

Up to this time, "An-Uric" has not been on sale to the public, but by the persuasion of many patients and the increased demand for this wonderful healing tablet, Doctor Pierce has finally decided to put it into the drug stores of this country within immediate reach of all sufferers.

I know of one or two leading druggists in town who have managed to procure a supply of "An-Uric" for their anxious customers in and around this locality.

At any rate don't give up hopes of being cured of your malady until just a few doses of "An-Uric" has proven that it will make you feel like a different person.—E. L. R.

The Reason

In the tremendous opposition against prohibition in California there is a reason.

The 525,000 voters who registered their opposition to it in 1914, did so:

NOT because it is a question of a glass of wine or a glass of beer.

NOT because it is a question of whether prohibition prohibits.

NOT because it is a moral crusade. IT IS NOT.

There is nothing moral about ANY kind of legislation which will:

DESTROY (without compensation) $210,000,000 of invested capital in this state.

There is nothing MORAL about any kind of legislation which will:

Take away the livelihood of 293,000 people in California and tell them to "go hunt for other employment." There are women and babies to be considered in that kind of MORALITY."

There is nothing moral about any kind of legislation which:

VIOLATES THE LIBERTIES of 525,000 persons in California and says to them:

"If you don't like it, you have your choice of either VIOLATING the law we hedge around you, or, YOU CAN MOVE OUT."

No; nothing moral about that.

It is not a question of a glass of this, that or the other.

Not even a question of whether prohibition prohibits.

These 525,000 people in California registered their opposition to prohibition, because it is a question

Whether the RIGHTS, LIBERTIES, PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS, and PROTECTION OF PROPERTY INTERESTS, guaranteed us under the Constitution, fought for by our forefathers a century and a half ago, SHALL BE MAINAINED or RUTHLESSLY DESTROYED by fanaticism, paid "reformers" and political agitators.

Let us see where this prohibition mania leads us to.

The following letter, first published in the New York Sun, signed by Herman Trent, and copied by the Sacramento Bee, Oct. 7, 1915, is a forewarning of the present prohibition wave:

"I will say I regard the Anti-Saloon crusade as MERELY THE BEGINNING of a much larger movement—a movement that will have as its watchword 'Efficiency in Government.'

"If I had my way I would not only close up the saloons and the race tracks; I would close ALL TOBACCO SHOPS, CONFECTIONERY STORES, DELICATESSEN SHOPS and other places where gastronomic deviltries are purveyed—ALL THEATERS and BATHING BEACHES.

"I would forbid the selling of gambling devices, such as playing cards, dice, checkers and chess sets. I would forbid the holding of socialistic, anarchistic and atheistic meetings. I would abolish the SALE OF TEA AND COFFEE, and I would forbid the making or sale of pastry, pie, cake and such trash."

Let us look still further:

The Associated Press under recent date carried a dipatch from Denver to the effect that Attorney General Fred Farrar had announced that "under the state prohibition law the use of MINCE MEAT, PLUM PUDDING, MACAROONS, BRANDIED PEACHES and similar delicacies, containing a certain content of alcohol, would be in violation of the law and consequently had been put under the ban."

In prohibition Portland, Oregon, MINCE PIES are being analyzed and confiscated when found to contain any brandy flavoring.

In Salem, same state, a baker was arrested a few weeks ago for selling a can of pork and beans on Sunday.

In Marshfield, same state, the power of the district attorney's office was invoked to stop a dance.

This is prohibition.

In prohibition Oklahoma, the use of bowling alleys and billiard tables has been prohibited.

In certain sections of the South, where prohibition reigns, it is unlawful to play checkers, dominoes or chess in any gathering place for the public.

Senator Davis, of prohibition Kansas, at the last session of the Kansas legislature, proposed 68 bills, most of them of prohibitory nature, and among these was a bill prohibiting women from USING FACE POWDER and FALSE HAIR.

Representative McGinnis, same state, same session, proposed a bill prohibiting women from using bleaching materials and PERFUME.

The prohibition legislature of Virginia considered a bill providing that "no female shall appear in public wearing a skirt that does not reach within four inches of the ground or a waist or bodice which exposes more than three inches of the chest or back."

This is prohibition.

At the First Baptist Church of San Jose on July 22nd last, the Tobacco Prohibitionists started their crusade in California, advocating the abolition of tobacco in every form.

Prohibition North Dakota has prohibited Sunday baseball and closed its picture theaters on that day.

Representative Edward Carroll of Leavenworth, Kansas, president of the First National Bank of that city, speaking against another prohibition measure during a recent session of the Kansas Legislature said:

"There is no law on the statute books that has caused more SIN and HYPOCRISY, CRIME and PERJURY than has the Prohibition law.

"It has been the shield in cases of rascality and viciousness and the sucking of blood money since the day the law was enacted.

"There are no laws in Russia more UNJUST, VICIOUS or CRIMINAL than the Prohibition laws written in Kansas in the past thirty years."

Prohibition has a beginning but NO END.

Every minute detail of a man's life, personal habits, customs, rights, privileges and liberties are brought under its crushing and liberty suffocating ban.

PROHIBITION ONCE EMBRACED, GOES STARK MAD.

Amendments 1 and 2 mean Prohibition.
Vote No on Both.

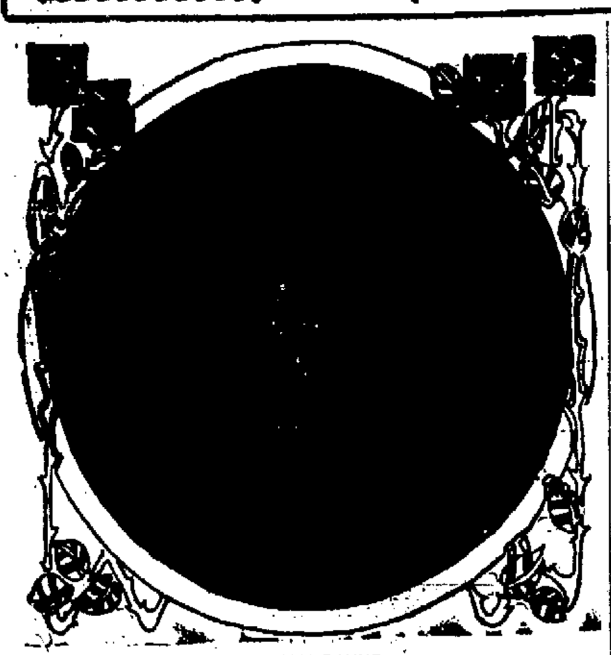
STAGE DRAMA SCREEN



BEVERLY BAYNE
as "Juliet" in her recent screen co-operation with Francis X. Bushman as "Romeo"

The motion picture version of "The Whip," in eight reels, will be acted by Irving Cummings, Dion Titheradge, Paul McAllister, Warren Cooke, Alfred Hemming, Alma Hanlon, June Elvidge and about 20,000 miscellaneous persons divided between the Saratoga race track and the annual horse show at Long Branch.

"Billy" Garwood will make an excursion from the screen to the stage in a Morosco production of "On Trial" in Los Angeles.

Business is good in Montreal's burlesque vaudeville and legitimate houses, due in part, the managers believe, to the prohibition orders.

Irving Cummings, remembered as the star in "The Diamond From the Sky," is now a permanent World Film star.

Henry Hull, hero in "The Man Who Came Back" at the Playhouse in New York City is to appear in his first motion picture with Robert Warwick under the direction of Emile Chautard.

Maurice Tourneur is now directing Mary Pickford.

Paul Panzer still wears the monocle which figured so prominently in his make-up in "The Perils of Pauline" four years ago.

There are only three men who can command a salary of $1,500 a week Robert Warwick, Douglas Fairbanks and Francis X Bushman.

Mary Miles Minter has been fourteen years old since 1910.

Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers are now breaking dishes for Vim comedies.

Doris Kenyon will appear in "The Empress" for Pathe.

Carlyle Blackwell has been married 200 times in motion pictures.

Ethel Clayton positively refuses to work at night. She will work from six in the morning till six at night if her director will ask her to, though. But nix on the night stuff.

Frances Nelson has finished her last picture, "The Revolt," with the World Film, and has signed up with the Rolfe-Metro company. She is actually at work under the direction of W. Christie Cabanne.

King Baggot, who for a number of years was Carl Laemmle's leading male star on the Universal program broke his contract with that concern rather than consent to go to Universal City when the eastern forces were moved, bag and baggage, to the western film making city. King has amassed quite a little fortune of his own in the past few years and there is a well-founded rumor that he will shortly start a producing company of his own, in which he will be the star and director.

Mary Fuller, who left the Universal at the same time as King Baggott, is undecided as to her future. Mary had a contract calling for $500 per week for the past two years, and as she has always been careful with her money, it is estimated that today Mary is worth $100,000, well invested and bringing her such a satisfying income that she need not work again. However, Mary loves the work, and we may hear from her again soon.

Time for Movies to Move

It seems to be time for the "movies" to move.

The development of plays on the screen has been on the whole the most extraordinary development of a hundred years. With the exception of the invention of printing, the movies have had more influence upon humanity than any other single agency that this tired old world has seen, heard or experienced.

Since the first beginning of movies there has been a wonderful advance in the mechanical part; great strides have been made in the purely pictorial features; but the literature of the movies has not advanced as it should. The plays are not as good as they ought to be. The movies are still vamping around with vampires and crooking with the crooks.

There was a time, several years ago, when novelists and playwrights had a few such spasms. They told stories about dope fiends and crooked detectives and tough women blackmailers and other unlovely characters. But they soon gave up these subjects

In real life we do not care for dives, and we do not care for the companionship of those who inhabit dives. If the literary portrayal is a faithful representation of the real thing, then the crook story is quite a sunpleasant as the crook. If it is not true to life, then it has no reason at all for being.

What applies to the printed page applies with greater force to the screen. There is really nothing interesting about the "eternal triangle," about tough detectives or infamous burglars.

The chief reason why these characters continue to inhabit and afflict the screen is the uneasy suspicion of the movie magnates that they "bring people to the box office." Of course, the exact opposite is the case. The financial problem of the movies is to bring into the film house that part of the public which does not now attend such performances. They will always be able to hold the devoted "movie fan." This new traffic is not to be induced by crude plays about the gutter.

The movie author of the very near future will be found writing about the people who live next door; about their problems and their trials and their sunny days and their dark days. This is where really great literature lies. Crooks and vampires are put into stories only because nobody really knows them and it is easy for crude literary penetration.—Los Angeles Times.

To Conduct Musical Tour

An entirely new feature in the musical attractions to be noted this season is the New York Chamber Music society of which Carolyn Beebe will appear not only as pianist but she will undertake the entire business and artistic direction.

Miss Beebe expects to take this body of eleven men and her interesting self on an extensive tour, and she has no more fear of caring for the transportation, arrangements of halls, business details, etc., than she has to face a "capacity" audience.

The organization is different from all others now before the public, inasmuch as it is composed of strings, wind instruments and the piano. The New York Chamber Music Society has been most successful in its New York concerts at Aeolian Hall and there seems to be a heavy demand from many musical centers throughout the country.

Atmosphere.

The iron jawed landlady who is always trying to collect room rent from the lovely heroine.

The boob in the seat ahead who tries to be funny during the pathetic scenes.

The automobile chase and the villian's fall over the bluff.

The idiotic usher whose one idea is to make you sit where you don't want to.

The heroine who makes up like a circus poster.

Little Mary Sunshine with her antics that make you laugh and live longer.—By the bye, Balboa is having six new plays written for her to be released through Pathe.

The fat lady that sits next and pushes you over so that you lean like the tower of Pisa.

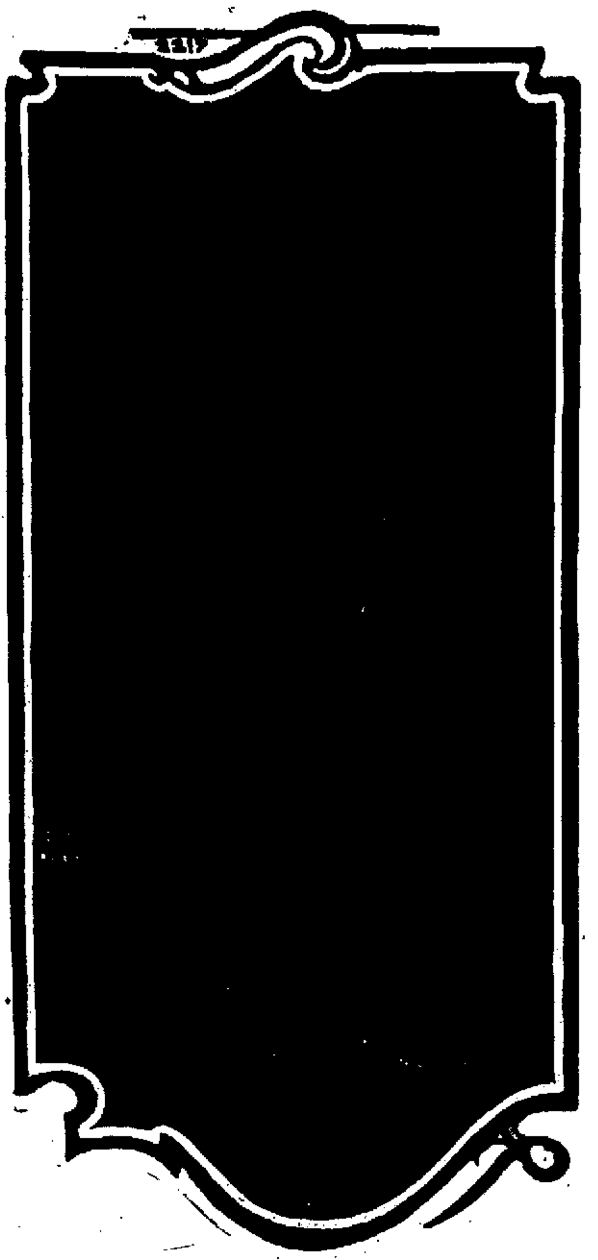
Appeal to the Lewd

The Universal Film Mfg. Company, under the guise of the "Anti-Vice Motion Picture Company", showed a picture at the Maxine Elliott Theatre called "Is Any Girl Safe?" As with its "Where Are My Children" the sign "No children under sixteen years of age admitted" was hung up. Although there were not many under sixteen inside the theatre, there were many in short skirts and young boys attracted by the possibility of witnessing something nude or rude on the screen. It did quite a land office business until the police department interfered and closed the showing, another black eye against the industry.



PAULINE FREDERICK

No sooner had this film been banished but the Universal, this time under its own name, announced the showing of "Idle Wives" with Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley. As a matter of suggestion, it advertises, "Idle Wives and the devil awhispering close by". The same sign barring children under sixteen is hung up.

The Universal does know how to make good, clean, healthy pictures. Ella Hall in "Jewel" was one of the best pictures ever filmed, and we are safe in saying that not a better picture has been made since. Seeing that the Universal knows how to make good pictures, why doesn't it employ its vast resources in the exploitation of such photodramas as will tend to elevate the industry rather than drag it in the mire?—Lee's News Letter.

Wanted—Scenarios

The Oliver Morosco Company wants strong, dramatic stories for its stars, principally Vivian Martin, Dustin Farnum, Myrtle Stedman, Kathlyn Williams and Lenore Ulrich. The Company offers to pay $1,500 each for complete stories adapted to its needs or upon which a complete photoplay may be founded. This story may be either in synopsis form 500 to 2,000 words each, or may be in the form of a book or a short story. The Company especially desires modern society dramas, with comedy relief, with carefully worked out and logical plots, with happy surprises, small casts, and good acting parts rather than the general run of "mechanical dramas".

War as a Fashion

Modelled after the coat worn by an Italian officer was the smart wrap of tornado blue velour donned recently by Ruth St. Denis at a fashionable gathering. Italian gray, a smoky shade that contrasted admirably with the stormy surface color, lined the garment. A long cape swinging at the back in severe hanging lines was dashingly thrown over the shoulder by Miss St. Denis, achieving a distinctive note of bravado hitherto almost foreign to her.

Inhumanity In the Movies

William Jennings Bryan and Henry Ford, Chaperones of the Dove of Peace, could have had an ideal day in the Lasky studio, where Paramount pictures are produced, last week.

That wonderful air "Man's Humanity to Men," permeated the entire studio. Nothing but sympathy, love kindness and devotion was shown by the different actors and directors.

In one part of the grounds for the Lou Tellegen production of "The Victoria Cross," the Sepoy Mutineers were playfully shooting down women and children within the walls of Cawnpore. Over on the stage, Theodore Roberts, as Anton, in "Anton the Terrible," was committing suicide while right next to him Maria Doro was beating Veda McEvers with a riding crop for the Lasky production of "The Lash" in which Miss Doro is starring.

Still further along, Blanche Sweet was having a fight with an old woman for the production of "A Woman's Victory." Fanny Ward was watching her mother die from witches' potions for her production of "Witchcraft."

It was a great day and much regret was expressed that William and Henry could not have been there to see the wonderful effect their peace propaganda has on the photodramatic art.

"RAISING POULTRY for HOME AND MARKET—"

SOME POINTERS FOR AMATEURS AT POULTRY

Study and Patience Will Soon Master Mysteries

Thousands Are Finding Health and Pleasure in Industry

By G. R. SMITH.
Author and Practical Poultryman.

The call of the hen is abroad in the land. It is luring, persuasive and eloquent. Thousands are listening to it, and in most cases this "call" is compelling: the realization often proves more pleasant than the anticipation.

Multitudes are drawn toward the culture of fine fowls. They are fairly impatient to get at the business, but they are first asking a very sensible question. "How shall I begin?" It is very important that this query should be well answered. A leap in the dark here will be bad for the leaper and bad for the work itself.

This spring will be an excellent time to begin, yet it is none too soon at this moment to get plans on paper and theories by the end.

In the first place—one must have the real "chicken fever." There is not much doing without this. A zeal, whether "according to knowledge" or not, is the first asset in the business. No man has the "root of the matter" in him until he prefers to think more about chickens than anything else.

There is a hundredfold more in the breeding of fine chickens than the uninitiated suspect. It is a nation-wide game. Yes, it is world-wide; for, before Europe was torn by the present cataclysm, international poultry conventions were being held. This world-wide movement will advance with increasing speed when the people again have peace. Meanwhile we Americans must make the most of our opportunities.

"Chicken fever" used to be laughed at as a weakness. Today it is applauded as an eminently worthy and timely zeal for an avocation that challenges the best there is in the biggest brains and the fattest purses. It is no child's play—it is a man's job.

Read and Acquire Theory

Every human likes a pet, and this is the real secret of the poultryman's enthusiasm. There is a native love for every beautiful animal, although this love may be dormant for years. Thousands of people know nothing about beautiful fowls, and therefore care nothing about them.

Cultivate in your soul a worthy zeal for the peaceful bird that not only lays and pays, but fills the eye with beauty, and satisfies the mind. Study poultry books and magazines, the standard of perfection and the agricultural bulletins; note the pictures and descriptions of each breed of individuals, trios, pens and flocks, and from these select a breed that is best suited to your particular locality, ideas and purposes.

From books and papers you get not only enthusiasm, but "wisdom," which is the principal thing. You'll find this especially true in poultry culture. It's not only the man who feels, but the man who knows, who will get most pleasure and most profit from the breeding of good fowls. Peruse the books and papers, therefore, as the lawyer and the doctor, the preacher and the professor daily search for the latest findings of the foremost specialists in their respective lines. You can't get too much theory, if it is of the right brand, before you begin.

Choose a Breed That Pleases

Do not begin with mongrels. You may get as many eggs; but your interest in poultry culture will soon weaken. Choose a breed. There is something about thoroughbred stock that fascinates the eye and compels and holds the interest. Domestic blooded fowls are not registered; but if your pen is of pure bred stock; your admiration of it and your zeal for its care and its increase will be tenfold greater. Insist on the highest type of aristocracy in your poultry yards. A little "caste" among your birds will mean more cash in your purse and more courage in their culture.

Decide definitely what you want to do. Study the breeds exhaustively—there are scores of them. Their temperaments are as various as the tastes of the people. There is the heavy, slow, sociable and easily controlled Light Brahmas, the largest breed in the world, and second to none in beauty and in dignity of bearing. There is the sprightly and beautifully spangled Hamburg at the other extreme in size and temperament. If you want eggs "first, last, and all the time," pick from the Mediterranean class They are beautiful, they do not get broody, they are famed the world over for their laying qualities; but they are high-strung little animals, and will need correspondingly high fences and a higher grade of tact and patience in caring for them.

If you desire not only eggs but meat and motherhood, and at the same time fine feathers and forms that will lay successful siege to your esthetic sensibilities, try the American class— the "Rocks," Barred, White, Buff; the "Dottes" Columbian, Silver, Golden, White, Buff, Black, Partridge, Silver-penciled; the Javas, Black, Mottled; the Dominiques; the Buckeyes, or the Rhode Island Reds. If you desire purely fancy fowls, try the so-called "Ornamental" classes. There is no taste or fancy or utility purpose that cannot be fully satisfied.

Get Everything in Readiness

A henhouse is the first consideration in the way of preparation. One of the most delightful experiences of a poulterer's beginning is to build a new henhouse according to the latest ideals, and then stock it with a fine flock of pullets of his favorite breed.

It will not be necessary to purchase a large number of thoroughbreds at once. All the better if you are financially able; but if economy must be practiced, a splendid trio of breeders may be purchased now and the house filled up with cheaper grades for laying purposes until such time as they can be replaced by the offspring from the thoroughbreds bred from the full bloods, and the inferior stock may be disposed of at the end of the laying season. Next year the house may be filled with beautiful birds of your own production.

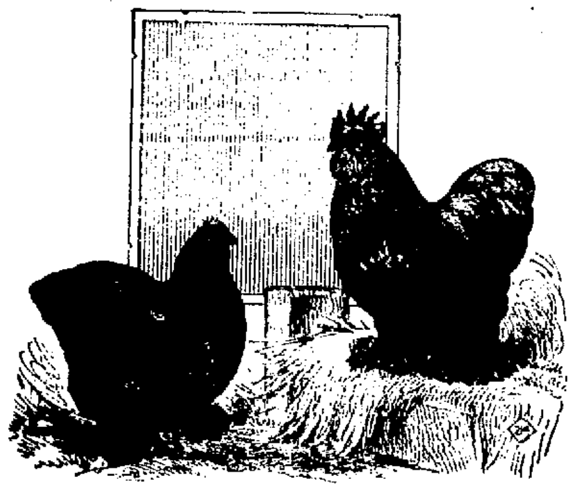
There are many kinds of houses, many of which are claimed by their respective champions to be "the best." A few general principles must be kept in mind. Other things are among the non-essentials. A dry location with drainage away from the house; southern exposure; largest possible daily bath of sunlight; plenty of fresh air—but no deadly drafts; comfortable and ample sleeping quarters; the greatest possible conveniences for keeping the house clean, and for the general care of the flock winter and summer and under all conceivable circumstances.

Strain, Stamina and Health

It is well to purchase foundation stock from a strain that has a solid reputation for "heavy laying" qualities. There's a difference. Some hens are loafers instead of layers. The poultryman who does not discriminate from the very beginning will be likely to lose his interest in the work. Nothing keeps the amateur's zeal at white heat so much as a steady supply of eggs winter and summer.

Insist above all things on strong stamina and perfect health in the fowls that you purchase. Be certain that you get no weaklings for your cash, and no victims of roup or other dreaded poultry diseases. Test newly-purchased birds by themselves a few days before putting them in pens with stock that you value highly.

It must never be forgotten that Poultry Culture is a fine art. It isn't unskilled work. To master it requires years of study and experience. The amateur who begins with this full understanding of the case will run little risk of failure; but if he enters upon the work with the idea that "any one can keep hens," and that there is nothing in it that requires study and patient investigation and experiment year after year, he may regret soon that he ever entered the game. Thousands are finding pleasure, ideal recreation and not a little profit in this great and rapidly growing modern industry. There is ample room for thousands more.



Crested White Ducks

This variety of ducks, which is formally recognized by the American Poultry Association as a distinct breed, is rarely shown at the winter exhibitions, chiefly on account of lack of classification, but often at the large fall fairs a score or more will be exhibited. As a rule, they are white in plumage, like the Pekin Duck, and of approximately the same size. They have orange yellow legs and beaks, and are noted for a large crest or topknot of feathers on the back of their heads. This must be firm; the larger it is the better the specimen.

Their origin is indeterminate. Crested White Ducks have no especial utility qualities which are not possessed by the famous Peking. Their breeders state that they are good layers and grow well, developing equally as fast as the Peking. Although possessing these utility qualities, breeding stock would necessarily cost more because of its variety, and those endeavoring to establish a commercial duck farm would naturally stock it with Peking or Indian Runners because they could obtain the naturally large quantity of breeding ducks at considerably less cost.

The drakes weigh six to eight pounds, and the ducks five to seven pounds, according to age. The ducks are good layers and will sit, hatch and rear the ducklings.

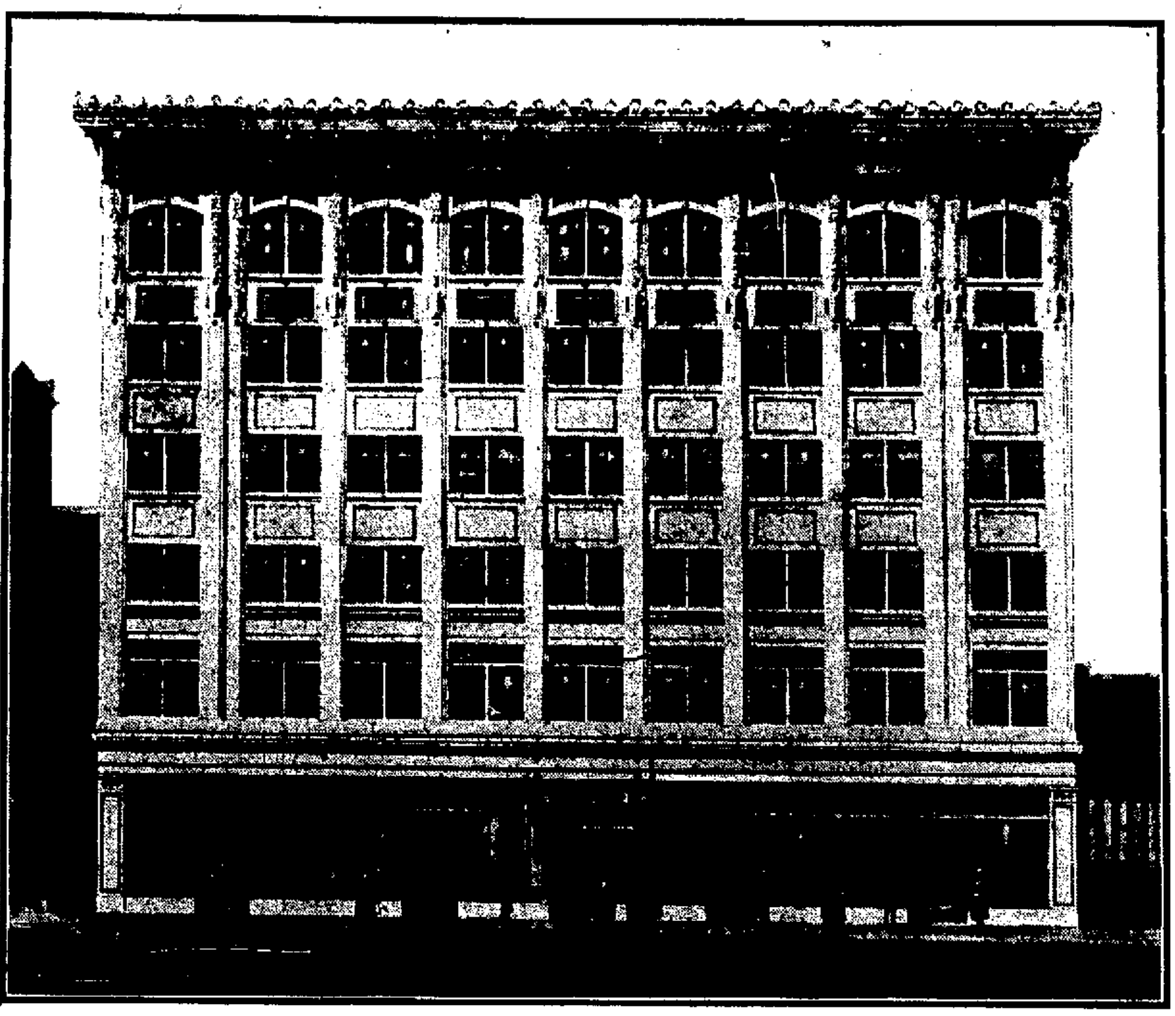
MATHEWSON HAS PLANS FOR NEW MASON BLOCK ACCEPTED

Six Story Ultra-Modern Office Block to Replace Old J Street Building

ESTIMATED COST ABOUT $165,000

Four Stores on Ground Level, 25 Rooms in Each Floor Above

Perspective of six story building to be erected by Mrs. Nellie Mason of New York on J street near Mariposa; estimated cost is about $165,000; Plans are accepted.



Following closely upon the announcement that Mrs. Nellie Mason of New York would erect a six-story, modern office building to replace the old Mason block on J street, adjoining the Bank and Trust Company of California and Patterson buildings, came the second announcement yesterday to E. Mathewson, an architect of this city, that his plans for the building had been accepted.

A short time ago tenants of the old block were given notice that the new building would be erected. All have made preparations to go into new quarters.

With the acceptance of the plans of Mathewson, the preliminary work to the letting of the contract will be attended to as quickly as possible.

Mathewson yesterday received the announcement from Mrs. Mason, who is now in New York, that his plans have been accepted, and instructing him to proceed at once to get them ready to let the contract. Mrs. Mason had invited a number of architects to make competitive plans. Mathewson was the only Fresno architect to compete.

The building, it is said, will be one of the most complete office buildings in the state. In addition to having all standard conveniences, such as electric passenger and freight elevators, vacuum cleaner, steam heat, compressed air and special pipe for the doctors' and dental offices, all fixtures throughout the building will have hot water. Plumbing fixtures and all toilets are to be so equipped that the cold water supply can be shut off and all fixtures flushed with boiling water, insuring perfect sanitation. All plumbing fixtures will be of the very latest pattern. The lavatories in all the doctors' offices will have Treadle valves.

The building will be a Class A structure, fireproof, with cement floors and roof, and tile partitions. The street front will be of light gray pressed brick with terra cotta trimmings. The building will have an ornamental marquee full width of front instead of just on the entrance as shown. The exposed openings in rear and side walls will have metal frames and metal sash glazed with wire glass.

The basement will be full size of the building and project out under the sidewalk. The boiler and machinery room will be in a separate building in the rear. The first floor will contain four stores and will have access to the alley with plenty of light in the back as well as in the front. The five floors above will be typical, each having 25 offices, besides ladies' and gents' lavatories, janitor's room, electric and hose reel cabinet.

The main lobby and hall will have tile floors with marble wainscoating. The first floor and entrance lobby will be finished in quarter sawed white oak.

One feature out of the ordinary is that no mouldings will be used. Every part of the woodwork will be strictly plain. Flush doors will be used throughout and these will be hung on invisible hinges. The reason for using plain finish and doors is to do away with all crevices and leave no places for dust to accumulate. The building is especially adapted for dentists and doctors, and it will have every modern sanitary feature. The building will be six stories in height with a 100 foot frontage on Jay street and will be 75 feet deep. The cost will be approximately $165,000.

Hubert Bryant of Fresno is the local agent, whose persistent efforts over a period of six months or more has resulted in the consummation of this project.

COMSTOCK CRUDE IS STILL WORKING LEASE

Report That Lakeview Was to Finish Well Said to Be Erroneous

MARICOPA, Oct. 21.—Reports that work on the Comstock Crude lease is in charge of the Lakeview No. 2 Oil company that have been circulating for the past 10 days are declared by L. N. Comstock, president of the Comstock Crude company as false and he states that the Comstock Crude company is still in charge of the property and development work and that he is the only person in charge of the property for his company. He further stated that the rumors were probably started by persons who learned that he had in his employ some drillers who were formerly employed by the Lakeview No. 2 Company.

The Comstock Crude No. 1 well is being prepared to permit drilling ahead and the 3-inch casing which was landed at a depth of 4,600 feet has been pulled out preparatory to carrying the 4 1-2 inch casing with which the hole was drilled to its present depth, down to the oil sands which was thought to lie about 100 feet deeper. Good indications are present in the hole and large quantities of gas and some oil are always present, necessitating that the pipe be kept filled with water to prevent frequent blow outs and interference with the work of the drillers.

OFFICIAL INSPECTS OILFIELD RAILWAY

MARICOPA, Oct. 21.—C. L. McFaul, district freight passenger agent for the Southern Pacific company made a tour of inspection over the Sunset railroad line to the west side oil fields last week. The Southern Pacific company expect to take over the line on November 30 on its agreement with the Santa Fe system for the operation of the line on an alternative 5 year period scheme. The Santa Fe will have operated the line for a period of five years on November 30 and on that date will turn it over to the Southern Pacific for a like period.

Local agent F. G. Matteson will undoubtedly be retained by the S. P. company as many business men have written to the company requesting that his services be retained as agent of the Maricopa depot.

MIDWAY OILMAN TO TRY RANCHING

MARICOPA, Oct. 21.—Mel Harding and family left today for Santa Paula where they will make their home on a ranch owned by Mr. Harding near that city. Mr. Harding has been identified with Maricopa and the oil industry in the Sunset field for the past six years and for the past year has held the responsible position of superintendent of production for the oil companies in charge of government receiver Howard M. Payne. He resigned his position with the receiver about two months ago so that he could move to his ranch where he intends to make a home for his family and improve the property. His many associates in the oilfields regret the fact that he is leaving as he has always taken a prominent part in everything that has had for its purpose the advancement of the community and the good of the oilmen or oil business.

NEW BOILER LAW TO BE OBSERVED

MARICOPA, Oct. 21.—Oil men from all over the fields are at present preparing to comply with the new laws passed by the state legislature at the recommendation of the State Industrial Accident Commission in regard to putting certain safety appliances on steam boilers and boiler plants on leases in the Midway Sunset fields. The new laws make it compulsory for the owners of boilers to comply with the law before January 1, 1917. One of the principle changes ordered under the law is the changing of feed water from the blow off to the front end of the boiler. Other changes take in various things which add to the safety of the employes about the boiler house. George Sausman of the Maricopa Boiler Works has familiarized himself with the changes necessary and has now a crew of men at work on several plants making the alterations.

OIL MEN ENJOY SMOKER

MARICOPA, Oct. 21.—Members of the Kern Employes club enjoyed a smoker at the club rooms on Thursday evening when a large part of the membership was present to take in the splendid program offered by the club's entertainment committee. To start the evening off six good fast boxing bouts were staged between local and imported amateur talent. These exhibitions were of a high order and furnished those attending with many thrills and ended without a knockout for any of the combatants. After the boxing a few musical numbers were enjoyed and then all partook of a fine Dutch lunch which had been spread by the house committee. With the coffee and cigars the members enjoyed an instructive monologue given by Prof. Frank Anderson who has just returned from several years of travel through Central and South America. His talk related to the trip through the countries of Columbia and Bolivia and along the Amazon river. Another smoker will be held by the club members during the month of November.—

Poland and Belgium will be discussed by the lecturer at the next two meetings. The lectures deal with the latest conditions in these war-ridden countries, as well as their earlier history and development. The third and last lecture will be on Spain.

The Raymond lectures have been more popular than ever this year. Dr. Raymond has shown himself to be a deep student of the history of European nations, and those who have attended his lectures are loud in their praise of the speaker.

WHITE THEATER

Glittering, glorious, with all the splendor of a stupendous Eastern pageant, is the latest offering of the justly-famous New York Winter Garden, "A World of Pleasure," which pays its initial visit to this city at the White Theater tonight.

In a special train of eleven cars this huge company will stop off here en tour of a circuit comprised of only the larger cities of the West and South, arriving on the Southern Pacific at about 1:30.

On its visit to this city the production will be identically the same as it was during its remarkably successful runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and other large cities of the East. And there will be the superb cast for which Winter Garden shows have become noted. Included in the name of stage celebrities are such important personages as William Norris, the noted comedian; Conroy and Le Maire, the never-failing laugh-getting black-face artists; Wanda Lyon, the very charming and talented young Salt Lake artiste; the famous Courtney Sisters, who contribute their full share of entertainment; McMahon, Diamond and Chaplow, ex-vaudevillians of the headliner type; Franklin Batie, the extremely pleasing and manly young dancer; Collins and Hart, those grotesque and eccentric burlesquers; Margaret Edwards, the "perfect girl" and dancing wonder, who is said to even surpass Ruth St. Denis in her classical interpretation of the art of terpsichore; and Rosie Quinn, that child-like and charming young beauty who has become the particular pet of the Eastern theater-goers.

Scenically speaking, "A World of Pleasure" surpasses in its scenic investiture and grandeur, all of its predecessors. In two glittering acts and nine gorgeous scenes it is a revelation of the art of scene building and painting. Nor has Dame Fashion neglected to display her handiwork in the costuming of the hundred or more members of the chorus. While the "ponies," "broilers," "squabs, or call them what you may, smaller girls, are dressed more lightly and with a view of not hindering the movements of the dance, the stately queens of the show-girl role are veritable fashion plates, living models so to speak, for the display of the last word in ultra fashions. Each change of costume in which they appear is greeted by the feminine members of the audience with delighted "ohs" and "ahs." And purely as a method of introducing this pandora box of wonders are two score of musical numbers of the irresistible toe-tapping variety.

Orpheum

Kajiyama, the clever little Japanese who is one of the headliners on the Orpheum bill that opens Tuesday night at the White Theater, a few months ago was doing some work in a business college in New York when a vaudeville agent heard of a chap who could write words at the same time with both hands. The next Kajiyama knew he was on the stage. First it was only to secure money with which to complete his education. Now Kajiyama's weekly salary is more than he had ever hoped to make in a month. The Japanese is a wonder and has astonished audiences in every town that he has played. He writes upside down, backwards, two words at a time and picks the words to pieces and writes new ones. He permits the audience to select the words and the harder the better.

A Comedy of Today "The Recoil."

Miss Clarie Vincent, who appears at the head of her own company in "The Recoil," began her stage experience at the age of sixteen as Jessica in the Merchant of Venice and it wouldn't be fair to tell how long ago her initial performance was made. She recently played the leading roles in the "Lion and the Mouse" and "Paid in Full." Miss Vincent is appearing in the comedy which deals with the wife who tames her wayward husband. The playlet carries a moral, a good one, that is driven home amid a lot of comedy.

Variety of Dances.

The Morin Sisters are two clever dancers and have appeared in several of the big musical comedies. They have a unique act, good costumes and their turn is one of the pleasing ones on this week's Orpheum show.

"Helping Hubby."

Pielert & Scofield are a riot in "Helping Hubby." Pielert does some clever juggling stunts while Miss Scofield "helps" him with a line of chatter that finally gets his goat.

"Whirling Geisha Girls."

The Lunette Sisters, two shapely maidens, give an attractive aerial act that borders on the work of art. They do ballet dancing while suspended in the air by their teeth from an apparatus which is revolving with great velocity.

Jolly Jester.

Walter Brower is a monologist who keeps his audience in an uproar from the moment he hits the stage until he leaves. His troubles deal mostly with marriage.

Orpheum Motion Pictures.

There will be new Orpheum pictures every week, on this week bill the pictures will close the show.

Daughter of the Don

Probably the most beautiful and romantic as well as the most educational photodrama to be given in Fresno in many a year is "The Daughter of the Don," produced by the Monrovia Feature Film company and which will be shown at the White theater for three days beginning Friday night, Oct. 27. The advance sale for the picture's premiere in Los Angeles at the Majestic theater, is the largest recorded in that city for any screen production.

The ten reel production tells the romantic and at the same time authentic story of the winning of California from Mexican rule in the days of '46 and '47. Immense sums were expended in reproducing the old Los Angeles plaza and Fort Hill stockade where battles were fought, as well as parts of quaint Santa Barbara and Monterey. Thousands of men were employed in the battle of the San Gabriel which decided the fate of California. In the opinion of the critics of the Los Angeles dailies, the visualization will have a life that may only be counted in years. It should be seen by every resident in California. Every child of school age should be afforded the opportunity to view it for its instructive value is great.

"Canary Cottage"

"Canary Cottage," the scintillating Oliver Morosco musical success, is due at the White theater on Friday and Saturday nights, November 3 and 4, including a Saturday matinee.

With its joyful book and lifting music, its star cast of fun makers, its futuristic scenery and bizarre costumes, and, of course, its girls, "Canary Cottage" has all the ingredients that make for success, and it is as certain of making the East sit up and take notice as it has the West. It will be taken to New York shortly by Oliver Morosco.

Everything that goes to make up "Canary Cottage" is away from the ordinary. The book by Morosco and Elmer Harris is original and witty, properly spiced and offering all manner of laugh-getting opportunities to the company. The music, by Earl Carroll, also has the elements of originality and is of that popular type that persists in haunting one when away from the theater.

The company boasts of many notable musical comedy players, Trixie Friganza buxom and merry as the "cook lady"; Charles Ruggles as the suave Jerry Summerfield, who makes love to the canaries on the slightest provocation; and Herbert Corthell, unctuous and distinctive, lead in the funmaking.

Then there are Dorothy Webb, Eddie Cantor, Leila Lucey, Grace Ellsworth, Carl McCullough, the Edwards Brothers, Elsie Gordon, Olga Marwig and the much-talked-of chorus of canaries.

FRESNO PHOTO

This week will see the presentation of a number of feature attractions with several new stars including Mary Miles Minter.

"Aribella's Prince" at the Fresno Photo today, is one of those delightfully humorous "old maid" stories which appear frequently in fiction but seldom on the screen. It is one of the most whimsically charming pictures of short story length which the Mutual has released.

Billie Rhodes, New Player, Makes Appearance.

If one yearns for comedy, surely they will find it today and its all good comedy, too.

Billie Rhodes will be seen on the screen in a two-act comedy of the stage called "Foiled." Orral Humphrey as Si Green, a country "jay," who enters the big city bent on sight seeing in "A Boomerang Gold Brick," is funnier than ever. You can easily guess by the title of the comedy just what happened.

Making Officers in "Reel Life."

The manner in which officers are trained for service in the United States Merchant Marine is vividly shown on the screen in "Reel Life," the Mutual film magazine. The second section of this reel is entitled "Making a Gown in a Minute." With bolts of various cloths, the designer pins a costume of the latest fashion upon his living model. The fiction section is devoted to another tabloid photodrama—"What Would You Do If—."

"Fantomas" Series Tomorrow.

To those who have watched the famous master crook of fiction, "Fantomas" escape through the very fingers of the law when they have already closed upon him, in the first three episodes, the fourth will bring another thrill.

It's called "The Crooked Detective" and will be seen tomorrow and Tuesday.

Dainty Sweet Mary Miles Minter Makes Debut.

The irresistible, smiling, happy little beauty, Mary Miles Minter makes her debut in "Youth's Endearing Charm," the sweetest story ever told Wednesday and Thursday.

James Kirkwood who directed all the big Mary Pickford successes including "Goldie Mary" as director. The Mary Miles Minter productions are an exceptional work of film craft. The American Company has spent thousands of dollars for the plays—stories by America's greatest authors

Typical Pickford Story.

In appearance Mary Miles Minter resembles Mary Pickford closely, and those who have played with the vivacious little star, say that the reputation that she will attain will make the resemblance still more striking.

Mary Miles Minter As "Little Orphan."

As "Orphan Mary" Miss Minter gives a fascinating interpretation of the role of a desolate girl who, after a battle with starvation in the slums of the city, is committed to an orphan asylum and later bound for a cruel family of farmers. It's a special feature in six acts—the biggest and best of productions.

William Russell Coming.

William Russell (Big Bill), the star of "The Man Who Would Not Die," is coming to the Fresno Photo Friday. He is one of the most popular actors who has ever appeared on the screen. No one can know "Big Bill" without liking him. He is big, manly, whole-hearted; he is kind and considerate. In action, tenseness of story, settings and thrilling climaxes "The Man Who Would Not Die" stands as a film achievement.

BIJOU

The Bijou announces as its feature today "The Triumph of Truth" with Cleo Madison in the leading part.

The story is built around a girl that is saved from the watery grave, but does not recover consciousness soon enough to discover the real hero. Thus another has the opportunity of lying to her and saying that he is the man to whom she is indebted. In this way he hopes to gain her affections. The plan fails only because the other man returns and the truth comes out.

It is a big sea drama, one of the most stirring that has ever been seen and Cleo Madison is at her best in the part of the fisherman's daughter.

"Tillie's Terrible Tumbles" a three reel comedy is another feature that the Bijou will offer today and it is a comedy that every one will enjoy. It tells of a poor mistreated washerwoman who is wrongfully accused of murdering her husband, how she escapes, is captured and finally released when the husband comes to life.

Monday another episode of the "Mysteries of Myra" will be shown. This serial grows more interesting with every episode and crowded houses everywhere testify to its popularity. It is pronounced one of the most successful serials that has ever been portrayed.

Francis Ford and Grace Cunard of "Peg O' The Ring" fame will be seen in a two reel drama Monday entitled "The Princely Bandit". The many admirers of these to popular stars will be glad to read of this announcement.

Tuesday's program calls for the Animated Weekly, "He Becomes a Regular Fellow" a comedy and a strong drama, "The Angel of the Attic". This is a story of a noted artist who establishes himself in the slums and there meets a poor orphan whom he falls madly in love with.

She discovers him as famous only after she has learned to reciprocate his love and tries to run away but is finally made to listen to reason and all ends well.

"The Caravan" is the name of a desert drama that will be shown at the Bijou Wednesday. It's a thrilling story of a trip through the desert, a shortage of water caused by the treachery of a servant, the attempt to burn the heroine by religious fanatics, only to be thwarted by the timely appearance of a slave girl as witness and various other adventures that are astonishingly true to life.

"Little Brownie's Bravery," a drama and "With the Pints Help" are also scheduled for Wednesday, making an unusually strong bill.

UNDOING A THIEF.

A Scottish farmer was selling wool one day to a carrier and after weighing it he went into the house to make out an invoice. When he came back he missed a cheese that had been standing on a shelf behind the outer door. Glancing at the bag of wool, he observed that it had suddenly increased in size.

"Man," he said to the carrier, "I hae clean forgot the weight o' that bag. "Let's pit it on' the scales once mair."

The carrier could not well refuse. The bag was, of course, found to be heavier by the weight of the cheese inside. A new invoice was made out and the crestfallen carrier went away.

The farmer's wife at once missed the cheese and rushing to the yard told her husband that some thief had stolen it.

"Na, na, Meg," replied the farmer, quietly, "I hae just selt the cheese for twa shillin's the pund."—London Tit-Bits.

THEATER FRESNO

Today and tonight conclude the week-end vaudeville show at the Theater Fresno, which has set a new mark for popularity and attendance.

A matinee performance will be given this afternoon at 2:30 and two more showings this evening —the first at 7:45 and the second at 9:30.

The hit of this week's vaudeville alignment is the act of The Gallons, who are seen in an improvement of the delightful comedy, juggling act in which they were seen last season at the Orpheum.

The male member of this clever team is a veritable "Charlie Chaplin," and his unique comedy makes him a distinct favorite. Both of The Gallons have a natural talent for tossing things and arresting their downward course before they hit the floor, that is marvelous.

So far above the ordinary, and stereotyped juggling "Turn" is this act that the Gallons get an ovation at each performance.

Three Harmony Kings Are Talented Soloists

Harmony reigns supreme at the Theater Fresno for the last half of the week, in the delightful act of the Three Harmony Kings. Their Trio selections are hugely enjoyed, and the solo work by each individual evokes no small amount of applause. It is the Hawaiian medley, with which The Three Harmony Kings close their act that brings them back for many a bow.

World's Greatest Ventriloquist

Hugh Emmett the renowned ventriloquist is a pronounced hit of this week's show, demonstrating many new tricks of voice throwing, that give him a place in the front rank of the World's eminent ventriloquists.

Mr. Emmett also proves an accomplished violinist, and delights his audience with many clever imitations.

Nifty Lily Lewis, the dainty danseuse contributes a generous share of the enjoyment, and Collins and Lee are seen in a number of original dances that create widespread enthusiasm.

The vaudeville entertainment is unquestionably beyond criticism and the photo plays are highly pleasing. The antics of Mutt and Jeff are shown in a comic film, "Indestructible Panamas", while many a thrill is furnished by an Essanay drama.

KINEMA

Lots of variety comes today, in addition to big society play. Holbrook Blinn, famous in speaking stage annals, will be seen with Ethel Clayton in a new theme called "Husband and Wife." The theatergoer in the know will respond to the other names in the cast, for such artists as Emmett Corrigan and Montague Love are also in leading roles. They won't be disappointed either, for the acting of these capable players is even better that the play. To tell the truth, they are too good for the play.

From Stage Play by Charles Kenyon.

The play is taken directly from Broadway, where it played for a good run, with Robert Edeson as the lead. The story hinges on a misunderstanding between a bank cashier and his pretty wife. She spends lavishly on clothes and cards, and, the husband is compelled to embezzle to pay the bills. Just as she is to leave the country with another man, the shortage is discovered by an accountant. A fifty-fifty compromise is affected and, in a rather forceful climax the way out of the tangle is managed.

Norma Talmadge in "The Social Secretary Tomorrow.

Here is a deft, clever and sure-fire entertaining comedy, made particularly attractive through the beauty of Norma Talmadge. In her case, she proves that being beautiful is the worst handicap—she can get a job all right enough, but holding is another thing. The role is one full of humor, and, one does not have to take it so seriously as one of those tragedies of life. An effective and excellent play indeed.

Fighting Bill Farnum in a Smashing Type Wednesday and Thursday.

Brawn and fast action make this the best "Bill" Farnum play since "The Spoilers." Farnum, again has one of those virile powerful roles in which he revels, and his work is decidedly convincing and impressive—while his brawny strength is to the fore on more than one occasion. There's no wasted footage either—every bit counts big.

James Oliver Curwood's "God's Country and the Woman" Next Friday.

The biggest play of them all is "God's Country and the Woman," which comes at the week-end. It's a massive 8-act production.

WEEKLY COMMENTS

By Charles H. Shinn

Charles H. Shinn.

We have a little tale to relate, and we hope that all who hear it will help to spread it abroad, for it is worth the long and loving remembrance of Californians.

Professor George Holmes Howison taught philosophy at the University of California for twenty-five busy and fruitful years. Seven years ago he retired, becoming "Professor emeritus" but continuing his earnest, far-reaching mental and spiritual activities—as he will forever.

Among his students were such men as Royce of Harvard, Stratton and Rieber of Berkeley, Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins, and a dozen more who are leaders in logic and philosophy in great institutions of learning. Howison has been worth more to California than money could begin to measure.

Now, Prof. Howison and his wife have given the accumulations of a frugal, hard-working lifetime, helped by some Berkeley real-estate investments, and totaling about $70,000, to the university. Everything has been transferred; they have a small annuity from the income. There will be a Howison Fellowship, and (in honor of Mrs. Howison) a Lois Caswell Fund to help women students. Besides these items there will be other scholarships, the upkeep of some beds in the Infirmary, and a general aid to the Department of Philosophy. The details respecting this entire gift give it unique interest for Californians; look them up at leisure.

But how this honors the Howisons, the University of California and the teaching profession generally. We wish that there might be more of this sort of thing—the long useful years of toil, the quiet savings, the endowment so that one's life-work can be carried on to better purpose.

Of Jacob's Line

Come to think of it, much of the world's greatest literature has been created, lived, written down by the chil- of Israel. What is our Bible but a collection of stories, poems, traditions, laws, customs, histories, of unsurpassed interest? How much we owe to the Jews (so foolishly despised by sillies and stupids), how many great men and women of this ancient stock are at the front in music, art, literature science, philosophy as well as in business!

Sometime we mean to tell our readers a little more about several very useful, very lovable leaders in human progress who are Jews of the Jews. At present we wish to mention one of the younger Californian novelists, Miss Emma Wolf, some of whose first work appeared in the new series of the Overland Monthly, in the middle eighties. She was born, educated and has always lived in San Francisco, and her first novel appeared in 1892. A new revised edition of this—"Other Things Being Equal"—came out the present year, and on re-reading it the critic is impressed by its excellence. It is the story of a fine Jewish girl, Ruth Levice, who loves a Christian physician; it describes the exquisite family life so general among Jews of the best type. There is a father of whom any daughter might well be proud—and, of course, the racial problem, fairly met and nobly handled. This book which A. C. McClurg & Co of Chicago publish is certainly worth a careful perusal. It is a charming love-story, and yet the best thing in it is the way it sets forth the perfect daughter-father relation.

Miss Wolf's last novel is named "Fulfillment"; and, will bear thrice reading. There has not been a more human and better expressed novel of San Francisco life these many years. Two sisters, orphan children of a university professor are in the midst of life's battle. Gwen is the beauty, full of impulses "ideals and sincerities"; Deborah, the home-keeper one of the Heath girls, is good angel all through. Gwen's marriage-problem works out in the end, chiefly because of so much sister-love of the real sort which throbs through all these pages. Some of our modern problem-novelists, given the beginnings of Miss Wolf's plot would have dropped things into the caverns of passion, divorce and selfishness. Miss Wolf does much better; her people grow, climb, live by the moral law, fulfill themselves gloriously.

ROY CHAPMAN ANDREWS,

No Californian writer has given us a better novel this year than is "Fulfillment" which the Henry Holt Co. issue at $1.35 net, it is already in its fifth printing.

We believe that there is a level where men and women of different nations or races can meet and work together in perfect understanding. No one who has ever known the Jastrows, the Joseph Fels crowd, the Zangwills, the Rabbi Voorsangers, can fail to lose all sense of racial separations. Miss Wolf's heroic old Jules Levice comes to believe that "There is one God for all humans"—That wipes out the odious "Jew and Gentile" division; Scott's glorious Rebecca (in Ivanhoe) taught this to some of us in our childhood. Just read Miss Wolf's books in exactly the same spirit in which you read Mary Austin, Bertha Runkle and Catherine Norris.

Freedom-Loving Filipinos

How many Americans have studied the people of the Philippines with a single-hearted purpose to understand their hopes, their rights, and their possible future. Most of us only know that it is a big question, and one that we must settle for the best interests of all concerned. It is certainly one of the cases in which counsel has been too often "darkened by words without wisdom," by selfishness. "The Case for the Filipinos" is the name of a well-written and moderate book, which surveys the history, makes the argument and sums it up with telling effect.

The author, Maximo M. Kalaw, is a Filipino, and 25 years old. He was educated in the public schools, and the University of the Philippines, and is therrefore "A product of the American system of education, as established in the Islands. He came to the United States in 1911, as private secretary of the Hon. Manuel L. Quezon, who is Resident Commissioner in this country for the Filipinos."

Mr. Kalaw graduated in law from the Georgetown university two years ago. He has great earnestness and eloquence as a public speaker, as well as decided literary talent.

The "other side" of the subject has been put before the public in the writings of such men as Dean C. Worcester, who was for nearly ten years a leading member of the American government of the Islands, by numerous official reports and popular lectures and by much "promotion literature." Mr. Kalaw has the "legal mind." He brings out the documents, shows that the Filipinos had all but won their freedom when we took the Islands, they have a well developed national spirit and ample ability to govern themselves. Do Americans want to hold an unwilling subject-race?

Mr. Kalaw, like ex-President Taft, and President Wilson, think not. Neither will any careful student of this book.

The national hero of the Philippines is Jose' Rizal, whom the Spanish executed in 1896. He wrote a poem to his beloved country, the night before he died. A translation of it is in this book, and it shows what Filipino stock can do. He says such things as this:

"When my tomb, that all have forgot,
no stone nor cross marketh,
There let the laborer guide his plow,
there cleave the earth open.
So shall my ashes at last be one with thy hills and thy valleys
Little 'twill matter then, my country, that thou shouldst forget me!
I shall be air in thy streets, and I shall be space in thy meadows,
I shall be vibrant speech in thine ears,
shall be fragrance and color,
Light and shout, and loved song, forever
repeating my message."

There is true national spirit here, and it will not perish. The Filipinos, we think, must have their entire freedom at the earliest practical moment. This book which is worth study, comes from the Century Co; presses, and costs $1.50 net. Read it, and if you agree with its presentation of the facts, do all you can to create the Philippino Republic. You know that our last Congress increased the electorate there from about 20,000 to 800,000.

Real Psychologies

"Psychology," the science of the human soul (from psyche and logos") is a thing so difficult, so wonderful, so easy to "muss up" or misapprehend, that it has been the favorite browsing-ground of dreamers and charlatans in all times and countries from South Africa to Lapland There are those who explain everything by what they are apt to term "psychoanalysis." The more worthless, more dangerous of them go further and write books about what they term "sex-psychology!" Usually they call themselves "psychologists" and evolve reams of morbid print.

Forget them; turn to the real ones. Here's one of the leaders; Dr. Joseph Jastrow of John Hopkins and University of Wisconsin. He is a very fine, able, modest and useful scientist and edits for the Appletons a note-worthy "Conduct of Mind" series. His own contribution to this series was on "Character and Temperament." Other contributors were Dr. G. Stanley Hall, Prof. Munsterberg, and a dozen more.

The volume upon "Vocational Psychology" is written by Dr. Harry L. Hollingsworth of Columbia. He is young, only 30, but has hammered out seven or eight books in his line. For several years he has been making experimental and comparative studies of the various methods now used in selecting a vocation; character-analysis, ways of selecting employees for different kinds of work, the use of psychological tests and other methods in such enterprises, the value of impressions based on the physical appearance of the individual, the photograph, his letters of application, the judgments of his associates, etc. This sounds practical, and as one reads

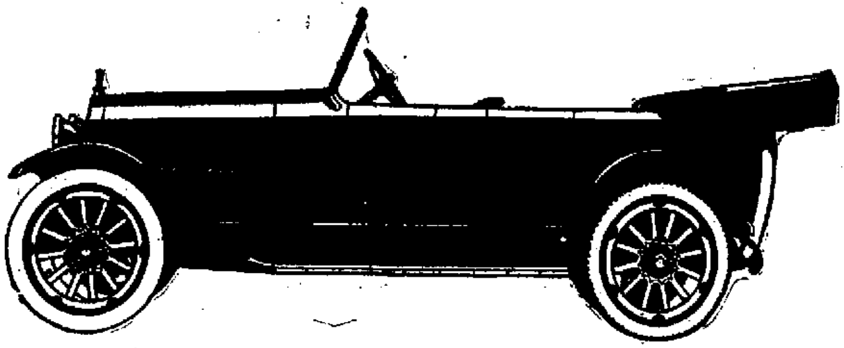
A Long, Low, Hammock-Slung Body



SO low are the lines of the car—so sweeping and rangy—that the 125-inch wheelbase and the long, rakish body produce a beautiful impression of mighty length. Yet the car turns within a 42-foot circle, making for ease of handling in city traffic and in bad places in the country.

The stream-like, roll-edge body is generously roomy and hammock-slung. In consequence, all who ride in the car are given the feeling of security which comes only from being in a car close to the road—a car which actually clings to the road at all speeds.

Yet the clearance is ample for every condition of driving — a most essential factor in any car not built only for the boulevard.

Divided front seats with an unusually wide aisle—auxiliaries disappearing into the backs of the front seats—the wide and deep rear seat—the ample tonneau room—the rich, lustrous finish, constitute a triumph of coach-building, even for Jeffery.

The chassis is simplicity itself. A whole set of shafts, rods and levers has been eliminated by the Jeffery emergency brake. The torque and radius rods have been done away with by having all driving strain absorbed through the extra heavy, extra long rear springs.

If you could once see the Jeffery chassis as the road sees it, you would understand why it is famous for "stand-up" quality. Simplicity is the mother of durability.

Studebaker Six, Seven Passenger Touring Car $1085

Announcement

There will be no change in the present series of Studebaker cars for several months to come. It has not been necessary to make any changes in Studebaker cars to increase their popularity or stimulate public demand.

Even with a great increase in Studebaker production from 5000 cars a month to 8000 cars a month, Studebaker cannot meet the present demand, and there is no indication that it will be able to meet the future demand for some time to come.

The present series of Studebaker cars were first announced to the public in June, 1915. Refinements and improvements were added in January, and the new series at that time called the "'17" car.

Since then, no company has been able to dislodge the leadership of Studebaker in its class. No company has been able to offer greater value, higher quality, more power, greater beauty of line, or better riding qualities, than the public finds in the present series of Studebaker cars.

Seventy thousand of these cars have been sold since the original announcement, and the success of these cars in giving satisfaction and service is the one thing which today makes it impossible for Studebaker to keep up with the steadily increasing demand.

The present series of Studebaker cars have been sold in all parts of the world—more particularly in all parts of the United States—and whether the service was in metropolitan centers or on the rough, Rocky Mountain stage routes of the far West, Studebaker cars in power, in stamina, in dependability, in exceedingly low repair and maintenance expense, have established a splendid reputation.

Seventy thousand owners testify to the worth of the present series of Studebaker cars. Is there a better guarantee for you to consider in making your investment in a motor car, and is there greater assurance that the buying of a Studebaker car is a real investment; and if you should care to sell it in the future, is there a better guarantee that you would be assured of the highest possible resale price?

*We have just received a liberal shipment of new Studebakers.
It will be a pleasure for us to go over the Golden Chassis of this car, point by point, and demonstrate the car against any competitor on any road.*

MOTORING PROBLEMS SOLVED For REPUBLICAN READERS

The writer purchased a rebuilt [illegible] Ford touring car about two weeks ago. While out riding the driver stalled the engine, and upon trying to crank same found it to be in gear—that is, the whole car moved forward when the crank was turned. This was remedied at the time by screwing down the clutch lever screw that bears upon the cam operated by the emergency lever. However, it was necessary to remove the lock nut from this screw in order to screw it down sufficiently to release the clutch. The other day the same thing occurred, but screwing down the clutch lever screw does not seem to help matters. If you will advise through your column what the trouble is I shall greatly appreciate the favor.

Ans.—The solution to your problem is at the clutch lever screw. You may have screwed it down too far. Experiment with it until you get it right. If the screw is badly worn get a new one and try again. If you have had to remove the locking nut it may be placed on the lower end of the screw.

I have a 1917 four-passenger car with springs evidently designed for an [illegible] truck. The rear springs are of the ordinary three-quarter style with six leaves to the spring two inches wide, the total thickness of which immediately over the axle is 1¾ inches. There is little or no flexibility to them with only the driver riding, and only when there are six or seven passengers crowded into the car do the springs respond to a rough piece of road. Would it be practicable to take out a leaf of spring. If so, which would you advise, the shortest or one of the middle length, the long ones on bottom or half-length ones on top? Would it help any to take springs apart and clean and lubricate them?

Ans.—Your trouble is partly stiff spring and partly dry spring. Remove rust from each leaf and cover thoroughly with graphite grease. Replace, leaving out shortest leaf. If this is not sufficient remove middle leaf. It would not be advisable to weaken the spring any further, as there would be danger of breakage when car is filled with passengers.

Can a person drive a car for owner provided it is not for hire, and does insurance cover same if owner is not in car, car being insured in full?

Ans.—According to New York state law any friend of the owner, eighteen years or over, may drive the car with the owner's permission, if he does not do so for hire, whether the owner is with him or not. Unless it is distinctly stated in the insurance policy the insurance on the car does not cover any and every person driving it.

Will you please let me know of some remedy to waterproof a gray mohair top of an Overland car without changing the color, as same leaks very badly.

Ans.—Inquire at any large supply store for the dressing you require. If in doubt about it try it on some inconspicuous part of the top. We cannot recommend any special article on the market.

Why is the two-cycle engine no longer used on automobile. If it is successful as a boat engine why not as an auto engine?

Ans.—The two-stroke cycle engine does not have the range of speed of the four-stroke cycle engine. This is not a detriment in a boat, where one speed is all that is needed. But an automobile must be run at different speeds merely by operating the throttle. As the four-cycle engine speeds up it gains power. The two-cycle engine is best and strongest at low speed. As it speeds up too far it begins to miss explosions. Many attempts have been made to remedy the defect, but none have attained any great success.

HELPFUL HINTS

"Do not fasten chains too tightly nor to a spoke." Many a tire has been ruined by disregarding this advice. If a chain can creep it will wear the tire evenly. If it is fastened so that it cannot creep the cross links wear in one place and the shoe is damaged.

It has ben well said that there is one set of bearing surfaces on a car which should never be oiled—the brakes. This is not strictly true, as a squeaking brake must be oiled, but with caution. Use castor oil in moderation until the squeak is stopped.

The traffic rule requiring cars to turn corners at four miles an hour is not merely to protect pedestrians but is for your benefit as well. Turning corners at high speed strains tires, spokes, and axles, and may result in skidding, followed by an overturned car. So slow down and coast or go into second gear.

Do not wipe dust from your car with a cloth or piece of waste. It grinds the dirt into the varnish and will ruin the finish in a short time. Have the car washed if you want the finish to last.

After your have ruined a few spark plugs by removing them with a monkey wrench you will get a socket wrench that just fits around the plug and protects the core from accident. It only costs a few cents and will pay for itself after it has been used a few times.

Recently you advised testing compression by opening all compression valves except one and cranking motor. How can I locate the weak cylinder on a Ford motor, which has no compression cocks?

Ans.—Crank motor at least two revolutions and note if one or more cylinders are weak. Remove spark plug of first cylinder and crank again two revolutions. If three cylinders are strong trouble is in first cylinder. If one is still weak replace first plug, remove next one and crank again. When remaining cylinders are strong you have removed plug from weak cylinders.

My car is equipped with demountable rims. Some people claim that the wheel should be jacked up before removing rim, and others that wheel should be left on the ground. Please tell me what is best to do when changing rims.

Ans.—You evidently refer to loosening the bolts, as it would be impossible to change rims with the wheel on the ground. It is best to loosen the bolts before jacking up the wheel, as the weight of the car twists the rim slightly and so frees it from any rust which may tend to hold it to the wheel. The wheel must then be jacked up in order to remove the rim. Always put graphite grease on places where wheel rim and demountable rim touch each other.

There is a sound like a squeak in my motor. It is not a knock, but sounds like one dry surface rubbing against another. The motor is hard to crank, but does not seem to have lost any power. An early explanation would be appreciated as I have not dared to run the car since the noise developed.

Ans.—The noise is due to lack of oil on cylinder walls. Determine which cylinder it is if possible by listening, but this is not important. Remove valve cap or spark plug, set piston nearly at top of stroke and inject oil around edge of piston. Crank engine and noise should have disappeared. The usual way is to pour half a teacupful of oil into each cylinder through the relief valves. This results in carbonizing the cylinders, plugs, and valves, besides leaving a trail of smoke after the car, and so is not to be recommended. Be sure to keep the oil at the right level in the crank case.

One of my friends has a set of auxiliary spark gaps on his car. They are set on the dash where they can be watched so as to tell if any cylinders are missing explosions or not. It is claimed that they make a hotter spark. If they are so good why are most cars not equipped with them?

Ans.—They do intensify the spark slightly, but present systems give as hot a spark as is needed. They do not benefit a magneto system, as they add too much resistance to the circuit and so are apt to cause misfiring at low speeds. Using such a set of gaps adds to the complications of the wiring, and there are other ways of telling when a cylinder is missing explosions.

I had occasion to take off the distributor of my magneto the other day and noticed that one of the small carbon brushes was missing. Apparently the motor runs with full power and the corresponding cylinder does not seem to be missing explosions. If there is no difference in the results what harm will it do to have one or more brushes missing? If it makes a gap in the distributor will not one gap intensify the other?

Ans.—If the cylinder does not miss explosions it is because the spring makes contact with the distributor arm or segment. This will burn away or break and the engine will miss explosions. If there is any gap in the distributor it will be too great for spark to jump when engine is running slowly, as the magnet does not then generate much current. The spark plug gap is set small on this account, and an additional gap in the distributor adds too much resistance. So replace brush as soon as possible. Also see answer to T. K. in this column.

Reduce Tire Expense Half By Doubling The Mileage Of Your Tires—

Think what it means to you to DOUBLE THE LIFE OF YOUR TIRES. In justice to your pocketbook you must investigate my claim. And then, too, think what it means to have tires punctureless, blow-out proof, and free from care. It will add 100 per cent to the pleasure and safety of motoring, and subtract 100 per cent from tire cost.

You can accomplish this by letting me make reliners for your tires out of your old casings or by putting in your tires my Red "Innershu," which is positively guaranteed blow-out proof and 90 per cent puncture-proof.

Hundreds of owners of autos are using Red "Innershus" and find that they fulfill, not only the promise made for them, but the demands made upon them by the actual test of time itself.

Red "Innershus" are nominal in cost, very simple to insert, and are an absolute necessity if you have any regard for your pocketbook.

Come to either one of my shops and I'll prove to you that I can reduce your tire expense half by doubling the mileage of your tires.

and studies its clear analysis of vocational tests, the value of such a book for teachers, parents and young persons becomes evident.

At what does this new science aim? Hollingsworth quotes from Dr. Cattell, who wrote in 1905: "It is our business to make both a science and an art of human nature. As in the physical world we select first the material suited to our purpose, then turn the iron into steel and temper the steel for the knife, so in the world of human action we must learn to select the right man, to educate him and to fit him for his exact task. This indeed we try to do in all our social institutions, religions, commerce, systems of education and government. But we work by the rule of thumb—blind, deaf and wasteful. The nineteenth century witnessed an extraordinary increase in our knowledge of the material world and in our power to make it subservient to our ends; the twentieth century will probably witness a corresponding increase in our knowledge of human nature and in our power to use it for our welfare."

This means a lot if you reflect upon it. Dr. Hollingsworth himself recognizes these main problems. He says: "First, how may the individual achieve the most adequate knowledge of his own peculiar mental and instinctive constitution, his equipment of capacities, tendencies, interests and aptitudes, and the ways in which he compares, in these respects, with his fellows? Second, how may the individual acquire information concerning the general or special traits required for successful participation in the various vocations, in order to select a line of activity for which he is constitutionally adapted? Third, how may the employer determine the relative desirability, fitness and promise of those who may offer themselves as his associates and assistants, or for minor positions in his employ?"

Evidently we are on the road to a new profession—that of plain everyday practical "Psychology"—but we are not yet quite there! No more misfits—nor geniuses who beat all the rules? Plenty of such cases will still happen, but scientific psychology will come into its kingdom, nevertheless, as books like this one prove. Prof. Keyser's "Human Worth of Rigorous Thinking" helps all true psychology forward.

"Vocational Psychology" costs $2.00 net. D. Appleton & Co. issue this weighty book.

Another Drama League Play

All art, in every form, whether a poem, essay or sermon, a painting, statue, comedy or opera is in effect a study and a criticism of life. Sill said this at Berkeley ages ago; Mathew Arnold said it at Johns Hopkins. Hiram Corson used to explain how Browning's work "criticised everything alive—pulled it to pieces, put it together again."

About 1895, George Hirschfield wrote a play called "The Mothers," over in peaceful Germany, and it became a classic, because it had so much moral and spiritual atmosphere.

This play was translated by Prof. Ludwig Lewisohn from Vol 15 of the Drama League Series. In his introduction Prof Lewisohn tells us about the author and about "the modern German drama."

"The Mothers" is a very strong and memorable play, with characters which live afterwards in our thoughts. It belongs fully on the stage, but it also reads well. An eminently worth-while book—(Doubleday Page & Co: 75 cents net). And, while we are speaking of plays, it is the "Nation" that reminds us this is Shakespeare's year; if we would honor his memory re-read his plays. Do it, dear listener—begin tonight with say "Romeo and Juliet."

England's Home-Work

It has been said over and over that England (in spite of her navy) "is not doing her part in this war." A dozen recent books disprove this, and show that John Bull is completely awake. The brightest of these books is by lively Boyd Cable, who wrote the "Between the Lines" accounts of trench warfare. His new book "Doing their Bit," is full of dry humor, packed in with first-hand information, and has a preface, by that fine little Welshman, David Lloyd George, perhaps the most able man in the whole British Empire of today.

Boyd Cable tells all about the workers at home, and how they back up the men at the front; he went all over England to study the situation. Here's a glimpse of one of the munition factories.

"I stood in a glass-sided passage and looked out over a vast shop blazing with light, humming with belts and machinery, packed with lathes and their women workers, brilliant with the vivid colouring of the flags—Union Jacks and Standards—that were hoisted proudly over the head of each girl and her machine. The girls were in khaki overalls and caps, and the massed colours of the khaki, of the Allied flags' scarlet and blue—and white and orange and black, the glistening steely-blue of the machinery, the warm touches of the red copper and yellow brass, all under the bright glow of the electrics, all jostling and astir and quivering with life and animated movement, made up a picture as thrilling and alive and heart-warming as any I have seen throughout the war works."

All this for the evil ends of war. It makes one sick with regret. But as Boyd Cable puts it, the whole Army at the front depends entirely upon these home-workers to supply them with the means of winning the war. And the Germans say the same thing to their women-workers!

Dutton publishes this at $1.00 net, and no mere novel is half as much alive with human nature.

Brevities

Dr. Abraham Flexner, the noted educator (Harvard, John Hopkins, Berlin) says (in the Atlantic):

"Being a parent used to be one of the most simple, natural and inevitable developments in the world. People used to grow up, marry, and raise families,—they still do back in the country,—and society was satisfied if parents could cloth, feed, and exercise a general supervision over their offspring. But nowadays one has no business to be married and have chidren unless, sleeping and waking, one is conscious of the responsibility."

How true it is, and how much this many mean for the future of the human race.

First, we think, in the class of three-dollar specialist magazines comes "The Scientific Monthly," which Dr. Cattell edits so well. In the past three months it has published a dozen epoch-marking papers, such as those upon the "Evolution of Life" (Dr. Osborn), that of Folk-tales and Myths (Dr. Boas), one upon Jefferson's relation to Botany (Dr. True), and "Changing Conditions in the Kentucky Mountains (Schockel).

If you desire less trust-worthy, more sensational articles along this line, they can be had in several "popular science" periodicals but it's often a cheap, backwoodsy and patent-medicine sort of literature.

Poorly written novels abound this year. One of the worst to our mind is Warwick Deeping's "Bridge of Desire." A paragon of a wife, a caddish husband, a brazen widow, misbehaviors silly and numerous—is this kind of thing the best that the once-brilliant author of "Ivan of the Tower" and "Bertrand of Brittany" can give us in these days?

"The Nest-builders" by Beatrice Hale tells the old, old story of the true home girl who marries "an artistic temperament." Trouble in the nest. This particular plot is threadbare by now.

Marian Cox is a new writer. Her "Ventures in Worlds" (six essays) is decidedly "queer" somewhat witty and lacking in balance of mind or sound judgment—thus dangerous for a young person's reading, and more or less tiresome for anyone else.

We generally think of Herder as a poet and philosopher, but Mr. Andress of Boston writes a book on Herder as an educator, and shows that this famous German, who spent over 40 years in school work, was original and far ahead of his time. Herder died in 1801. Kant and Russeau were his examplars; Goethe for a time his closest friend. Herder's books fill sixty large volumes and touch upon almost every conceivable subject.

Lockhart, the son-in-law of Scott, was an able old Tory—even if he was often so unfair and captious as editor of the "Quarterly Review." His anonymous history of Napoleon (1829) is still reprinted. Oxford University gets out a new fifty cent edition. It is full of errors, then unavoidable, but is still worth reading for its style.

"The Hoosier Year" contains extracts from the writings of 366 Indianians. We have had a number of similar Californian scrap-books. "For those that like them" these are "just the things they like." We confess that we do not thrill. Besides, these snippets cannot be quite fair to the authors.

AUTO TRIP DESCRIBED

By E. E. SHEPARD.

E. B. Sweezey and his wife, with their auto, and the writer and his wife, and son, in their auto, started on their journey eastward on June 20, last, in company, the former having for their destination, New York, and Florida, the latter Rochester Minn., and Niagara Falls. We were fortunate in starting with cool weather conditions. Just beyond Traver, we found an auto in distress as well as its occupants, and took the lady swimming instructor—one of the occupants, in the Shepard auto on to Goshen to assist her in taking a train for Hanford. Then we rolled on along California's magnificent highway to Bakersfield, where we had our first stop. We proceeded easterly to Tehachapi, taking what is known as the Old Trails road, via Mojave, Barstow Flagstaff, Santa Fe, Trinidad. The grade at Tehachapi was steep enough, but roads were good and continued good until we reached a place called Kramer between Mojave and Barstow, where we encountered some sandy road, but made fair time along there, except over a spot about one-fourth mile, which required considerable energy, gasoline, and patience (the auto behaved better with only one rider).

It is 72 miles from Mojave to Barstow, and any auto traveler should have along at least two water bags along in this region to Needles, as evaporation is rapid, and assistance might be given to others. To Needles, the weather was cool and pleasant all the time. It must be remembered however, that weather is very warm most of the time in summer along this district. At nearly all stations along the road (Santa Fe R. R.) water may be had. The writer espied on reaching the Arizona side of the river a tree of date palm class, with great clusters of green dates, this same variety is raised in California. On and on we went through cactus and yucca and arrived at a mining district and soon into Kingman. On neither side did we perceive any farms or signs of farm products; but the city is all business and bustle; streets being macadamized and sidewalks concreted. Our road followed almost parallel the railroad all along except in places, but we had no difficulty in finding our way, for those enterprising Americans of Los Angeles, called the Auto Club of Southern California, have placed iron signs at respectable distances apart along this trail, showing names and distances each way to and from every city and town.

Gasoline rose in price as we traveled through this region. We paid 18 cents at Selma and got here 30 cents. The roads began to get somewhat stony as we approached Ash Fork.

On returning to the main road, we went via Flagstaff, and found the road much better than via Williams; 20 miles further: We passed the San Francisco mountains on the way from Canyon to Flagstaff, and noticed considerable snow on their crests the water supply of Flagstaff is from this snow. Flagstaff is called the Sky Light City—2,500 population 7000 feet elevation. We were informed that the largest unbroken pine forest in the world surrounds this district. We noticed some Navajo Indians, driving teams, and many of them had bright, keen faces. Soon after leaving Flagstaff, we went slightly off the road into Walnut Canyon wind and water worn into fantastic caves and castles, with ruined homes of a prehistoric race called the Cliff Dwellers.

From here as we travel eastwards, there are many evidences of a vast volcanic region; Burnt Mountains; Red Mountains; Lava Beds; Sunset Crater; Meteorite Mountain containing a hole 600 feet deep and resembling a crater is near here; scientists agree this is the result of a meteor. There are places through the district where the soil is fertile, and here and there large tracts, but water is not available. On we rolled till we reached the Petrified Forest between Winslow and Springerville; the country on all sides is a wide waste of desolation, but here our road wends directly through what was a standing, thriving, and no doubt beautiful green forest; now no tree stands; all is changed into stone, and all trees are prone—some on top of the surface—some half buried—some completely buried. Some large stumps four or more feet still stand intact; some we measured being 5 feet and over in diameter; all, or nearly all of this petrified wood is highly colored and of beautiful hues; resembles flint—smooth surface mostly; we made the common error of taking on more of this curio than we could conveniently carry.

To the writer the Petrified Forest was the most interesting of all other phenomena on the journey, with the possible exception of the Minnesota mud hole we sank in, taking four hours in which to extricate ourselves. Traveling along we reached Springerville—50 miles from the forest, and here again we paid still more for gasoline—40 cents; This may be avoided by loading up at Holbrook, where it may be had for 30 cents. Most of the drinking water through this region has much mineral, but is clear, and by care we got along. There is a nice spring of running water on the north bank, westerly of iron bridge over Little Colorado River, about 61 miles this side (west) of Springerville; we camped at this bridge cleaned and enlarged the spring; this water is excellent. The roads commenced to improve in smoothness, and on reaching line between N. M. and Ariz. we appreciated that fact. Our roads through Arizona were rough, with the exception, and the roads through New Mexico were good with the exception.

Settlements through this district are sparse, and those contemplating a journey along here should stock up with provisions. It is 130 miles to Magdalena but good time may be made with any vehicle. It is gradually up grade to about 8000 feet and over. Between Magdalena and Albuquerque at the bottom of grade in pine forest is a very convenient camping place where a running brook and a water spring with meadow entices the traveler. Here we met several parties going both ways; 5 or 6 autos, and all camped there for the night. The following morning we left for Albuquerque and Santa Fe: All along this road the scenery and atmosphere are delightful and the roads are good. Between these cities is a steep, long and winding grade, and autos having long wheel base have to back up in places.

As we passed rapidly along through this state over good roads, we occasionally were interested and entertained with sights of old adobes and the independent actions of the Pueblo Indians; they are very superstitious about a camera being turned on them unless a quarter is placed in their palm. In one place they were dressed in holiday garb, and their village houses were spruced with calcimine exterior and streets swept clean; we had to meander through these narrow streets to get out.

Santa Fe is conceded to be one of the most interesting towns in America. The farming country around is far from being inviting, and is rather desolate. Traveling on we got into a slight thunder storm, but all enjoyed the refreshing change from the arid passage we had.

The roads were smooth, and the air exhilarating, until we reached Trinidad, Col., where we learned that instead of continuing on to Denver, we could shorten our road to Concordia, Kan., by about 200 miles; Mr. Sweezey and wife are bound via Denver, so all feeling that the mountain dangers had been ended, parted here, the writer and family continued on easterly along the Arkansas river through Garden City, Dodge City, Great Bend to Concordia Kansas. There is a heavy grade just before reaching Trinidad, but the road is smooth and broad. This city is alive with business. Passing, the roads became better and smoother. There is much alfalfa produced along this river in eastern Colorado; water being used from it for irrigation, but not over three crops are harvested—usually two. Upon approaching the Kansas line we noticed that the alfalfa fields grew smaller, until in Kansas they are much on the wane; Colorado has used nearly all the water from the river before it reaches Kansas, and as a person told us at Garden City, there was no longer enough water left in the river to fish in Kansas. The alfalfa is of splendid quality all along this irrigated belt.

On entering Kansas we roll along on best dirt roads yet traveled on, which almost if not equal to our own stone highway; along here we find splendid drinking water nearly every place we stop for it, and further east appears to be all cold and delicious.

The prairie grass begins to look like the country prospered, and much splendid live stock could be seen in most any direction, this was true through New Mexico, and in all of the fourteen states we were in on this trip all live stock we saw was in good condition, except in Arizona.

At Dodge City, we rested a couple of days and the writer went with a friend and his banker out 25 miles and inspected the grain fields and threshing process. The grain we saw yielded from eight to twenty-five bushels per acre, more small grain is produced in this district than corn. We considered the wheat yield rather light, but it was of fair quality, and the straw was bright and clean. We then were in a country where it is uniformly settled for several hundred miles, and much grain and stock is raised. As we proceeded the price of gasoline declined, until we reached Concordia, Kansas, it is down again at about the price in Selma.

At Concordia, Mrs. Shepard is again at her childhood home, and received greetings of relatives not seen for more than twenty years. Instead of remaining five days here as we determined on, it lengthened out to ten.

On leaving this place we traveled almost due north to Fairfield Neb., where the writer visited his cousin not seen by him for more than forty years. A brother of the writer had motored down from Custer county Neb., and met us at Fairfield; here we remained double the time again we could very well spare.

Small grain looked better through Nebraska than Kansas, but corn not so well, wherever we went through this region, and Iowa and Minnesota, the drinking water was superb; the prairie grass beautiful and clean; not troubled with dust.

At Sioux City we traveled the long wagon bridge across "Big Muddy" river, which is a mile wide, very muddy and with sweeping force. Missouri river at this point is much same as Mississippi river at junction of the two. Sioux City reminded us much of Fresno. In Iowa the corn fields had the best appearance of any passed, and were in the ascendency over smaller grain. Roads were all good through here. Entering Minnesota the general appearance is familiar to the writer who again travels childhoods grounds. A couple of miles west of Garden City, we encountered the mud hole already mentioned.

We rode in auto to bluff of Blue Earth river coursing through this old farm of 220 acres of upland, woodland and lea; and it did not take long to see why there were such great changes; instead of a prize wheat, oats, barley and corn, dairying was carried on there; this was the condition prevailing through much of the country we just passed over, and while there often were better dwellings and barns, now to be seen the fields did not look so inviting as before; most of the woodland was cut away or haggled, and where there were plum patches, walnuts, butternuts, and great basswood trees casting trembling shadows over the winding road in which the writer barefooted chased butterflies, it was now cleared and denuded.—the old picture had vanished; this caused him to meditate and repeat what he had written—

These scenes and forms are with me again
As memory weaves its gentle strains.
Standing alone on the river bank.
Fringed with foliage thick and rank,
Once more these pictures appear to me
Of beautiful upland, woodland and lea.
Till in my dreams and visions I see
The same dear scenes as they used to be.

We all left the old farm with much reluctance, agreeing that it made a beautiful home. I found one classmate now a woman of fifty-five years—then a girl of seven to 14 years; she did not know the writer.

We made our way easterly over fairly good roads to Rochester, which is fifty miles west from the Mississippi river, the country along this route is beautiful, with thrifty corn, wheat and oats, undulating landscape and groves of hard and soft wood deciduous trees and lakes here and there.

We found raisin bread and it was well advertised by bakeries here. We did not find time to go to Niagara Falls, nor to Berlin, Green Lake county, Wisconsin, the native place of the writer.

So here is for the return: Arthur selected the route west to California via Mankato, Minn., Pierre and Deadwood City, S. D., Buffalo, Cody, and Yellowstone Park Wy., Pocatello, Ida., Brighton, Utah, Elko, Winnemucca, Reno, Nev., Lake Tahoe, Placerville and Sacramento, Selma, Cal. Mrs. Shepard went to visit in Minneapolis and other places while Arthur and the writer took leave of Minn., the state with its 10,000 lakes and beautiful prairies and forests. At Mankato we remained one night; this was the former home of the writer for about five years.

At Pierre we crossed the 'Big Muddy" by going on to a platform near R. R. depot, then on to a flat car provided with high railings, and the train takes us across. Fare $1.05. We were here informed that the railroad bridge cost $1,500,000, and that the foundations were sunk 500 feet below the river.

Yellowstone Park, we viewed with much pleasure and wonder at the picture gallery of our earth; running brooks and rivers, mountains thrown into fantastic forms and figures, woods and lea; we pass Holy City (fantastic rock formation resembling a city) and at 35 miles from Cody enter east entrance of the Park; here we register and pay $7.50 for a single trip through, offer travelers check; refused; had to go back couple of miles and get money on check; some of the rules about arriving and departure from different stations and points through the park are irksome, and likely will be changed. We passed without delay through the park as our time was limited; the weather was cold and on several occasions we stepped into the steam produced by the Geysers and thawed out.

From this place to Pocatello, Ida., 174 miles, and there is considerable timber part of the way, fairly good roads, and some very beautiful prairie country.

From Lovelock to Reno, the roads were good. Eleven miles more of travel brought us to Cal.-Nevada state line, near Verdi, where we again viewed the beautiful Truckee river.

At Truckee instead of travelling by immigrant Gap and Auburn to Sacramento, we passed under the R. R. bridge south along Truckee river to Lake Tahoe, along westerly shore of same; it is now twilight and night follows with full moon; we are in the dense forest and large trees of California; roads good; we go higher, and higher; the waves buffeted by a strong breeze dash high along the shore, and as we round the bluff and Emerald Bay (arm of the lake) we see the Phantom Ship (small island) and boat lights far below us, hear the joyous voices of campers, and again behold the beauty and grandeur of one of nature's picture galleries. As we roll along the ridge between Emerald Bay and Cascade Lake, towards Tahoe, in the moonlight, we appear about to take a dive, but again descend down, down, and pass along between the lake and Cascade Lake—the latter being in the forest and not connected with Lake Tahoe, and not far from it. We climb the summit towards Placerville, and ascend to about 7400 feet elevation. It is 9 p. m., but we continue down this side of the Sierras, and had to wait at place called Kyburz for a gear fork replacement two days. Being already behind schedule time, Arthur boarded an auto for Sacramento, thence train to Los Angeles; so that now the writer was the only one who stayed with the ship going and coming.

This side of the grade at this station called Kyburz there is heavy timber and good trout fishing in the American river; many fine camping places; many campers were there; scenery and roads from here to Placerville fine. The writer purchased some very fine apples at this place and saw some apple orchards that were very inviting. About one half of the road from Sacramento to Placerville is stone state highway and the landscape all the way makes the ride enjoyable. Leaving Sacramento at noon Sept. 16, and bowling along good roads I arrived in Fresno county and home that night, nearly three months from the time of starting. All had an enjoyable time while traveling. We carried no gasoline except in regular feeding tank—holding 20 gallons. It is better to carry some extra in few places if the tank holds less than 15 gallons. We used about 400 gallons. In some places we traveled over 200 miles per day, in others less than 100.

Prices of commodities and charges for meals along the way was noticeable; the people also appeared uniform in their speech, dress, and manners, and the difference noticeable a few years ago was absent. This likely is result of convenient transportation, trains, automobiles and ready means of communication, intermingling and bringing the people together.

POETS WHO LIVE IN ONE QUOTATION

There passed last spring the centennial anniversary of the birth of an English poet who caused a literary furore at 23 years old, and who, had he died young, might have been remembered with Chatterton and Kirk White and Joseph Rodman Drake and other "inheritors of unfulfilled renown." He lived, however, to be 86, without adding appreciably to his early laurels. The poet was Philip James Bailey, whose "Festus," published in 1839, was compared by enthusiastic admirers to the works of Shakespeare and Goethe. No one reads "Festus" now, but its memory survives in one familiar quotation—a onetime favorite for use in autograph albums:

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial.
We should count time by heart-throbs,
He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

There are other lines in "Festus" worthy of remembrance, for instance, the characterization of America as "half brother of the world, with something good and bad of every land." But they cannot be said to be familiar.

Bailey is very far from being the only author to live in men's minds by virtue of a single line, stanza or passage. It is a narrow margin by which to escape oblivion, but it serves. True, it is not the writer himself that is remembered, but as long as some spark from his brain still glimmers he is not totally dead. It may be a line from a song. "Meet me by moonlight alone," and "Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?" are repeated as catch words by thousands who never heard of J. Augustus Wade or Thomas Dunn English. Very often, however, the lines that survive are of high literary value.

Theodore O'Hara, soldier of fortune, wrote:

On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.

By these four lines he won for himself admission to the eternal camping ground of poetry.

William Knox, a Scotch versifier (1789-1825), owes his fragmentary survival not so much to any great poetic merit in his mortuary couplets as to the indorsement of Abraham Lincoln, who loved to repeat:

Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a fast flitting meteor, a fast flying cloud,
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave.

DENMARK PAWNED ORKNEY ISLANDS

The Orkney Islands do not really belong to Great Britain in the sense that they were ever ceded by treaty or acquired by conquest. They were simply transferred by Denmark to Scotland in 1468, in pledge for the payment of the dowry of the Princess of Denmark, who was married to James III, king of Scotland. In the deed of transfer, which is still in existence it is specially mentioned that Denmark shall have the right to redeem them at any future time by paying the original amount of the dowry with interest to date.

There is no likelihood, however, that Denmark will ever attempt to exercise her right of redemption, because 60,000 florins, the original amount of the dowry, plus compound interest for 448 years, would amount to perhaps a trillion pounds, and that is a lot more than the islands are worth.—From Pearson's Magazine.

Lodge and fraternal notices will be found daily in the Republican on the classified pages under the heading "Meeting Notices."

The Six Pre-Eminent

Our Creed: "An Honest Car at an Honest Price and a Fair, Square Deal to All"

IN PRESENTING our product for the season of 1917 we experience that peculiar thrill which always follows the doing of some one thing well.

"Pride of accomplishment," 'tis said, "is the mainspring of human endeavor," and we frankly confess it to be the driving force in our shop.

The pleasing result in this instance is a remarkable "Six" in two sizes (which they said "couldn't be built")—pre-eminent in appearance, staunchness, and lightness. A hand-made piece of art: carrying 100 per cent of actual structural value plus an abundance of tone, style, and little niceties which discriminating motorists appreciate.

Therefore, this presentation is made with pardonable pride and complete confidence.

We cannot promise as many this season as will be wanted; but each one will be "a first-water gem," and will carry to its ultimate owner that pleasing sensation experienced only through the ownership and use of something more than a mere vehicle of conveyance.

Pioneer Builders of Valve-In-Head Motor Cars

Vote for Good Roads Tuesday

Buick

VALVE IN-HEAD

THE motorist who watches the signs of the times is deeply interested in the ever growing dominance of the road by the BUICK.

It is significant of that appreciation which the American public always accords to the pioneer genius who builds consistently on the right foundation principles.

The BUICK VALVE-IN-THE-HEAD MOTOR has been proved to be the logical application of power. Power that means swiftness with grace and smooth, dependable action.

Measuring miles by the gallon—it is easy to prove the extra mileage which BUICK engineering obtains from every gallon of gasoline.

This economy is a point of consideration nowadays, when a motor car, from being a hobby or a luxury, is a necessity in the world's affairs.

Motorists of experience and insight are quick to grasp the long-time investment benefits which a BUICK purchase assures.

SONGBIRD TO BE HEARD

Popular Artist Will Appear in Fresno

Miss Florence Macbeath, the Minnesota Nightingale.

Lovers of vocal music in Fresno and contiguous cities and towns will have an opportunity soon of listening to Miss Florence Macbeth, famously known as the "Minnesota Nightingale." Miss Macbeth is to be heard in Fresno on Monday evening, November 6, in the White theater. Her program, while classical in the main, ranging through popular numbers of the most famous composers and arrangers of operas, will also include lighter melodies.

Miss Macbeth is histrionic in her attainments, according to the history of the charming young woman, being noted in an amateur way as an equestrienne, swimmer, skater, and, in fact, has made a creditable showing in practically all forms of outdoor sports.

The sobriquet "Minnesota Nightingale" was won by Miss Macbeth in an unusual way. Upon a tour of England, Germany and Holland a few years ago Miss Macbeth returned to Minnesota with the Chicago Grand Opera Company. At St. Paul a capacity house greeted Miss Macbeth, she being a Minnesota girl. Following the concert, in which she was especially pleasing in voice and acting, she met the superintendent of the Stillwater prison. He congratulated her.

A few days later a marked copy of the "Stillwater Mirror," in which she was referred to as the "Minnesota Nightingale" in an article in the little pamphlet, in which it was remarked "that it was a pity the shut-ins could not hear the 'Minnesota Nightingale.'" Soon after, the governor of the state at a banquet toasted Miss Macbeth as the "Minnesota Nightingale."

It is probable that a full announcement of Miss Macbeth's program will be made within a week or so. The sale of seats will be open from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. at the White theater.

REPUBLICAN RALLY HELD AT TURLOCK

W. W. Phillips and A. M. Free Attack Tariff Law And Mexican Policy

TURLOCK, Oct. 21.—This city and the district surrounding it participated in the largest Republican rally of the campaign tonight. The occasion was the address of W. W. Phillips, Republican candidate for Congress, and Aruthur M. Free district atorney of Santa Clara county. The meeting was held in the high school assembly hall at 8 o'clock. H. W. Dockham, editor of the Turlock Tribune, presided.

On the stage acting as vice-presidents were George S. Keith, Charles Klein, E. J. Cadwallader, W. E. Hester, E. H. Claypool, S. T. Webber C. V. Lundahl, D. J. Walton, H. W. Rickenbacker, A. P. Ferguson, A. V. Hoffmann, J. V. Baker, Roy Weaver, H. S. Crane. The band furnished music during the meeting.

Phillips pointed out the intimate relation between the needs of the Turlock Irrigation District and the tariff on fruit products from European countries. The Underwood tariff law enacted by the Democratic Congress struck a direct blow at the industries on which the prosperity of this section is founded, he said. The making of this tariff law was participated in by his opponent, and voted for by him, Phillips declared, notwithstanding the protests raised by commercial bodies here and elsewhere.

Free scored the Mexican policy of Wilson and showed the administration's vacillation in dealing with foreign problems. The reversal of the pledge of the Democratic party to exempt American coastwise ships from payment of tools through the Panama canal at the behest of Great Britain was, in itself, a great commercial blow to this valley, said Free. Phillips' opponent voted against the bread and butter interests of this valley in putting the tolls on such ships, he declared.

The afternoon meeting at Merced at 2 o'clock was novel. A platform was erected on the lawn of the hotel El Capitan. There the speakers were listened to with close attention. They were introduced by Dr. W. W. Thomas of Merced, chairman of the Republican County Central Committee. The band was out, and a large Saturday afternoon crowd gathered for the speaking.

Phillips and party returned last night from Merced Falls, where the big lumber mills are located. Workmen cheered the showing up of the free trade policy which closed every lumber mill on the Pacific Coast and rendered thousands idle.

After resting over Sunday at Modesto, the party will visit Oakdale and Riverbank Monday and a big night meeting will be held in Modesto.

CAR HITS RIG; THREE ARE HURT

Three Hindus, names unknown, were slightly injured last night about 6:30 at First and Hammond streets when Hans Monson, in a motor car, struck a rig in which two were riding. One Hindu was riding with Monson in his motor car. He was struck with flying glass and slightly cut about the face. All were treated at the emergency hospital and later removed to the county hospital.

MOTOR STRIKES RIG

W. J. Moore, 1820 South Van Ness avenue, struck a rig containing a Mexican family while driving his motor car on the state highway near the south Fresno city limits last night. None of the occupants of the buggy were injured. Moore took the Mexicans to their home, and promised to pay for the repair of the rig.

NAT'L PARKS END SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Auto regulations are much less strict than heretofore, with the result that travel has greatly increased. Attitude of government is one of desire to help, and the ranger service, under the direction of Forest Townsley, has developed into a splendid institution. A finer group of men could not be found anywhere than the Yosemite Rangers.

Less High Mountain Travel

There has not been as much travel into the high mountains as in the past. This is probably due to the high prices for the use of animals, namely $3 per day. In the past, lower prices were made for camping parties. Another fault that has been found is that it is often impossible for people to take trips upon some of the less frequented trails unless they pay extra for a guide, the Desmond company having reserved the right to make this extra charge unless a party of a certain size can be gotten together. No effort is made by the company to get this party together, and on several occasions people have had to give up the trips, not wishing to pay the extra $3 for a guide.

Attendance Figures

The following gives some idea of the patronage in the Yosemite this season: Number of autos 1915, 2352; number in autos, 7165; number of autos to September 16, 1916, 3890; number in autos (estimated), 11,700; total number people in valley to September 16, 26,515; estimated number for season, 80,000; greatest number autos one day, 318; number people from Fresno, 533; autos by Aspen Valley route, 105; autos by Merced Grove, 375; autos by Big Oak Flat, 503; autos by Tioga road, 411; autos by Fresno-Wawona, 2270.

Out of the estimated 30,000 people registered into the valley this year, about 10,000 have been in their own private camps, 9937 registered at Camp Curry, and the balance registered among the other four camps and two hotels.

The Yosemite Big Trees Stage Company handled nearly 1000 passengers from Fresno.

Elkhorn Grade Breaks and Vicinity Near McMullin Is Inundated

That between 4000 and 5000 acres of land on the West Side in the vicinity of McMullin and Raisin City is at present flooded by many inches of water as the result of a serious break in the Elkhorn grade, was the report flashed to Fresno late last night. Dozens of men have been called to the aid of the farmers whose lands are threatened with inundation, and the volunteers will probably have to work throughout the night to prevent further giving way on the part of the Elkhorn banks.

What caused the break in the grade is not known at present. The residents in the district were practically off guard when the flood waters rushed over their lands, the first sign of the overflow coming at dusk.

Whether the residents of the section will be able to cope with the situation or whether more men will be needed to aid in the fight against the floods could not be ascertained at a late hour last night.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT

EDITED BY W. G. HUMMEL

Increasing Value of Cows

To advance in dairying, herd improvement must go on. Elimination of low producing animals is without doubt the first step toward herd improvement, and this elimination cannot be successfully accomplished unless records of the milk production of each cow are systematically kept.

The most satisfactory way to find the unprofitable cow is to keep a yearly record of milk and fat production, and the cost of feed consumed. One cow may start her period of lactation with a large flow of milk; but the per cent of fat may be low, the flow of milk may decrease rapidly after five or six months; she may consume more feed than her production requires, thereby gaining in weight. Such a cow is quite sure to be unprofitable. A dairy cow should not gain perceptibly in weight until the latter part of her milking period. Another cow may begin her lactation period with a moderate flow of milk, the fat percentage may be high, she may keep up a good flow to the end of her period, not using any of the feed consumed for the production of body fat. The latter cow is the more economical; but without a record of the cost of production, it is difficult to know which one is kept at a profit and which one is kept at a loss.

The testing of milk as well as the taking of other records can, of course, be done by the farmer himself, but in an increasing number of communities the cow-testing association, with its regularly employed cow-tester, is proving most economical and efficient.

Professor Gordon H. True of the university of Farm at Davis, says with regard to the cow-testing association.

"The cow testing association system of keeping records of production in dairy herds has come to be recognized as the most practical method of doing a most necessary part of the dairyman's work. All success in the building up of dairy herds is based on a knowledge of the production of each individual member of the herd. Few dairymen actually take the time to systematically test their herds when they depend upon themselves for this work. The cow testing association offers a cheap and efficient method for doing it. I doubt if there is a dairy community anywhere in the United States where testing has been done where fully half the cows are not giving below the line of profitable production, that fully half of the cows could be eliminated and the same profit maintained by their owners. Such a selection must come on the basis of the known production of each individual of the herd. Following this in the weeding out of the non-paying members of the herd, commonly called boarders, systematic breeding may follow.

"I note from a letter recently received from a co-operative creamery association of a California county that a movement is on foot to secure better bulls for the herd. This is another step in the right direction. By combining the two movements, carrying them on intelligently, there is no reason why in a very short time the profits from the Imperial Valley dairy herds should not be doubled."

Niles P. Searles, Yolo County Farm Advisor, writes:

"One herd in the old Yolo County Association entered the year with twenty cows, average seventeen pounds of butterfat; after twelve months the herd had been built to thirty cows, average twenty-eight pounds of butterfat. One dairyman reduced his herd twenty-five per cent by intelligent culling and cut down his fat production by one-sixteenth. The cows which completed the twelve months in this association were averaging eighteen pounds per cow per year, in excess of the average of all cows at the beginning of the year. The best herd in the old Yolo County Association, averaged forty pounds for twelve months, and the poorest herd averaged eleven pounds. One herd of one hundred and twenty cows kept at a loss was culled to thirty cows, whose average production was just double the former average and this herd was kept at a profit. The best cow in this association produced eighty pounds of fat for several months, while the poorest cow produced an average of eight pounds over the same period."

S. Lawson of Woodland says:

"When I sold my herd last year for $150.00 per head, I simply handed by herd book to the buyer and he could see for himself."

The records on good cows will increase their selling price, and put the valuation of cows in the county on the basis of production.

Cow testing associations not only give the dairy farmers opportunities to dispose of their poor and unprofitable cows and to select calves from their best cows. A member of a cow testing association has made the following statement: "Members here will not consider disposing of their good grade cows for less than $100 while those not in the association consider $75 or $80 a good price. Impartial records increase the selling price of cows at least 20 per cent.

The purchaser can well afford to pay 20 per cent more for a cow that has shown capacity for making a good record than to buy a cow that has never been tested. There is no advantage in raising poor cows or in purchasing them. It is far more profitable to all concerned that good producing cows be reared. It is better to own ten good cows than twenty poor cows.

The following taken from an exchange furnishes in condensed shape pretty strong testimony as to the profit of systematic testing of cows in associations.

The farmers belonging to the Janesville Cow Testing association of Bremer county, Ia., are enthusiastic as to the value of keeping books with their dairy cows. The association was organized in 1911, and since that time the average milk production has been increased by one-third. The actual profit has been more than doubled, and progress in the right direction is till being made. In 1911 the average butterfat production for each cow was 246 pounds. Last year it was 312.6 pounds. The profit per animal when the association started was $32.42, and in 1914 it had increased to $66.02.

E. L. Thompson of Tulare, says:

"I consider the money spent for cow testing the best spent money that I have put into my ranch, as I believe that my cows that I keep are increased in value to a buyer at least $25.00 per cow."

H. G. Hull writes:

"There is another feature of the Cow Testing Association which does not receive full credit from the farmers. It is this—I have found that the general stock of dairy information that the cow tester has and, which I draw from him during his monthly visits at my dairy has more than paid me for all that I have paid as fees. The cow tester has an agricultural college education and on top of this he is going from dairy to dairy throughout the county and is drawing from them the best in their management and equipment. I in turn draw from him much of this information and apply what I can to my business to my profit. For this reason, if no other, I feel that every dairyman should belong to a cow testing association if possible."

There is an old saying "that you cannot tell by the looks of a frog how far he can jump." It may be said, too, that you cannot tell by the looks of a cow how much milk she can give. The Babcock test and the scale are correcting the judgments of men pertaining to the abilities of their cows, and several thousands of cows tested and found wanting, are sent to the shambles each year. In Wisconsin last year over 3,000 cows went this course.

A member of a cow testing association in Wisconsin cited recently this fact: "One little brown cow I offered to sell to a customer for $50, but he would not pay it, saying it was too much. I also had one nice looking black and white cow. He offered me $75 for this one, but I would not sell her at $75." But weighing and testing each cow's milk brought something to light as follows:

Name of Cow	Milk, lbs.	Fat pct.	Fat. lbs.	Profit
Little Brown Cow	6,351	5.2	332.0	$48.61
Black and White Cow	4,366	3.4	146.9	.28

"The nice black and white cow is now for sale at $50 and the little brown cow does not leave the barn for less than $100. This one instance will pay the cow testing dues for three years."

An Indiana cow-tester says, in a recent issue of Hoard's Dairyman,

"One man milking 12 cows saved $12.61 on feed in one month and suffered no loss of milk, accomplished through a more carefully balanced ration, mixed in bulk to simplify feeding, and feed according to milk yield. Previously he had quested his "strippers" and starved his big producers."

Cow-testing brings out the differences in cow production, giving the dairyman an opportunity to weed out low producers. But before disposing of a cow of good blood, be sure that the low production is the fault of the cow, not of poor care, improper feding, and poor management.

C. C. Hayden, in the Ohio monthly bulletin for August says:

"The man who has purebred cattle should not dispose of his own cattle and purchase others with high records until he has developed the possibilites in his own herd. There are many cows now producing moderately which would make high records if given a chance. Many such cows are purchased by experts, developed and sold at high prices."

There is some good homely advice condensed in that statement; not only for the man who is handling pure-bred dairy dairy cattle but also for the man who has grades. We are often unconsciously in the frame of mind of the boy in a strawberry patch. He imagines that the berries ahead are bigger, sweeter, and more juicy than are those at his feet. So the dairyman often thinks that the high producing cows in some other herd will be the means of making lots of money. Frequently the boy is disappointed when he gets the strawberries; and the dairyman may be disappointed when he gets the coveted cows. Each one may be overlooking as good or better ones near-by. Both may be satisfied with what they get; but another boy may come along and smack his lips over the strawberries that the first rejected, while another dairyman may take hold of the "ordinary" pure-bred cows which the dairyman discarded and develop them into the very kind of cows for which high prices were paid. It is well to investigate and develop thoroughly the possibilities in the dairy herd before buying other cows at high prices that may or may not be any better than those at home. Start such an investigation by careful plans of feeding and management.

Food Preference Found in Hens

Three experiments were recently conducted at the Pennsylvania Experiment Station to ascertain the difference in individual preference of hens for feed stuffs and as to variation in the nutritive ratio preferred by individuals.

It was noted that hens taken from the same general flock and previously fed on the same or similar rations developed pronounced preferences in feeding, preferences which persisted throughout the entire period of observation. One hen, for example, promptly selected a ration of corn, wheat, and scrap, with a very large proportion of corn, and that ration remained characteristic of her throughout the entire year. The proportions varied and on lighter laying in the second season wheat consumption decidedly increased, but her corn preference persisted to the end. Hens that showed an indisposition to consume enough oyster shell properly to inclose the eggs were given 10 grains of powdered oyster shell daily in capsules. The shells resumed their normal strength, thickness, and texture.

Different dry mash mixtures were tried, but there was no apparent preference. With the exception of certain hens, dry mash consumption was very slight regardless of the mixture used. None of the hens showed a particular liking for meat scrap. It was found that the consumption of oyster shell varied with the egg production.

The consumption of grit was small and in practically all cases governed by the season, reaching its height in early winter and dropping to practically nothing in spring and summer, at which time also shell consumption reaches its highest point. Attention is called to the fact that the heaviest grit consumption is at the time when new feathers are being formed and when presumably the greatest demand is being made for mineral elements. While the average consumption of grit by these hens, on a ration consisting mainly of whole grains for an entire year averaged 0.14 oz. per hen per week, cockerels being fattened on a ration of finely ground grains and buttermilk have been found to consume 0.84 oz. weekly per fowl.

The effect of season and production on food consumption, while it seems to be indicated in the records of individuals, gives uncertain results when applied to totals or averages for a number of individuals. The year divides itself into three periods, two laying periods and one non-laying period. The first period runs from July 6 to October 25, 16 weeks; October 26 to February 28, 18 weeks; and March 1 to July 4, 18 weeks.

Though the production of eggs dropped practically to zero during the second period, the food consumption dropped very little as compared with the first period. In the third period egg production was fairly heavy and weight increased: food consumption perceptibly decreased. Apparently, winter conditions make as much of a draft on the fowls as egg production.

All non-producers were found to be diseased either in the liver or ovary, and it is deemed an interesting point for further observation as to the extent to which non-production may be the result of pathological conditions which do not noticeably affect general health for months or even years.

SUCCESSFUL FARM ORGANIZATION

Why is one farmer more prosperous than another? Why does one farmer make a labor income of $2,000 a year while another man in the same region on a similar farm makes no labor income at all? What are the real sources of profit on the average farm?

The Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station recently completed a careful study of nearly 700 farms in order to arrive at answers to the above questions. The labor incomes on these farms were determined and the farms classified according to the labor income received. The records obtained include an inventory at the beginning and end of the year and all the receipts and expenses for the year on each farm together with some information regarding crops, acreages, yields, certain practices, and social and economic conditions. Every farm in one county was included with the exception of two or three that would not make reports.

From the records of the Missouri investigation, the essentials of a profitable farm business have been summarized in an effort to give in a brief way the factors which have seemed to be the most important on the farms where good incomes were made compared with farms where less satisfactory incomes were made. The first factor noticed was that a good income required a good-sized business, which should include three things. (1) a sufficient number of acres for the greatest efficiency in the use of men and tools; (2) the proper amount and distribution of capital; and (3) a system of farming which makes the greatest possible percentage of its labor productive.

The first point means that the business should be large enough so that horses, tools, and men will be supplied with a full-sized job, but not so large that it is necessary to duplicate in machinery or work stock by adding some that are not kept busy. The second point means that the capital invested in land and improvements should be based on the quality of the land and on the efficiency of buildings and improvements. The farmer who has more capital invested in buildings and improvements than the efficiency of those buildings and improvements will justify is reducing his income by exactly the interest on this excess value plus the additional upkeep expense and sinking fund. Also the man who pays a higher price for land than the productivity of that land or its convenience to market will warrant finds it difficult to stay in the labor income group to which his farm properly belongs. Few men in this region who went more than 10 per cent above average values for land in their immediate neighborhood have been able to pay the excess interest charge. This same study has indicated that distance to market influences the price of land at the rate of about $1.40 per acre for each mile in distance to market up to six miles. Beyond that point the change in land value with distance to market is only a dollar per acre for each mile, so that a variation of more than 10 per cent from this scale would probably not justify itself in increased return.

The second important consideration is the quality of the business. Quality depends upon having (1) land that will produce as large crops as possible, and (2) live stock that will give as good returns as possible for the feeding and labor given to it. Live stock must return at least $140 for every $100 worth of feed used in order to pay. Many good feeders get $200 return for $100 worth of feed. Crop yields should be equal to or better than the average for a community. Crop yields 10 to 26 per cent above the average are usually justified and make profits easy.

The third general factor seems to be a reasonable degree of diversity. In other words, the farmer who puts his eggs all in one basket or tries to fill a bushel basket with wren's eggs is running two risks—one of having his eggs all broken, or the other of never getting his basket filled. Where special conditions do not justify specialized farming, a farmer should have at least three important sources of income and probably not more than six sources. About 40 per cent of the farmers of the region studied made less than $200 labor income. About 70 per cent made less than $600, or less than $2 a day for their time. The average labor income was about $1.35 per day.

It is difficult to make a big income or a big loss on a small-sized farm. The least successful farmers had more than 200 acres of land and the most successful farmers had more than 200 acres.

The men making the lowest labor income had a much higher investment per acre than the men making the highest incomes. Land value per acre on the least successful farms was $92 and on some of the most successful farms from $60 to $71. The average land value of the region was about $67.

The less successful farmer had 7 per cent more capital invested in real estate than did the more successful farmer. This difference in capital was invested in live stock in the case of the better class of farmers.

On the more successful farms the workmen handled from 60 to 100 per cent more crop acres than did the workmen on the less successful farms. Also the system provided nearly twice as many days of productive labor on the better farms.

The better farms kept more live stock than did the less successful farmers. A larger proportion of this stock was in productive stock and less of it in work stock on the better farms.

The less efficient farmers received from $17 to $25 per animal unit from their cattle while the better farmers received from $37 to $47 from the same unit. With hogs the poorer farmers received $54 per animal unit while the better farmers received $130 per unit.

The more successful farms were more widely diversified, having three important sources of income compared with an average of less than one important source on the farms of lower labor incomes. Sixty-eight per cent of the best farms had more than three important sources of income.

The farms with higher labor incomes made from three to five times as much net income per acre from crops and stock as did the less successful farms.

Crop yields on the farms with the highest incomes were a half more than on the farms with the lowest incomes, the index on the best farms being 124.5 and on the poorest farms, 86.8.

The farmers realizing the better incomes used one-fifth less feed for each animal unit of livestock kept, but realized four times as much in return for each $100 worth of feed used.

One man in seven on the farms with lower incomes has had more than a rural school education. One in three on the more successful farms has had more than a rural school education.

In Wisconsin Professor D. H. Otis has been making an investigation similar to that carried on in Missouri. In reply to an inquiry he says:

"The farmers of Wisconsin who are getting the most, both in money and pleasure, out of their farms are the farmers who have made careful investments in: (1) Just enough land, (2) Just enough equipment, and (3) Bred-for-production live stock.

"Money that is put into land which, for any reason, is not profitably producing crops or that is invested in buildings more than is necessary for convenience and comfort, is dead capital, and brings no returns."

Fruit Growers' Convention Plans

The program for the forty-ninth State Fruit Growers' Convention, which is to be held at Napa, November 15, is assuming definite form. The mayor of Napa has consented to give the address of welcome. The response by the state commisioner of horticulture will be followed by the report of the committee on horticultural legislation. The dried pear industry of California will be discussed by Fred G. Stokes of Kelseyville, Lake County. A topic which is particularly of interest at this time is the standardization law. The weaknesses of this act will be discussed by Mr. F. B. McKevitt, president of the California Fruit Distributors, who has had a large experience in the workings of this enactment. Mr. Fred P. Roullard, horticultural commissioner of Fresno County, will give a short talk on the practical application of the law as applied to grapes. Further discussion of the standardization law in its relation to the shipment of fresh deciduous fruit will be given by Mr. H. E. Butler of Penryn. The practical application of the law with cantaloupes will probably be discussed by Mr. W. Fawcett of El Centro. The future of the wine grape industry will be presented by Mr. E. M. Sheehan, secretary of the state viticultural commission. The future of the raisin industry wil be given by Mr. James Madison, manager of the California Associated Raisin Company. The Prune and Apricot Growers' Bureau will be discussed, as will the subject "Marketing through the Medium of the Parcel Post" speakers yet to be selected. The subject "The Scientific Distribution of Farm Products" will be presented by Colonel Harris Weinstock. A general discussion will follow this topic.

Professor Elwood Mead of the University of California, and the California state commission on colonization and rural credit has consented to talk on rural credit laws.

Other subjects which will be discussed are: "The Peach Growers' Association," "The Farmers Free Market" and "The Disposition of Fruit below the Established Standard."

"The California Farmer and the College of Agriculture" will in all probability, be given by Dr. T. F. Hunt, director of the California Agricultural Experiment statoin. "The Improvement of Nursery Stock" will be discussed by the following well-known nurserymen: Mr. Geo. C. Roeding of Fresno, Leonard C. Coates of Morganhill, and A. L. Wisker of Grass Valley.

Hog Weighs 950 Pounds

J. M. Kovar, a farmer near Cedar Rapids, Iowa, recently marketed a hog weighing 950 pounds, believed to be the largest hog ever raised in that state. Kovar thought 100 pounds more could be added to the size of the animal, but was afraid to risk the experiment on account of the warm weather. The hog was a two-year-old Duroc-Jersey.

Short Courses at Davis Farm

Four agricultural short courses are now in full swing at the University Farm at Davis. All of these began October 2 and will close November 10, with the exception of the Dairy Manufactures course, which continues until November 25. There are 72 students taking general agriculture, 46 in poultry and 24 each in dairy industry and horticulture.

A fifth short course in Farm Tractors, will be given from November 13 to 21. This, we understand, will consist almost entirely of practical work.

Besides the regular work of the various courses, many special lectures and various entertainment features are arranged for the benefit of the short course students, and, aside from all this the farm itself offers much to interest and benefit students. It consists of 779 acres of fine alluvial soil, the larger part of which has been put in full working condition.

A large variety of products are grown on the university farm, both by irrigation and by dry farming. The facilities for investigations on the duty of water are probably unequaled anywhere, and a most complete collection of devices for measuring water are installed so that their actual operation may be seen and understood.

The most important breeds of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry are represented, many animals being prize winners. Herds of beef and dairy cattle are maintained that compare most favorably with any station in the country. Five farm steers sold last fall at an average of over [illegible] per pound on foot and one dressed out at 71.6.

When the farm was first started an orchard was put out containing all of the standard varieties of deciduous fruits, and these now are of full size and in full bearing condition, for practical work in experimentation and instruction. A small planting is also made each season for instruction and experiment with trees of different size and age. Altogether there are nearly fifty acres in orchard and the division of horticulture is after definite results in horticulture to discover and lead the way in best practices of pruning, spraying, fertilization, and all kinds of orchard matters.

Care of Harness for Farm Use

Probably in no other case does the old saying, "A stitch in time saves nine," hold more true than in its application to the harness of the farm. The condition under which harness is used are so exacting that small breaks, unless attended to, are quickly enlarged. Unless a system of rainy-day inspection and repair is installed these little things are let go until they result in a break that lays the harness up, and requires a trip to the repair shop, shortening the life of the harness and losing time for the team.

The statement is often made that more power is required in the preparation of the ground each year than in all other work combined. The horse does most of this labor and for each horse power there must be an outlay of about twenty-five dollars for harness. If the life of the harness could be lengthened by keeping the rips repaired, preventing the entrance of dirt and sweat, which rot out the leather, a substantial saving would be made.

Aside from the actual saving, a clean, well-oiled harness, on a carefully groomed team, is a good advertisement. It gives the outsider a much better opinion of the farmer and his business than does a ramshackle old harness that has never been oiled and is so filled with rivets that it looks more like a coat of mail than a harness.

Nearly all the repairs should be made by sewing, catching up a few stitches that have ripped and preventing the tear from going further. The more extensive repairs should be left to the harness maker, but if the little breaks are kept sewed up there will be few large ones.

The principle of leather sewing is not difficult to master and the tools necessary for the work are few and low-priced. A paper of needles, a ball of thread, wax, an awl handle and awls, a knife, a leather punch and clamps are all that are actually required.

To get the best service from a harness it must be kept oiled so that the fibres of which the leather is composed are lubricated and slide over each other when the strap is bent in working. Oil also fills the pores of the leather and tends to prevent the entrance of water, dirt and sweat, which are harmful to the leather.

For these reasons the harness should occasionally be taken apart, washed well with warm soft water and soap, and, after drying, thoroughly oiled with a good harness oil. A warm place is required for drying-in the oil, and the leather should be worked and kneaded until it is soft and pliable. Ammonia fumes are injurious to leather, so the harness should be stored in a room separate from the horses.

Provide a can of metal polish for the bright parts of the harness. The drivers will take the hint, and when once the use of oil and polish is begun a competition is established that will go a long way in prolonging the life of the harness.

Substitute for Rennet

Experiments have been conducted at the model cheese factory at Finch, Ontario, with a view to producing a substitute for rennet. Satisfactory results have been obtained from pepsin, the scale pepsin being better than the powdered variety. Four ounces of pepsin, dissolved in water, is used for 1000 pounds of milk. Rennet made from calves' stomachs always showed superiority over pepsin, but the difference was so slight as to be hardly noticeable. Pepsin can be used alone or with rennet.

A pound of pepsin, costing about three dollars and fifty cents, corresponds to a gallon of rennet which is now worth seven dollars and fifty cents to ten dollars in Ontario.

Animal Feed for Hens

For profitable egg production hens need some form of animal protein. This can be supplied by feeding a small quantity of fresh meat, ground bone, meat scrap, meat meal, fish scrap or skim milk. Laying pullets or hens cannot get along satisfactorily without animal protein in some form.

For fall and winter egg production the need of animal protein has been thoroughly tested. Four experiments were recently conducted for a year at the Indiana station with single-comb White Leghorn pullets. The object was to determine the value of animal protein in rations for laying pullets. The materials used were meat scrap, fish scrap and skim milk. The pullets were fed a basal ration of two parts each of corn and wheat, and one part each of oats, bran and middlings. In addition one lot of pullets received 3.5 parts of meat scrap, another lot 3.6 parts of fish scrap, another lot from 50 to 60 parts of skim milk, while one lot used as a check received none of these animal-protein feeds.

The results show that the pullets fed skim milk laid slightly better than the other lots during December and January. The pen fed meat scrap averaged 137 eggs a pullet in the year, the pen fed fish scrap, 128 eggs a pullet; and the pen fed skim milk, 135 eggs a pullet. But the pen which received the grain ration laid an average of only 32½ eggs a pullet a year.

But this plan of feeding had an important bearing on the cost of producing eggs and on the profits secured from the different pens. In the pen fed meat scraps it cost an average of eight and a half cents to produce a dozen eggs; in the pen fed fish scrap and skim milk, it cost nine and seven-tenths cents each to produce a dozen eggs.

The profit in the pen fed meat scrap was $1.55 a pullet; in the pen fed fish scrap, $1.56 a pullet; and in the pen fed skim milk, $1.62 a pullet. But the pullets that did not receive any animal protein feeds were kept at a loss.

If laying hens have free range they can get a fair supply of animal protein during certain seasons from the insects which they will pick up. But it is not safe to rely on this. J. P. Morman states that even though his laying hens and pullets may have free range, he always keeps before them, in self-feeding hoppers, such feeds and accessories as meat scrap, meat meal, charcoal, oyster shell and grit; and frequently their mash ration is wet down with skim milk or sour milk.

According to Jean Knethen, Southern California poultryman, "Green cut bone, (scraps of fresh meat cut up fine, bones and all) is the best of all egg foods if it can be gotten fresh. This is the great difficulty. Cut bone that smells rotten and looks dark is not safe to my way of thinking, and hens that are accustomed to clean, wholesome food do not eat it with a relish though they may nibble at it.

"Next to fresh meat the best animal food is milk. The poultryman who has skim or sour milk for his hens or can secure it at a reasonable price need not look for other animal food. The best way of using milk is to let it sour and then mix it with the mash. This mash moistened with sour milk is fed once a day at the egg laying contests at the Missouri experiment station with most gratifying results. When a well balanced mash is fed in this way the hens do not have a chance to pick out what they like best, and everyone gets her share of the milk, which is very high in nitrogenous content and very low in fat.

"When neither milk nor fresh meat can be had the poultryman is obliged to fall back on commercial beef scrap and fish scrap, and these are, as a matter of fact, what nearly everyone uses to provide the necessary animal food. Beef scrap is not always fresh and wholesome. I am afraid that if all were carefully tested much that is fed would be thrown away as unfit for food.

This is the test: Take a small quantity of the beef scrap in a cup and pour boiling water upon it. If the resulting broth smells like fresh beef steak the scrap is good; if it smells like fertilizer it is unfit for use. I have never tried this test; I didn't dare."

Beef scrap runs high in protein and in addition contains ash which is beneficial. It is a useless expense to feed too much. One-tenth to one-twelfth beef scrap in the ration is as much as necessary, provided no other food usually high in protein is fed.

The necessity of meat in the ration is shown by a test at the West Virginia experiment station where one pen of fowls received a ration largely of corn and other starchy grains, while another pen was fed partly on meat and fresh bones. The meat-fed fowls laid 7,555 eggs, while the grain-fed birds laid 3,431, or less than half as many. The eggs from the meat-fed hens were larger, much firmer, rather better, and produced far more vigorous chicks than those of the others.

At the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station a pen of twenty-five Leghorns was fed beef scrap and produced 869 more eggs from November 1, 1914, to July 1, 1915, than a corresponding pen which was fed the same ration but without the beef scrap. The two pens ate practically the same amount of feed, so that $2.10 worth of beef scrap produced 869 more eggs.

Helen Dow Whitaker, of the Washington Agricultural Experiment station says:

"There is no safer or better animal food for poultry than milk. Thirty pounds of skim milk, twelve pounds of green cut bones, and eight pounds of beef scrap are about equal in feeding value. Skim milk may be fed either sweet or sour, but not be fed in first one form and then the other, as the combination gives rise to an acid that is quite apt to cause bowel trouble. Even where skim milk is placed before the hens as a drink all the time, it is quite possible that they will not drink enough to give them all the animal food they need. A better way is therefore to sour the skim milk and make it into cottage cheese. After the first few feeds the birds may be given about all the cottage cheese mixed with four times the bulk of mash that they will eat up clean in an hour. Probably [illegible] results in egg production [illegible] obtained where fresh cut bone is fed about three times per week in quantity about a scant tablespoonful to the bird at a feed. The fresh bone may be best fed in a dry mash but the utmost care should be used to see that the mash is evenly apportioned among the birds so that each gets her share and no more and also to have the bone always fresh. The slightest taint or odor makes the bone a dangerous food, as ptomaine poisoning is apt to result.

"The great problem in feeding for winter eggs is to supply sufficient protein without feeding along with it an excess of fat.

"A hen fed on wheat alone is estimated to get enough fat to make three eggs along with one-half enough protein to make one egg. The same difficulty, exists in feeding corn. Herein lies the value of sprouted oats as a feed. They are as rich in protein as wheat or corn, and less fattening. Dry oats unhulled, are a rather poor poultry food, as the hen is not able to handle the crude fiber largely found in the hull. Sprouting the oats softens the hull and seems to add to the digestibility and palatability of the grain greatly if the sprouting is well done."

John Deere Wagons for California
Special Construction of California Wagons

The climate of California requires a wagon that will stand two distinct and opposite weather conditions—the rainy season and the dry season. In the rainy season the wood stock on the ordinary wagon swells, while in the dry season it dries out and parts become loose, making the wagon unsafe.

To build wagons properly for this trade, men of well-known wagon-building ability have been placed in the field to study atmospheric conditions and the effect on wagon materials. As a result of their observations and tests, California John Deere Wagons have the character of material to stand the severest tests put upon them. Wagons for California not only require the best material, but the wood stock must be carefully and thoroughly seasoned until bone-dry.

BAKERSFIELD, Oct. 21.—The Kern County Agricultural Fair will open in Bakersfield on Tuesday with a five days' program in which the horticultural and agricultural advantages of the new colony districts, as well as the Aladdin like wealth from the mines and the oilfields and the great stock industry of the county will be shown. It is the first big agricultural fair ever held in the county and its inception came through the organization of the Kern County Fair Association largely composed of enterprising colonists who desired to extend an invitation to the whole state to come and view a collective exhibit of their products. The opening day will be under the direction of the county farm bureau headed by G. C. Kruetzer, county farm adviser. Special programs will be held on each day as follows:

Special Days.

Tuesday—Farmers' day, parade of farm bureaus headed by George Peters, grand marshal. Election of officers of county farm bureau at a meeting of the directors before the grand stand.

Wednesday— Tulare county day. Two running races and two trotting races for purses aggregating $1,000; sports and dancing in the evening. Welcome to San Joaquin valley visitors.

Extensive Displays.

Four large pavilions will be used to house the exhibits; 40 stalls will be required for the livestock besides a large number of pens; in all 35 new stalls were added to the old stalls to accommodate the demand for accommodations.

The agricultural pavilion will be located under the grandstand and 12 farm centers will have special booths; special booths will also be set up for the rice and sugar displays, mining, the school exhibits, farm bureau center office, the board of trade and others taking space in this pavilion.

Three tent pavilions were erected. The largest pavilion, 116 by 250, will be devoted to industrial and liberal arts displays. C. A. Barlow is director in charge.

The automobile show will be held in another large tent and the agricultural implements and poultry exhibits will be in a third pavilion.

Rivalry in District Displays.

Farm center day will be featured by the splendid agricultural, horticultural and stock resources of Kern county and there will be much rivalry between the different colony centers in showing of choice products which the local boosters have been assembling for several months.

E. Curtis Clark of Delano has set a lively pace for all the rest of the district farm center workers by starting with the avowed intention of winning first prize of $100 for Delano center.

Wasco, Shafter, McFarland, Pond, Panama, Arvin, Tehachapi, Rosedale and Rio Bravo farm centers, however, have an enthusiastic lot of workers who propose to carry off first prize.

The second prize for farm center displays will be $50 and the third $25.

Live Stock Displays

Two carloads of Percheron and Belgian horses, Holstein cattle and Duroc Jersey hogs owned by the Tagus ranch at Tulare arrived from Riverside fair and two carloads of stock from Tehachapi.

Belted Dutch dairy cows, comprising a carload from the Strader ranch at Ceres, arrived from Riverside fair after winning many prizes.

H. J. Clark, who is in charge of the Tagus stock, stated that California Defender, a Duroc Jersey boar, 2 years old, was recently added to the herd at a cost of $500, after winning the grand prize at the state fair.

Alfred J. Swofford of the Greenfield district entered an imported Belgian stallion, two grade mares and also a mare for J. F. Marsh.

Large Poultry Exhibit

"The poultry exhibit will be larger at the Bakersfield show than we had in Ventura," stated L. B. Hathaway, who arrived here with his wife to assist Secretary T. F. Burke in handling the big rush of business incidental to final installation of the department exhibits. He has had many years' experience and will materially assist in having every detail in shape for opening day of the fair.

Big Midway Features

The United Carnival companies of San Francisco will put on the Midway zone amusement features. The amusement zone will have all of the old-time thrills as well as some of the new stunts.

J. Zapp of Fresno, who obtained a concession to serve meals has arrived in Bakersfield and is getting busy with preparations for the opening day next Tuesday. He is owner of the Zapp amusement park in Fresno.

Ladies of St. Joseph's church in East Bakersfield have also obtained a concession to serve meals at the fair.

Under the auspices of the Los Angeles chamber of commerce and the Auto Club of Southern California a joint special train and automobile excursion will be run from the southern city to the fair on Saturday, October 28. Automobile day and Los Angeles day at the fair.

That all Bakersfield may join in celebration of the success of the fair, Fred H. Hall, president of the Kern County Fair Association, has requested Mayor George Hay to declare Saturday afternoon a holiday. Saturday will be closing day at the fair, and the big feature will be automobile and motorcycle racing.

Offices at Fair Grounds

Headquarters of the fair association were moved to the fair grounds yesterday, where offices will be maintained until after the show. President Hall, C. A. Barlow, T. F. Burke, J. W. Jennings, G. C. Kreutzer, George Peters and other active members of the board of directors, as well as many division managers, have taken up the work of personally directing the assembling of the county exposition.

Hall announced that daily meetings of the executive committee will be held at the headquarters on the grounds, and the committee will be on hand to straighten out any tangles.

C. A. Barlow, vice-president of the fair association, has personally taken charge of direction of the industrial and liberal arts pavilion, in which a complete display of mercantile and factory products will be shown. There will also be an electrical display and a display of fancy goods.

J. W. Jennings of Tehachapi, an active member of the executive committee, has been assigned to the position of manager of the live stock exhibits, being in supreme control of this department.

George W. Kelly of San Francisco, clerk of the race course, is in charge of the racing end of the game, assisted by Judge W. H. Thomas.

George C. Kreutzer, county farm adviser, has charge of the farm bureau management. N. F. Juers is installation expert in the agricultural pavilion.

Farm Adviser on Job

G. C. Kreutzer, county farm adviser, has installed his office in a booth in the agricultural pavilion. L. P. Haupt, acting horticultural commissioner, together with the farm adviser's office stenographer, will occupy quarters in the booth.

The farm expert will soon be on the job all through fair week, ready to answer all inquiries as to farm problems, adaptability of soils, crops, irrigation and methods of marketing.

Workmen have also started building the special booths for the rice, sugar

NEWS JOTTINGS O NORTH WOODLAKE

NORTH WOODLAKE, Oct. 21.—The copious rains of two weeks ago make it possible to plow and sow grain much earlier than usual, and a large acreage will likely be planted in this locality. Leroy Brown, Fred MacClure and Joe Loeschal are among those who will sow large acreage.

The success last season in the use of Milsotis Indica, or yellow sweet clover as a covercrop for the orange groves caused a large number to use the same again this year. Those who sowed early have a fine stand at this time.

Mr. Earl Sandusky is re-installing his pump and motor in the steel pit constructed for same. A large number in the valley have found it necessary to use these steel-lined pits for the protection of pump and motor in high water.

J. J. Bierer has just finished a new ten-inch well for Mr. Stevenson just north of Vine street which promises to be one of the very best in the district. He drilled through over fifty feet of water-bearing sand and gravel.

A force of men are getting the Elderwood packing house ready for a long run on lemons, grapefruit and navel oranges. A large force is now picking and packing red emperor grapes at the Sentinal Butte packing house. They expect to have about fifteen carloads. This will be followed by the packing of other fruits which will likely last until after the holidays.

About fifteen hundred avacado trees will be set in Avacado Cove this fall on the Stevenson ranch. A few trees are now in bearing and several hundred will likely produce fruit next season.

A new school house will be built this fall and winter in the Elda district on land furnished by the Dudley Bros.

Before the season closed, quite a number of our nimrods and crack shots succeeded in bringing home trout, deer and bear. We are quite convenient to the great park and some of the best sporting camps in the state.

There seems to be more splits than usual this season in the navel groves. We are hoping some one may be able to show us how we can handle our trees so as to avoid this loss as the fruit trat split seems to be the very best.

GROWER AT OAKDALE GETS 89 POUNDS OF ALMONDS FROM TREE

OAKDALE, Oct. 21. A record-breaking crop of almonds on a single tree is reported by R. G. Benson, who shipped 89 pounds from a 25-year-old tree of the Languedoc variety. At the current prices of almonds, Mr. Benson received about $12 for the production of this one tree, and has stopped estimating what his income should have been on his entire 16-acre tract at the same rate, for fear that it would have made him a millionaire in a short time.

Work has started on the planting of the 1,400-acre tract near Claribel, which will be the largest almond orchard in the state. The entire tract is to be planted to almonds and something like 45,000 trees will be used in the planting. After being brought to maturity this orchard will be cut into small tracts for sale.

The fifth car of almonds for the season is now being shipped out, and despite reports of an almond shortage, the season production will be larger than last year.

PANOCHE RAILWAY IS BUILDING NEW DEPOT

Road to Be Built to Mines in Coast Range to Start From Dos Palos

LOS BANOS, Oct. 21.—The new Panoche magnesite railroad is building its station at Dos Palos, that being the nearest point connecting with the Southern Pacific railroad. Leading promoters were here yesterday and interviewed J. F. Clyne of Miller & Lux. It is generally understood the company is building the branch road at the present time for its individual use only. Miller & Lux, it is said, would grant them a right of way through their land if they would make Los Banos their terminal, but there is an extra expense of $150,000 involved by so doing to the company. The distance between Oro Loma and Los Banos is seventeen miles. Prominent citizens are still hopeful of securing the branch road.

DAIRY INDUSTRY IS DOUBLED FOR YEAR

Oakdale Creamery Paying $20,000 Per Month for Cream From Ranchers

OAKDALE, Oct. 21.—The dairy industry in the Oakdale irrigation district has doubled again within less than a year, the Oakdale Creamery this week making payments to dairymen of $10,000, or at the rate of $20,000 per month, and nearly a quarter of a million dollars per year. With the dairy industry only four years old in the Oakdale section, the butter output has been oubled and redoubled half a dozen times, and the number of fine dairy cattle and alfalfa to feed them has been growing at an astonishing rate. Four years ago, when the farmers built their creamery here, as a co-operative institution, the payments have grown from $5,000 per year, which was the size of the cream checks during the first year of the industry to fifty times that amount.

Although the cream output is less than for some time, the cream checks are larger than ordinarily, as the price of butter fat is 37 1-2 cents. The recent heavy rains have made a new crop of green feed, and the butter fat production is again on the increase in the Oakdale district.

PUBLIC PARK SITE IS OFFERED TO TURLOCK

Crane Brothers to Donate Tract of 12 Acres to City for Purpose

TURLOCK, Oct. 21.—A movement was started at a meeting of the Turlock Boosters' Club last evening to have the city accept Crane Brothers' offer of twelve acres in the Sierra View addition for a public park. The land is within the city limits and is graded and curbed and has sewer, water and gas. The streets running through it are already bordered by many shade trees and the tract could be transformed into a beautiful park at no great expense. The property is valued at $10,000, and the owners are prepared to make a free conveyance to the city with the condition that it be improved and maintained for the purpose of a public park. Lateral No. 4 of the Turlock irrigation system runs along one side of the tract, and at the southeast corner the district officials are soon to install a drop, which would make it possible to have a permanent swimming pool at that point. One proposed feature of the park is the large area set aside for children's playgrounds, while other portions are to be utilized for baseball grounds, tennis court and other outdoor amusements.

The proposition met the enthusiastic endorsement of the Boosters' Club last night. A committee, composed of Rev. E. B. Winning, E. A. Sweet and Fred Carson, was appointed to confer with Crane brothers with a view of having a definite offer submitted to the city trustees at their next meeting.

ARDENT SUITOR IS PUT UNDER ARREST BY HIS SWEETHEART

MODESTO, Oct. 21.—Allowing slight variations and apologies to Shakespeare, Modesto has a real "Romeo and Juliet" romance all her own, the tragedy being confined as yet to a warrant for arrest of the Romeo. William Henry Wells, 21, carries the role of Romeo, and is now a fugitive from the law. Miss Annie Elizabeth Gervin, 18, and pretty, is the Juliet, and her mother, Mrs. Lena Gervin, the objecting parent. Miss Gervin was fond of Wells' protestations of love until he appeared yesterday evening with a marriage license, when she took a different turn of mind, and supported by her mother, drove the wooer into the street. The repulsed one spent the night tooting his automobile horn as a call to Miss Wells to consultation, but her answer was withheld until the morning when a warrant for Wells' arrest for disturbing the peace was the decisive reply. Wells has disappeared.

THREATENS MANDAMUS SUIT AGAINST JUDGE

Hanford Man Clashes When Denied Privilege of Arguing Divorce Case

HANFORD, Oct. 21.—Threats to bring mandamus proceedings to compel Judge M. L. Short to hear an argument on a demurrer to an amended cross-complaint were made in the Superior Court today when Judge Short refused to listen to Attorney E. T. Cosper, representing the plaintiff in the H. Hoover vs. Mary Hoover divorce suit. Judge Short refused to hear Cosper, who became considerably heated during the argument, on the grounds that the couple had made an agreement to drop the divorce proceedings and live together again. The agreement was made in the district attorney's office. Judge Short stated that while the agreement was in force he could not listen to any argument on the matter, and recommended Cosper to bring the mandamus proceedings if he thought it would get him anything.

BEGIN CONSTRUCTING LARGE RAISIN DRYER

Plant at Armona to Build House With Capacity of 5,000 Trays

HANFORD, Oct. 21.—A big dryer capable of holding 5000 trays of raisins, is being constructed at the Armona packing house for the purpose of drying raisins. The dryer will be finished in the course of a day or so. It is hoped to dry some of the wettest of these raisins and save a considerable tonnage of fruit that might otherwise be lost. A special heating apparatus is being installed, and it is thought that forty-eight hours in the dryer will suffice.

The raisins are being delivered into the packing house both here and in Armona in considerable quantities now. While many of them are rather wet, the bulk of the raisins are in excellent condition. But few lots have been turned down on account of dampness.

WHITNEY TRIAL GOES OVER UNTIL MONDAY

Sensation Is Sprung When Jury Stops Attorney in Narrating Details

MODESTO, Oct. 21.—The trial of George F. Whitney, charged with immoral conduct toward his 17-year-old adopted daughter, Lea A. Whitney, through a course of five years, reached conclusion of testimony by the prosecution yesterday evening after five days, most of which time was taken up by Attorney W. H. Hatton, counsel for the defense, in cross-examination of witnesses. The trial was adjourned to 10 o'clock Monday morning.

The sensation in the case thus far was reached yesterday evening when a juror, George S. Henry, an engineer of Oakdale, jumped to his feet to halt Attorney Hatton, who was pressing for an answer to a question involving nauseating details, with inquiry of the court: "Do we as jurors and citizens have to sit here and listen to such stuff as that?" Attorney Hatton promptly withdrew the question, and court was adjourned a moment later.

The defense will enter upon its case Monday morning, and it is expected that character witnesses from a half dozen towns where Whitney has lived will be called. The Rev. A. A. Holmes, pastor of the First Baptist church, accused by the girl of having among improper advances to her, is among the witnesses subpoenaed by the defense. The trial will probably require the greater part of next week.

CHOWCHILLA NEWS

CHOWCHILLA, Oct. 21.—L. A. Lucas, agriculturalist for the San Joaquin Valley Sugar Company, is continuing his work of securing contracts with Chowchilla farmers for a beet output from an acreage as large as possible the coming season. A sample beet tested in the laboratory at Visalia, grown by a Chowchilla farmer the past summer, showed a percentage of sugar considerably beyond the average.

Some of the young men arranged for a dance Saturday evening by securing the use of a storeroom. The tent used for the anniversary celebration and fair was taken away and Chowchilla has no public hall since the high school is making use of Thornton hall.

When the Chamber of Commerce meets next Tuesday evening, it is expected a report will be made showing progress in the project for a public building. The need of a public meeting place, aside from the church and school house, is becoming rather acute.

New pupils coming into the grammar school increased the attendance until it became necessary the past week to make a reapportionment of the number as between some of the rooms.

The Closer You Get the Better They Look is certainly true respecting the splendid registered Holsteins to be sold at public sale at Sacramento, California, October 26-27, 1916. At whatever point you view them—breeding, individuality, good health—the closer you get, the better they look.

In securing the offerings for this sale it has been no easy task to gain the consent of breeders to sell many of the animals listed. They are the kind the breeder would much rather keep in his own herd—that is why we have been so persistent in having them entered for sale.

Altogether the sale will offer:

that are truly representative of and a credit to the black and white breed.

Five daughters of the sensational young sire KING KORNDYKE SADIE VALE, the greatest number of daughters of this sire ever sold at public sale, are among the females. One of these is out of a 29-pound cow that has a 34-pound 3-year-old daughter.

Two grand-daughters of the $50,000 sire KING SEGIS PONTIAC ALCARTRA, will also be sold.

Among the other top notch females offered are: A 21-pound cow with three of her daughters and one grand-daughter. These are from University Farm, Davis, and are splendid individuals.

Eight great females bred to KING MORCO ALCARTRA, son of the world's greatest dairy producer, Tilly Alcartra.

Four richly bred heifers in calf to KING SEGIS ALCARTRA ABBEKERK, son of the $50,000 sire King Segis Pontiac Alcartra and a 30-pound 4-year-old daughter of Tidy Abbekerk Prince.

Four high class heifers in calf to the $12,500 sire PRINCE GELSCHE WALKER.

Eight great heifers bred to PRINCE GELSCHE WALKER KORNDYKE, the $4,000 son of the $12,500 sire, PRINCE GELSCHE WALKER.

Four daughters of KING KORNDYKE PONTIAC, out of dams with records from 24 to 29 pounds.

Fifteen daughters of a 33-pound sire.

BULLS

Rarely does a public sale offer the wide lattitude of selection, both as to breeding and high individuality, of bulls of real herd heading quality such as will be found in this sale. Among them are:

A son of a 27.50-pound cow whose dam is a 33-pound cow. The three nearest dams of this bull average 30.25 pounds butter in 7 days and 930 pounds butter in one year.

A son of the $12,500 sire PRINCE GELSCHE WALKER, out of a 27-pound 3-year-old.

A son of KING KORNDYKE SADIE VALE.

A son of ARALIA DE KOL PONTIAC SEGIS out of a 27 1-2-pound daughter of Riverside Sadie De Kol Burke, thus combining in an intense manner the blood of two great world's champion cows.

A son of PRINCE GELSCHE WALKER out of a former world's record 2-year-old.

AND LOOK AT THESE TWO!

KING KORNDYKE PONTIAC, the first son of King of the Pontiacs ever offered at public sale in California. He is out of a 26-pound 3-year-old half sister to Prince Gelsche Walker, and her dam is a 30-pound 3-year-old, for many years the youngest 30-pound cow of the breed. As an individual KING KORNDYKE PONTIAC is said by many judges to be the best individual son of his great sire. Here is a sire that will put any herd on the Holstein map in a big way.

A son of KING VALDESSA and out of a 30-pound 4-year-old. The dam and sire's dam of this young fellow average 36.16 pounds butter in 7 days. He is nearly white in color, a beautiful individual, and fit to head any herd.

MADERA

Arthur Heavenrich has purchased from W. A. Griffin 40 acres of land adjoining the Italian-Swiss colony, next to the 60 acres that he bought some time ago. The 60-acre tract has been planted to figs, and the 40 will be improved very soon.

Professor T. Francis Hunt, professor of agricultural extension work at the University of California, spent Wednesday in Madera with Farm Adviser Mayhew. They went over the Fairmead colony on a tour of inspection to find out whether or not the land is good for figs. Last night at the Fairmead farm center meeting Professor Hunt gave a report of his observations. He said that in his opinion the land was good for raising figs, under certain conditions. The soil must be from 3 to 4 feet deep, and the top must be well cultivated. The principal trouble he found with the average soil in the district was that it was baked and run together. These difficulties, however can be removed. The coming of Prof. Hunt was arranged by Farm Adviser Mayhew, and is a good example of the helpful work done by the university and department of agriculture through the several farm bureaus.

THE CURL ARTISTICALLY PLACED

GOOD MOTTO

IT was a small, clearly printed card, hanging in a hotel office, and this is what it said: "Dear Lord, Help Me to Mind My Own Business."

Could anything be more to the point?

And you girls, busy earning a living in this whirling world, you need to take that to heart more than other people, women who live at home or who don't depend on an employer for the wherewithal.

"She just minds her own business," is a thing that it is good to have said of you. The meddler, especially in office life, is sure to get herself in trouble. The girl who always has an opinion to offer on how Mamie or Rose do their work, who answers a question put to some one else before that some one has a chance to get in a word, that girl won't be popular long. What's more, she's certain to be inaccurate most of the time, for she can't know all she thinks she knows. She can't know every one's business, and her own, too.

Never mind if you do think that things would be a whole lot better if managed your way. If they aren't your business, let them alone.

If you chance to hear something that isn't your business, keep quiet about it.

If you happen to know something that isn't your business, forget it.

If there is a quarrel on about something that's no affair of yours, keep out of it.

You will never regret minding your own business, be sure of that. And doing so will not need to keep you from generously giving all the help and advice you are asked for. Keep it till it's wanted.

The Ever Graceful Low Cluster

The Coquettish Ear Ringlet

CURLS NEEDED FOR THE NEW COIFFURE

Used in High Arrangements Curly Puffs Are Becoming to Both Young and Old Who Follow Present Styles.

BY LUCILLE DAUDET.

"BUT what shall I do with them now I've got them?" I heard a woman laughingly remark at a hairdresser's recently, where she had just had a bunch of the prettiest little curls made from her own combings.

"You'll find plenty of use for them," the hairdresser assured her. And when I began to think about it and remembered some of the new hairdressings which fashion is sanctioning, I agreed with the woman who sold the curls.

Yes, you will need curls for many of the new coiffures. If you are one of the lucky ones the ends of whose hair can be brushed over the finger into charming ringlets, you won't worry; those curls will probably just arrange themselves. But if you have to put your hair up in papers, or use the artificial curl of combings, you will have to study the position of the curls very carefully to get away from that stiff look which curls not real often give.

A high arrangement of curls and puffs is becoming for old and young alike. The coiffure pictured is more for the older woman, who makes a soft nest of puffs and sticks a curl or two among them to break the stiffness. The young girl should either curl the ends of her hair for three or four inches and catch them very high on the top of her head with a large comb, or else she should tuck the straight ends of her hair flatly underneath and let the false curls fall gracefully from the comb to give the same effect. A curl dangling from a comb or a pin, however, placed, often breaks the stiffness of a coiffure.

When the back of the neck is not particularly pretty, if short stiff hairs grow there or the hair line is unevenly awkward, a bunch of curls pinned under a low coiffure will hide as much as charity and is, moreover, consistent with new fashions. This is a youthful hairdressing, however, and should not be attempted by the woman who is beginning to show signs of age, as it is apt to make her look ridiculous. Rather should she pin the two very small curls at the neck, one at either side. This arrangement is reminiscent of the days of the Louis in the courts of France when Madame Pampadour started the craze for the elaboratte coiffures which grew to such enormity that women could barely pass through the doors. Their hair was dressed permanently for weeks at a time. Surely we have improved in hygiene!

Sometimes the short hairs at the back of the neck can be trained into curls like those two small ones in the picture. This, of course, is possible only when the hair inclines to curl. Brushing will help, but very small crimpers will be necessary to make the short ends attractive otherwise. Don't curl these small ends on the iron if you can help it, as it will keep them short and stiff.

You do not need to be told that the hair line across the forehead and around the ears is the most dangerous point of coiffure arrangement. Especially should the hair be becomingly arranged over the ears. Some hair is apt to be stubborn at this point. For the woman whose hair always flops just in front of the ear a small curl will often prove becoming.* This is more graceful than the "spit curl" fad of a year or so back. It is Spanish in its suggestion and besides softening the hair over the ears will match/the Spanish trend of dress and coiffure arrangements should one choose to follow this lead.

A last word. If you decide to make use of the artificial curl—and there is nothing to be ashamed of in doing so—be sure that they match the hair exactly, and pin them on securely!

NEVER force a child to eat that against which he rebels, even though it be the most staple of foods. White potatoes will make some children very sick, showing that there is something in the potato which is absolutely poisonous to their systems.

THE VOICE OF A CHILD

BY MRS. KINGSLEY.

MANY a time Margaret felt she would be better off earning her own living again, clerking in a store as she had before marriage. But because of her marriage vow, because of her sense of duty to Joe, no matter what he did, and above all, for baby Margaret's sake, she stayed on in the little home where she and Joe had lived for two years.

Margaret was just a girl, but mother love demanded that her baby be raised properly, should live in its own home, with the united love and care of both parents. So constantly Margaret hoped for a change that the baby might grow up not remembering what had been. Besides, she knew Joe had a right to the love of his child as long as he deserved it. And surely Joe loved baby Margaret dearly.

Soon after they married Joe had fallen in with a drinking set and developed a love of liquor. The young wife tried to make her home comfortable and happy to win him from it. After the baby came he stopped for a while, but soon resumed. While he loved his wife and baby, drink brought out the brutal in him. Margaret was never so happy as when Joe came home evenings and romped with the baby till her bedtime, then rocked the little thing to sleep. But more and more she dreaded the nights he was in no condition to rock the baby. At those times he grew wildly jealous of his wife and accused her of receiving the attentions of other men.

When the baby was two the climax came. Joe, one night while drunk, struck Margaret. The baby saw. Wild eyed she ran to her mother, pulling at her apron and crying. As hard as it was to make the resolve, Margaret decided her baby would better be without a father than to see such things. She knew Joe would repent after his sullenness, but that wouldn't mean reform. Next day she packed her things. She left a note that she couldn't bring her baby up to remember a drunken father. She went to her mother's and from there found a place to work and support her child. But she didn't tell Joe where she was.

For months she stayed away. From time to time Joe wrote the mother to persuade Margaret to return. After six months Joe's pleading prevailed. Margaret consented to let him see her and the baby at her mother's. Baby Margaret was playing on the porch when her father came. He stood at the gate and called eagerly, "Come to meet papa!" The baby stared and made no advance to meet him. She gave no sign of recognition.

Joe went nearer with outstretched arms. "Come!" he called softly, "Catch papa!" The wide open baby eyes were looking at a stranger.

"Six months is a long time," said Margaret from the door, "let her look at you." Joe waited. He held out his arms and called. The child stood still, stolidly staring, then ran to her mother and caught hold of her dress.

Joe sank limply to the porch. Two tears ran down his face. "My God! To think she should forget me!" he said. "It has been bad enough to be there at home without you and her. I've been waiting for months to see her, and now she doesn't know me!"

Margaret came weeping and sat by her husband's side and took his hand. "How much better to be at home together and happy," she said.

"Come home," pleaded Joe. "If I can have you and my baby back again I swear to you she'll never have reason to see me as anything but a father to love and remember."

ODDS & ENDS

TO make flaxseed meal poultice pour rapidly boiling water on to the meal and beat hard, for this brings out the oil in the meal. Spread on a square of cheesecloth, leaving a clean margin of two inches. Fold this edge over on the mixture, lay on another square, which comes three or four inches all round beyond the poultice. Lay it on a hot plate, place a pan over and carry at once to the sick room.

WHILE at the druggist's one can buy ready-to-use mustard plasters and compounds that are even better than home-made poultices, it is well to have something on hand for immediate use, even if circumstances never bring it into use. A quart can of flaxseed meal closely sealed will give material for good poultices. A few dry red pepper pods, also kept in a jar, should be at hand for making a simulating hot tea, useful for a cough or overcoming a chill. It is a pure red pepper which cannot always be said of the ground article.

WOMANKIND takes a lesson from man every now and then in matters of dress, and proof of this is tailored waists. The season's newest are the concrete expression of trim simplicity. White linen in one is frilled on turn over collar and turn back cuff and on either side of the front band with a narrow ruffle of linen, hand hemmed. Such a waist never ceases to mark excellent taste. The other waist is also among the last words of this sartorial matter. The back and sleeves are of white linen lawn; the front and collar and cuffs are of white tucked muslin bought by the yard. The collar is a straight piece of tucking slightly curved to fit the band in front, and may be turned up to form the foundation and turn over points of a black satin ribbon stock and bow. Tucking by the yard may also be bought in various other groupings, and, like the fancy new dress shirts for men, can carry between tucks a row of padded white embroidery made of dots in round or diamond shapes.

SULPHUR and molasses taken internally is a blood purifier that undoubtedly is excellent. The two are mixed to a thick paste and about a teaspoonful of cream of tartar is added to a cupful of the mixture. A big teaspoonful of this is taken for three mornings, skipping the next three, resuming the dose again, and continuing in this way until nine doses have been taken.

THE housewife whose home is filled with dainty chintz draperies and covers is often troubled by the fact that each time her chintz is washed its lovely designs grow a bit lighter, until they are so faint as to be almost indistinguishable. Of course, this fading is all due to the way the chintzes are laundered, and a little more care will keep the bright colors practically the same as new. The chintz should be soaked in cold water made briny with plenty of salt and vinegar. When the brine has thoroughly penetrated all through the goods a little hot water should be run into the tub, enough to make it tepid. The washing should not be done with a very strong acid soap—in fact, a soft soap is preferable. When the chintz is hung up to dry care should be taken that it is not put up in the direct sunshine, but is hung in the shade. When not quite dry it should be taken down and ironed from the wrong side. The great thing in preserving the colors of chintz is not to let heat come in contact with the right side of the goods. Of course, the irons will have to be fairly hot in order that the chintz may look fresh and without wrinkles, but this heat should be applied to the wrong side of the goods.

EMBROIDERED panels, both Oriental ones and those which women can themselves make, are much used for the decoration of lamp shades. The favorite foundation for these is a wire frame in Empire shape, circular and almost straight up and down. These may be covered with a very thin white or flesh colored silk first or the outer cover may be put directly on after the top part of the frame has been wound with a thin strip of silk. The outer covering is made of a plain silk taffeta, pongee or some similar silk, and the panels of embroidery are set on at intervals and framed in gold galloon or fancy silk braid. There is no rule to be followed in the matter of the number or shapes of these panels. If they are not long enough to extend the full depth of the lamp shade, two strips of gold braid are used at the top and bottom, and between the rows of braid the plain silk is fulled on. Gold embroidered ribbons are also good for panels.

AN artist says that it takes three generations to make the hands of a gentle woman or man. He says science has proven this, that no matter where he is he can tell by the hands to which set in life the people belong. It is not possible for everyone to have hands which are formed according to the models which generations of high breeding have produced. But since polite society demands that hands must be clean, white, soft, with nails that are well filed, and free from cuticle and hangnails, it is a demand we can all obey. There is no excuse for anyone to have hands which show lack of care. The woman who does her own housework can have hands which she will not be ashamed to have seen over the card table just as well as the woman of means and leisure. Every woman should keep her hands so that the skin is firm, smooth, small pored, and white. The nails should be filed almond shape and the cuticle should be well pushed back. Hot water will spoil the coloring and texture of the skin quicker than almost any other thing. It should never be used on the hands, which should be washed in tepid water and rinsed with cold. A good hand lotion or cream should be rubbed into the hands after each washing if the hands are inclined to be rough. To reduce the redness of the skin raw cornmeal mixed with sour milk will whiten them, or good scrubbing of soap and oatmeal.

SAVING

THERE is only one method of procedure which leads to a bank account. That is to get the saving habit. It should have been taught us in our youth, and if we were not fortunate enough to have acquired it, then a good deal of strength of character will have to be asserted to form the habit now.

It is very simple, and because it is so simple it is exceedingly difficult. All you have to do to get the saving habit is to go over your accounts, see what money you can spare and determine to put aside a certain sum each week toward your savings fund. Many will contend, in all probability, that they cannot spare a single cent from their weekly or monthly salary. Every bit of it is eaten up by actual living expenses.

In few cases is this literally true. There are not many of us who could not spare fifty cents or $1 a week from our salaries if we were forced to do so.

Saving is not a pleasant business. It means in many cases self-denial and the doing without of many pleasures. But it is only at first that saving seems hard. After we have become used to going without certain little unnecessary things, we never miss them, and look back with chagrin upon the time when we spent money thoughtlessly for this and that.

And for all this self-denial what do we receive in return? The satisfaction of a steadily growing bank account. You can think without dread upon a possible period of sickness, you can look misfortune, in the form of loss of position, in the face unafraid, for you know you have money in the bank with which to tide over your adversity. A bank account also adds to your independence.

Perhaps you think you can spare so little from your present salary that it is not worth putting away. When you are earning more money, you say, you will begin to save. Don't deceive yourself with any such promise. If you don't begin to save now you won't begin in the future. Take a small amount each week from your pay envelope and put it away in some savings bank. When you earn more you can increase the weekly amount. But begin now—today—without a moment's delay.

Get the saving habit. It will be of value to you all your life.

CHILDREN AND THEIR PETS

BY MRS. McCUNE.

THE baby just toddling can be taught to be kind to animals, yet often we see women who look on indifferently as their young children mistreat a helpless kitten or puppy. The driver of a dray horse who is discovered abusing the animal is promptly taken into custody and punished, but there is no law which punishes children for being cruel to animals. The mother who looks on indifferently as her young child maltreats a defenceless little animal—an abuse she considers "cute"—is not only laying the foundation of many years of bitterness for herself at her child's hands, but is by her indifference, developing traits of cruelty in the irresponsible child.

"I shouldn't want to be a kitten in this house," a mother remarked to a friend who was calling on her one day. Then she carelessly turned the conversation. Her three-year-old son in the meantime was mauling a kitten, more dead than alive, yet she made no effort to free the helpless little creature or correct the child. This mother was an educated woman. She had been a school teacher before her marriage, and had dealt with many types of children.

The child who is cruel to animals will develop into a cruel man or woman. You know the old sayings, "Water reaches its level," "History repeats itself," and a dozen other mossgrown adages, each of which should sound a warning note in the mother's ears, but she disregards all warnings and sees only "cuteness" in everything the child does.

Children should be taught to treat animals kindly. Many a country child makes a pet of every hen, duck and calf on the farm, and it is a common sight to see fowls and calves following children, as the dumb creatures know a caress or a few crumbs will be given them. And, on the other hand, how often one sees them running in terror from some child, who, stick in hand, is trying to catch them, only to beat them.

Mothers, do not worry about the future of your country, or wonder how it is going to be governed. Learn to govern your child and see that his heart is trained right. There is cuteness—cuteness of the right kind—and there is what you call "cuteness," which is nothing but encouraging the child to develop into a cruel man or woman.

Therefore, if some day you do not want an arrow to pierce your heart—an arrow shot from the hands of that child whom you see today abusing a helpless puppy—you will immediately punish him for his cruelty to the little animal, and thus start his thoughts in the right way.

Remember, "your chickens come home to roost." The woman who laughs at what her little son or daughter does—the things he or she should not be permitted to do—will some day find tears nearer her eyes than laughter on her lips.

THE KITCHEN

Creamed Celery.

Cut four stalks of celery into small dice, cover with water and let slowly simmer until very tender and perfectly clear. Then drain off the water (which has been slightly salted), put one cup of cream or rich milk into saucepan with one tablespoon of butter, and when hot add the celery. Season delicately with salt and pepper and simmer five minutes, then add one small teaspoon of cornstarch mixed smooth with a little cold milk. Stir in thoroughly and serve hot.

Left-Over Soup.

Put all the remains, bones and trimmings—there ought to be four quarts—into four quarts of cold water. Chop two onions, one turnip, two carrots fine and add any gravy left-overs. If there isn't any gravy add one teaspoon beef extract in a little hot water. Set the kettle on a very slow fire and allow the soup to come to a boil. Let it simmer for six hours, removing all the scum that rises. Strain it through a fine sieve and add salt and pepper to taste. Let it stand over night before using.

Banana Fritters.

Mash four bananas to a pulp, add two eggs well beaten, two cups sifted bread flour, two teaspoons yeast powder, teaspoon salt, about two cups sweet milk or enough to make a drop batter. Beat until well mixed. Have the fat heated as for doughnuts, so batter will rise to top at once. Dip a clean spoon in fat and use it to shape the fritters. Do not make too large. Fry until well browned. Drain on brown paper. To be eaten while warm. Serve with maple syrup.

Directions for Coloring Soups.

A fine amber color is obtained by adding finely grated carrots to the clear stock when it is free from scum. Red is obtained by adding red skinned tomatoes from which the skin and seeds have been strained.

Only white vegetables should be used in white soup, such as chicken soup.

Spinach leaves pounded and juice extracted and added to the soup will give a good green color.

An excellent brown soup can be made by adding burnt sugar or browned flour to the stock.

Tomato and Pineapple Salad.

Removes skins from good-sized tomatoes, cut off top and scoop out and then fill with diced pineapple and put on top a spoon of mayonnaise dressing. Pineapple should be ripe and sweet. This really makes a delicious salad and is somewhat different to salads. The tomato and pineapple blend very nicely, although one would not think so without trying it.

Ragout of Vegetables.

Parboil one carrot, one turnip, two potatoes, two ears of corn (or use canned corn), one cup lima beans and the same of peas, one onion and with them one-quarter of a pound of salt fat pork, drain off the water, and lay aside the pork, slice carrot, turnip and onion. Put in a saucepan with a cup of some good meat soup before it has been thickened. Season well, add the corn with the beans, peas and a sliced tomato as soon as the rest are hot. Stew all together half hour. Stir in a great lump of butter rolled in flour. Stew five minutes and serve in a deep dish, and you have a dish fit for a king.

FRESNO HIGH GRIDDERS OUTPLAY HANFORD ELEVEN AT EVERY ANGLE

Davis, Cowan, Maupin, Fisher and Fuller Show to Great Advantage for Winners and Local Aggregation Gives Fine Exhibition of Football

Fresno High school found the going easy in their battle of the gridiron with the Hanford squad at Recreation Park yesterday afternoon, and when Coach Beebee took his badly beaten and badly mauled sons of the pigskin off the field the count stood 70 for the Fresno eleven, while Hanford failed to tally.

Coach Warner had drilled his boys well in the great American pastime, particularly in the interference line, and it was tear and charge, block and tackle, and then tear and charge again, and in every period some Fresno player went sailing over the line for a touchdown and then a young man named Davis would put his educated toe into play and Fresno would have another point.

Speaking of Davis—when future generations gather on the side lines to watch some big college play, this boy Davis will be among those present on the field and that toe of his will be much in evidence. He can take a football, give it an elegant kick with that educated toe of his and the ball will sail true through the goal posts. Yesterday Davis was called on ten different times to kick, and each time he hit the mark true and with elegance and grace.

Davis was also much in evidence in the field and every play of any consequence saw him mixed in it. Once he made a beautiful forward pass of thirty yards into the outstretched hands of Fuller and then Fuller took the ball over the line for a touchdown.

Another big gun on the Fresno team was Maupin. He played a clean, heady game and to him fell the honor of making the first down of the game. Fisher was another star of the local squad and his sensational run of 80 yards paved the way for Fresno's second touchdown.

Captain Cowan also played a brilliant game in the field and had the honor of scoring one of the many touchdowns chalked up by the Fresno team.

Fresno kicked off and that educated toe of Davis' carried the ball well down the field, but Hanford recovered the lost ground after a brief play and for the next eleven minutes there was some real football on the gridiron. Working their interference to perfection, Fresno gradually worked towards the goal and after eleven and one half minutes of play scored the first touchdown. A moment later Davis kicked and Fresno chalked up seven points. Two minutes after the ball went back into play they scored another seven and with the close of the first quarter the score was 14 for Fresno and 0 for Hanford.

From the shrill of the whistle putting the ball into play for the second quarter, it was not a question of who would win but by how big a score would Fresno take away the game. Fourteen points in the second quarter, another 14 in the third quarter, and 28 in the final quarter, completely eliminated Hanford from having even a ghost of a chance.

Team for team, the Warner aggregation looked all the best. Even if they did outweigh the Hanford boys they outplayed them, outclassed them and outgeneraled them, and the victory was an easy one for Fresno.

ALL ROUND WORK IS WHITTIER'S FEATURE

WHITTIER, Cal., Oct. 21.—The all-round work of Finch, and Whittier's heavier line and backfield were responsible for the defeat of the University of Arizona here today, by the score of 26 to 10. Arizona was first to score on an intercepted forward pass when Brackenbury blocked the ball and after a run of 40 yards made a touchdown, but missed the goal.

Whittier by straight football scored shortly when Finch broke through the line and Abbott kicked the goal. McPherson added three more points by kicking a field goal for Arizona in the second period.

Arizona held Whittier scoreless at the opening of the second half, and not until the last period began did Whittier overcome their rivals' lead. Slowly but surely the brawn of the heavier team wore down the Arizona men, and Finch's rushes added twenty points to his team's total.

SELMA SQUAD WILL BE GIVEN HARD PRACTICE

Selma's gridiron aggregation are in for a good strenuous workout today and Coach Roupe has sent word to every man on the team to get into uniform prepared for a hard grind. Roupe, who is rated one of the best coaches hereabouts, has already showed the fans of Selma that he thoroughly understands every angle of football and the fans of Selma are to be congratulated on having secured such an efficient and well-versed coach as Roupe has shown himself to be.

The former Ames coach is well pleased with the way the team is lining up and he is confident he will have a combination in the field by Thanksgiving Day capable of giving the best of them a royal contest on the gridiron.

Chicago Eleven Is Given Big Surprise

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Playing a sparkling game, Northwestern University sprung one of the biggest surprises in the big nine football championship race today by defeating Chicago, 10 to 0. It was Northwestern's first victory over Chicago since 1901. Driscoll, left half of the Evanston team, was the star of the game. He scored a touchdown near the end of the first period and in the last period brought the crowd to its feet by booting a drop-kick squarely between Chicago's goal posts from the 15-yard line.

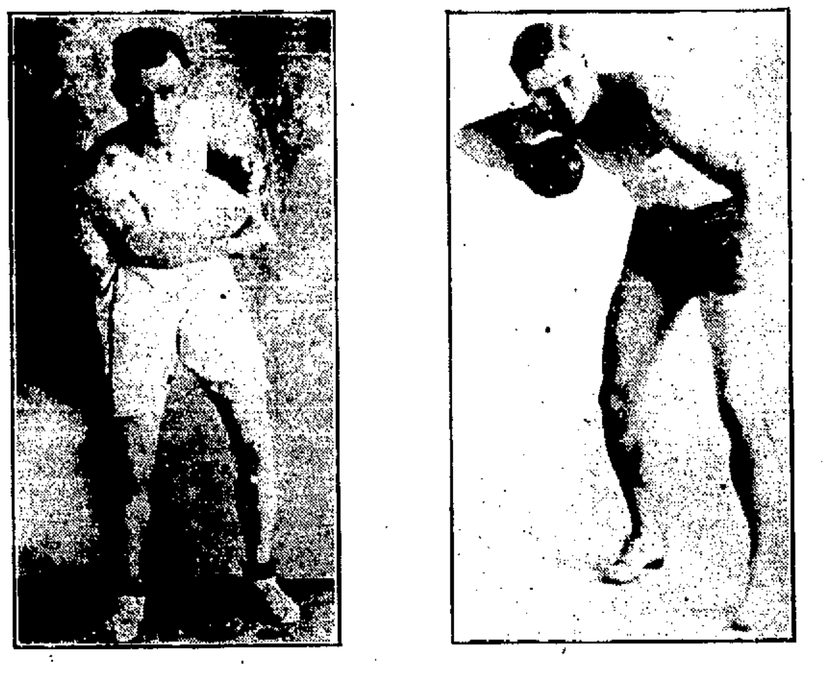
FIGHT FANS LOOKING FOR REAL ACTION WHEN THESE TWO MEET IN FOUR ROUND BOUT AT OLYMPIC ATHLETIC CLUB



FRANK DAKAN

BOB WELLS

Who box the main event next Friday evening at Zapp's Park arena

Wrestling and boxing will be combined in the athletic card to be presented to the fans of Fresno next Friday evening, October 27, at Zapp's Park, under the auspices of the Olympic Athletic Club. William Gianopulos, 140 pound Greek champion of Fresno, and Young Piombo, champion 140 pound wrestler of Italy, will be the participants in the mat contest. Both men are hard at the training grind and an interesting match is looked for by followers of the game.

In the boxing bouts, Frank Dakan, the Pride of Selma, is to meet Bob Wells, and this should be a fast and furious mill. Young McIvor is on the cards to meet "One Round" Caffey, Gene Cline and Roy Finn meet in a return bout, Speed Carlton and Young Morton clash again, and Joe McGurk hooks up with George Kendall. Charley Kline will referee all the bouts.

Owing to the approaching cool weather, the Olympic Club has secured new quarters at Zapp's Park, and all future bouts will be staged in the dancing pavilion. The ring has been placed in the center of the building and the seats have been so arranged that an unobstructed view of the ring can be had from all angles of the building.

Next Friday night's card will start at 8:30 o'clock sharp and membership cards can be secured at the various cigar stores and billiard parlors about town.

VERNON'S HOPES FOR FLAG DASHED WHEN OAKS WIN FIFTH STRAIGHT

Angels Lose But the Pennant Is Theirs. Bees Turn on Seals and Win Handily

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21.—Oakland continued the week's rout of Vernon here today by taking its fifth straight game from the runners up in the pennant race, 5 to 2. Incidentally, losing today's game, Vernon lost her last chance for the championship, Los Angeles clinching the bunting. Heavy hitting when bingles meant tallies, spelled victory for the Oaks. Score:

CHANCE SHOULD WORRY.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21.—Although Portland defeated Los Angeles, 6 to 0, today, the Angels are assured of the Pacific Coast league pennant by reason of Vernon's defeat at the hands of Oakland. Should Chance's men lose all the remaining games, they would end the season .0002 points ahead of the Tigers, should the latter win every contest they still have to play. Cheers greeted the score of the game at San Francisco and Standridge, who had twirled effectively up to the eighth eased up and with errors behind him, Portland scored five runs. Sothoron's effective pitching and Vaughn's two triples were the features. The score:

BERKELEY, Cal., Oct. 21—The football team of the University of Oregon defeated the University of California eleven here today by a score of 39 to 14. The California aggregation, green at the American game, fought gamely to the finish, scoring the last touchdown of the game after it was almost impossible to distinguish the players in the rapidly gathering darkness.

Coach Bezdek of Oregon had a well oiled machine, every part working in unison.

At the start of the game it looked as if the visitors had met their match. After a few minutes of play, California secured posession of the ball on a fumble. Three downs took them fifteen yards, then followed a forward pass which netted ten yards. The play was repeated and the ball was on Oregon's five-yard line while the California stands went wild. Before the northwesterners could recover from their surprise two sharp plunges through the line took the ball over for the first score of the game. It was fast, spectacular football and the crowd was thrilled.

This was California's one great flash aside from the dashing play that netted them their second touchdown just before the close of the game. Oregon pulled itself together and grimly set to work. Play after play was put in motion with clock like regularity and Bezdek's human steamroller crushed relentlessly toward the California goal, making from three to fifteen yards at a time.

Toward the end of the game, with its safe lead, Oregon was content to kick now and then on its first or second down while California vainly threw itself into the breach in its attempt to break their opponents stonewall defense. As darkness closed in on the heels of twilight they succeeded, but it was too late.

The Pacific Coast league rule preventing clubs in that league from playing exhibition games in the spring will probably be repealed as the result of the decision of the Chicago Cubs to train next spring at Pasadena. The same rule prevents outside clubs from using Coast league parks.

Henry Berry, owner of the San Francisco club, was advised that Owner Powers of Los Angeles had proposed rescinding the rule, and Berry said he would favor such action. A mail vote will probably be taken by President Baum.

ROAN HAL OUTPACES GAME HAL BOY IN STRAIGHT HEATS AT ATLANTA

Mary Putney Fails to Better Record By Breaking Badly in Last Quarter

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 21.—Roan Hal, the 2:03 1-4 pacer took in straight heats the $1,500 2:00 class pacing race, the feature on today's card at the close of the Grand Circuit meeting, from Hal Boy. The race was for two in three.

All five heats were required to determine where the money would go in the 2:15 class pacing event with a field of five. Hal Connor, piloted by Childs, took the last three heats straight, while Spring Maid took second in the last three after having won the first two with Hal Connor second.

In the 2:16 trotting event with a field of six, Ridgemark, driven by C. Traynor, made only third place in the first heat, which was taken by Blanche Carter, but he won the next three and the race. In the second heat Blanche Carter made only sixth position, but winning fourth and third positions in the two final sessions, took second money.

The 2:07 class trotting, 3 in 5, purse, $1,000 unfinished yesterday, was won by Bonnington, driven by Geers.

The 2:15 class trotting for three-year-olds with only two entrants was

COFFEE STARS AND SPERRY FLOURS WILL STRUGGLE FOR FIRST PLACE

Two Warm Games Are Promised the Fans by City League Teams at Recreation Park This Afternoon

There should be plenty of action on the ball field at Recreation Park this afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock, when the Wilhelmers and Byrds get into action and the Coffee Stars and Sperrys get into action at 3 o'clock in the Fresno City Leaguers' double header.

H. Stallings Coffee's animated Stars and the Doughboys are neck and neck in the pennant chase and the team that finishes on the short end of the score today will be forced into second place. Your bogom friend has left no stone unturned to line up his full team and says that with the close of the battle today it will be another case of Boston against Brooklyn, with his team just like the Red Sox.

The other game is also for a place. If the Byrds can gather they will tie it up with the Wellheimers, and the boss of the Byrds says his team has not hit its stride and will be in the winners' column from now on. On the other hand, Louie Wellheimer, the man who wears a big red sweater like Bill Carrigan and smokes long black El Ropos, says there is nothing to it but his Stalwarts. All of which means that the fans should witness a pair of fast ball games.

GAMES YESTERDAY

Dickey, 69; Normal, 0.
Holmes, 13; Fink-Smith, 13.

The football game between the Normal and Dickey Playground yesterday afternoon was somewhat of a one-sided affair. Dickey's superior team work gave the Normal no chance, and the goal was never in danger. The game resembled a track meet, with Dickey always leading the procession. The Normal boys have been organized only a short time, but they never gave up for a minute during the whole game. The play was exceptionally clean throughout.

Lineup of Teams

Dickeys—Jamieson, re.; Kasperian and Snyder, rt.; Chitty and Ervin, rg.; Harrison, c; Blasser, Heitzig and Allen, lg.; Gomes, le.; Toomey, q.; Sargent, lhb.; Wright and Schroeder, rhb., and Burns, fb.

Normal—Curtis and Cockrill, le.; C. Tufts, rt.; Stenberg, lg.; Waterman, c.; Holsing, rg.; Richards and Ryan, rt.; Thomas and Woodward, re.; Andrews, q.; Brown and Foster, lhb.; R. Tufts, rhb., and Wallece, fb.

Holmes vs. Fink-Smith

The game at Holmes, between Holmes and Fink-Smith, even though the score resulted in a tie, was very slow, both teams being slow to line up and get the ball in play. Both teams made two touchdowns. For Fink-Smith, Baker made an 80-yard run for touchdown in the second quarter, and Parrett got away with a forward pass in the last two minutes of play. Santas converted one. For Holmes, Tocker and Wasson made one each, but were only able to convert one. The score—Holmes, 13; Fink-Smith, 13.

The lineup:

Holmes—Mathewson, re.; Cochran, rh.; Holmes, qb.; Wasson, lh.; Gilbreth and Persons, fb. and rt.; Marsh, rg.; Crane, c.; Tocher, lg.; Filbert, lt.; Owen, le.

Fink-Smith—Chiochi, re.; Jow, rh.; Candillo, qb.; Baker, lh.; Santas, fb.; Telesco, rt.; Bennett, rg.; Busacca, c.; Barrioz, lg.; Kohl, lt.; Parrett, Telesco and Rosser, le.

DINUBA BEATS TULARE.

DINUBA, Oct. 21—Dinuba had little trouble winning from the Tulare High school football team here this afternoon, the final score being 41 to 0 in favor of Dinuba.

NEBRASKA ELEVEN IS TOO FAST FOR OREGON

Cornhuskers Play Great Game of Football and Aggies Are Beaten 17 to 7

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 21.—By making gains when gains meant goals, the University of Nebraska's well balanced football team defeated the eleven of the Oregon Agricultural College here today by a score of 17 to 7. From the kickoff to the final whistle, plays of the most spectacular kind kept the spectators on their feet.

In every department of the game, the Cornhuskers played slightly better football than their opponents. There were few fumbles, but most of those that occurred were costly.

In the second period, Nebraska worked the ball to within a few feet of the goal. Then, as Caley started across on a line plunge, the ball bounced from his hands. Cannon, the speedy Pasadena boy, playing halfback for the Aggies, caught it on the fly and from behind his own goal line zigzagged his way past tackling opponents in a hundred yards dash down the length of the field to a touchdown. He also kicked the goal.

Conn was the one bright star on the Oregon Agricultural team. The Aggies were outclassed in the punting end of the game.

Howard Berry Stars for Pennsy Gridders

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 21.—Howard Berry, the pentathlon champion, just back from the Mexican border, where he spent three months in the National guard, played sensational football on Franklin Field today and carried the University of Pennsylvania to a 15 to 0 victory over the strong eleven from the Penn State College. Berry, playing at full back, scored twelve points—two field goals and a touchdown and was then carried off the field because of an injury. William Quigley, his substitute, was a worthy star, kicking a fine field goal from placement from the forty-seven-yard line.

FOWLER BEATS SANGER

FOWLER, Oct. 21.—A most exciting baseball game was played last night at the Fowler Grammar school grounds between the Fowler Grammar first team and the Sanger team. The score was in favor of Fowler, 6 to 2. Fowler boys have been playing good ball this season, winning all three games played. They will soon be wearing their new suits.

Washington	0	2	.000

Quite a few changes in the percentage column this week, though the leaders remain the same. In Division I, Kirk still remains undefeated, and the Normal team, when it was called to their attention that they were using players over the age limit, replayed their game with Columbia and lost, so that leaves the three teams bunched for second place.

In Division II, Lowell won out from Jackson by slight margin and still leads the division. They meet the Hawthorne team this week-end, and as the to teams are pretty evenly matched, a good game should result. Webster and Emerson fought it out for cellar championship, and Emerson won—not the game, but the doubtful honor of being at the head of the division—if the reader stands on his head. Emerson has some good players, however, and will undoubtedly be heard from if they do a little conscientious practice work.

In Division III, Edison downed the Normal team with ease. That seems to be a real ball team; and anyone who claims that playground ball is a game for little boys should see the Edison team in action.

The Rules Adopted

Because some of the games had been protested, Mr. Quigley called a meeting of all those in charge of teams, and they unanimously adopted the rules as published by Homan & Co. as the official settler of all disputes, so now the boys and girls may study their books with full confidence that if they follow the rules as laid down there they will be on the right side of every dispute. A question came up in regard to the Normal team, which had been using the same boys in Divisions 1 and 2. It has always been an unwritten law that no boys above the sixth grade should play in the elementary league, and up to the time the Normal entered there never had been a school that had a mixed number of grades. It was definitely settled that the elementary league should contain boys of the sixth grade and under with the age limit of 14. This works a hardship on the Normal team, because there are so few boys to choose from, but I think that when the boys of the fourth, fifth and sixth grades there learn that they will lose their team unless they all get in and work, that they will rally to the good cause. The boys are all much smaller this year and the Jackson school has shown what it can do, even though it is a small school and the A-6th grade has been taken from it.

No Gloves or Masks

It was decided that a bat and ball should be all the equipment for playing, and that gloves, masks, protectors and such-like should be barred. This was done in the interest of the game because one of the fine features of this game is that twenty boys can have such a good time with such a small outlay of money. Gloves are not necessary, but if one boy has one then each other player would think himself in need of one and the game would be spoiled.

Arbitration Board

A board of three members was appointed, consisting of Mr. Quigley, Mr. Hayhurst and Mrs. Schlein, and these gentlemen will settle all points of dispute, decide the protests and take up other points in the interest of the game. Seeing that everything was going so nicely, I withdrew my protest on the Webster-Hawthorne game letting the Hawthorne win on the disputed point. The adoption of the rules was my object in protesting because hereafter there will not have to be even a protest when the same question comes up.

About Umpires.

It would do not good to adopt rules if the old plan of picking up any willing person as umpire continued. This game has its fine points which one who has never played it correctly would not recognize. Mr. Quigley has settled the trouble by authorizing the supervisors of the playgrounds to umpire the games. Of course, they may appoint assistant umpires but in the interpretation of rules they will be boss. These are all fair men who do not care which team wins so long as a good sportsmanlike game is played and they will make themselves familiar with the rules so that the boys who also know the rules will be satisfied that they are getting a square deal.

Twice in the Same Place.

The Webster girls went to the Jefferson grounds Friday afternoon to give those girls a chance to revenge their defeat of the previous week. For a time it looked as if they were going to succeed but the big stick which the Webster girls know how to wield soon put them in the lead and they won 17 to 10. The girls have much to learn about the game and their fielding does not compare with that of Hooper and Cobb so when a team learns how to swing the bat they are pretty sure to win. There were flashes of form, however, for in one inning the Jefferson girls put out three in a row and they were not strike-outs, either.

Questions and Answers.

Address all questions to Playground Ball Corner, care of Fresno Republican.

Why do you have two short stops in this game?—E. S. L.

Answer: This is a difference between our game and regular baseball and I have often thought of the advisability of changing it. The reason is that on the small diamond the ball has such a short distance to travel that the second baseman could not get over far enough to cover that field and take care of his basework also. We might try some games sometime with the one short and see how it works.

If there is a man on first and the batter fans does he have to be thrown out?—B. B.

Answer: The batter is out without playing for him unless two are out in which case he can run and try for his base.

Playing First Base.

A few pointers this week on guarding the first bag. Some first basemen imagine they must keep a foot on the bag and the other boy who fields the ball must throw it into his pocket. A good first baseman plays about five feet to the inside of his base and three feet back and so covers part of the field himself. A little practice will tell the player just how much ground he can cover and still take care of his own bag. Never get far enough away so that the batter can put a hot liner between you and your own station. Practice taking the throws and liners anywhere in your circle of ground, touch your foot to your base and then throw to some one else. In a little while the action of getting to your base and touching it will be second nature and you will not forget it, while the practice of working in a circle around your base will help you spear many a wild throw that would go for an overthrow if you stuck to the base. With a man on first, however, you must stick closer to the bag.

Get the habit of going up on the short hits that come rolling toward you and let the short stop take your throw on the bag. He may need a little practice to do this so you had better see that he gets it. In the big game the pitcher does this covering but in our game that is a good job for the short fielder.

Like all other players in the game, think ahead. If you go in to take a fly think as you go for it, to what base you will throw it to catch a runner who has to return.

Never mind the crowd. Keep your eye on the ball wherever it is. And, above all, appear confident—let the rest of the team feel that you are sure of holding the ball if it comes within your reach. A cool, confident first baseman steadies the player who is liable to become nervous and throw over your head.

MORMONS WIN FROM SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 21.—The University of Utah eleven defeated the University of Southern California at Fiesta Park here today by a score of 27 to 12. The visiting team forced the Trojans to take the defensive for the greater part of the game.

Mallette, University of Southern California's left half, was the individual star of the game, scoring both touchdowns for the local team after two sensational runs, one for 30 yards and the other for 78 yards.

In the first dash Mallette received good team interference, but in the second run he made the distance practically unaided, slipping through the entire field.

BILLY JORDAN WAS LONG IN FIGHT GAME

Could Talk About Fights He Had Witnessed Back in the Days of '49

William Jordan, known wherever the ringsters gather as "Billy" is no more. The Associated Press carried the news of his death the length and breadth of the land Monday evening, and wherever the news was read keen sorrow was expressed by all followers of sports and most particularly by those that knew him.

No more will his voice introduce the fighting men to the fans nor will he say both men will break at the order of the referee and may the best man win, Let 'Er Go.

Billy Jordan was born in the state of Massachusetts in 1833, in consequence was 83 years of age when he passed away last Monday afternoon in the Old Soldiers' Home at Yountville.

When Billy was 28 years of age he enlisted in the Navy and was one of Farragut's gallant men at New Orleans.

He returned to Boston and joined the army, serving in the campaign before Richmond until the close of the war.

The Jordan family was ably represented in the conflict of the Civil War, for three brothers were fighting in the North and two with the South, all being killed in action save Billy.

After the close of the war Jordan come to San Francisco and has resided here ever since, being a voter for more than half a century. He could take you back to the days of 1849, when Tom Hyer defeated Yankee Sullivan, and in all the years of his California residence Billy was close to the boxing game and close to the pugilists who were in the public eye.

First of all he was a bare-knuckle fighter. Then he became a referee, and rounded out his career with more than thirty years of announcing from the ringside. No championship match was complete in all its details without Jordan, and no promoter would have dared face an audience with any other man to start the program than this same veteran.

For twenty years he served as a meat inspector in San Francisco, having been appointed to that post by Governor Budd. On January 1, 1913, having been in office for two score years, Jordan, incapacitated for strenuous work, resigned.

He entered the Yountville Soldiers' Home; but life in the Napa valley was altogether too quiet for one who had been reared in the midst of excitement. Billy retraced his steps to Fillmore street, where he could foregather with old cronies, and remained in a hotel until friends were forced to urge him back to Yountville for the care and attention he required.

Some time ago Jordan was found in a San Francisco hotel in serious condition. He was removed to a hospital for treatment, and a monster benefit was arranged to look after his financial necessities.

Thought He Was Cheated on Deal

One of the biggest baseball bargains on record was Zack Wheat. C. Hercules Ebbets bought him from Mobile in 1909 for $1200 and at the time figured that maybe those southerners were slipping a little something over on him. But Ebbets got a surprise—and an agreeable one.

Wheat has been a major leaguer for eight seasons and finished with a clubbing average beyond .300 on five separate and distinct occasions. Oddly enough he never hit .300 in the minors, yet in his first year in the big leagues he clubbed 'em for .304. In 1912 he hit for .305, in 1913 it was .301, in 1914 for .319. He slumped to .258 last year, but came right back this season with something like .320.

Thirty Pound Cat Is Hunters' Trophy

MARICOPA, Oct. 21.—Lee Welch and John McCoy brought in a fine wild cat for a trophy of the opening shoot on the fifteenth when they went out for quail. The cat was a fine specimen and was shot as it was stalking quail for its breakfast. When brought to Maricopa and weighed it tipped the scales at thirty pounds. The animal was skinned and the pelt will be mounted.

West Point Outscores Hartford Collegians

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Trinity was badly beaten by the Army today, the Cadets rolling up a score of 53 to 0 against the Hartford Collegians. The West Pointers used an entire substitute team at the outset, but the last two periods were played with most of the varsity men in the line-up.

McGraw Must Look for Another Nanny

In former days John McGraw took keen delight in riding Heinie Zim when his Giants met the Cubs. Mr. McGraw will have to pick another fellow to kid, now that H. Zim wears the checked suits of the Giants. Jeff Tesreau is probably sorry to see Heine with his team. Jeff had lots of fun pitching to Zim, the duel usually being a battle of wits.

Year Has Been Odd for Walter Johnson

Walter Johnson has had an odd year. He has won more games than any pitcher in the American league. Yet only two pitchers lost more than he has. Both of these are with the Athletics. Joe Bush and Ernie Meyers of the Athletics are the two hurlers who lost more games than the Smoke King. Bush lost more games than any pitcher in either major league. There are many who still regard Sir Walter as the greatest pitcher of the game, a bit beyond Alexander, Pfeffer, Ruth, Shawkey, Leonard and the rest. Still, having lost nearly half his games, it can hardly be said that the present season has been one of roses for him.

Baseball Record for Honus Wagner

Honus Wagner is unique in baseball in several ways besides being the only man who ever batted for .300 in seventeen successive years, and, never being a holdout, he has worked for only one man in his twenty seasons in major league baseball. He went to work for Barney Dreyfuss in Louisville in 1897, and he is still drawing his pay from the same man in Pittsburg in 1916. No other active player has worked for one man anywhere near the same number of years. Terry Turner went to Cleveland in 1904 and has been steady on that job, and Lajoie was with Charley Somers in Cleveland from 1902 to 1915.

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.

Two more Australian pugilists have joined the army and are now in the trenches. They are Bill Squires, former heavyweight champion of Australia, and Arthur C. Cripps, middleweight champion of Queensland. Squires is well known in this country. He came to San Francisco as one of the best advertised boxers that ever came from Australia and lasted but one round with Tommy Burns.

ENDS IN TIE SCORE.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 21.—The University of Missouri and Iowa States College played a scoreless game here today. Four times the Missourians attempted goals from the field. Muir missed three trials at goal for placement and Peeples missed a drop kick. Iowa State rushed the ball half the length of the field in the last few minutes of ball. With the ball eight inches from the goal line, on first down, Iowa State gained six inches through the line and the final whistle blew.

Maricopa District Is Alive With Game

MARICOPA, Oct. 21.—Scores of successful duck hunters return daily from Lake Buena Vista where they have but little trouble in securing a good bag of game. On the opening day of the season many Maricopa nimrods secured the limit in a few hours and others were so successful that they secured enough for their table and quit before the day had well started.

Quail hunters are also successful and every day many have returned from the hills and plains with the limit for each member of the party. The quail are particularly good this year, being tender and fat.

IS COAST CHAMPION IN THREE YEAR LINE

The three-year-old filly Lulu B. by The Bondsman out of Loma B. by Stam B. is the fastest three-year-old trotter for 1916 on the Pacific Coast. At Fresno on Thursday of this week Lulu B. stood best in the summary of the 2:15 class trot, where she met a field of four aged trotters for a purse of $600. She won the second heat of this race in 2:11¼, the fastest by two seconds trotted by any three-year-old on the Pacific Coast this year. Lulu B. since her first start of the season in the Pacific Breeders' Futurity at Santa Rosa has been a most consistent trotter. She won that race, taking a mark of 2:13¼, was tied with Hermes at the end of the third heat of the Occident Stake at Sacramento, defeated that good colt in the Stanford Stake a few days later and was second to Hermes in the Pleasanton Futurity the following week, which was the last of the three-year-old stakes to be trotted. In four starts she won two races and was second in the other two. Although she was lame after her Santa Rosa race, owing to a curb, she trotted gamely and consistently in every heat in which she took the word, and from the speed she has shown as a three-year-old it is perfectly safe to predict that she will trot to a very low record before her racing days are over, provided no accident or illness prevents. She is owned by one of the most popular of Californians, Mr. M. L. Woy of Fresno, and there is no man to whom the horsemen of this state will extend with greater pleasure the honor of breeding and owning the fastest three-year-old trotter of the Pacific Coast for 1916.

Harvard Grid Squad Plays Ragged Game

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 21.—Harvard piled up forty-seven points against Massachusetts Agricultural College today and easily kept the visitors from scoring. Notwithstanding the big total tally Harvard's offense proved very ragged. Casey again gave a brilliant exhibition of open field running, but his long gains were due chiefly to his speed and use of the straight arm, as he received little help from his interference.

Wisconsin Wins But Loses Star Player

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 21.—Wisconsin won a costly victory from Haskell today, 13 to 0. In a plunge late in the final period, Eber Simpson, the star Badger halfback, was thrown hard and received a severe injury to his left knee. He will be out of the Chicago game.

Millions of Salmon Destroyed Yearly

Millions of salmon are destroyed every year by the bears of Alaska, says E. Lester Jones, deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Fisheries of Washington, who looked into the salmon situation in Alaska for Uncle Sam. The bears, he says, haunt the shores of streams during the spawning season, and, besides killing huge quantities of salmon for food, slay many thousand of others just for the pure joy of the sport. The commissioner in his report tells how at Black Bear creek in the Cleveland peninsula he found the shores for 150 feet on both sides littered with hundreds upon hundreds of humpback, river and chum salmon that had been tossed out of the water by bears. Hardly any of the fish had been mutilated except the marks of the bear's claws on their backs. All that was eaten was the "cheek" of the salmon the bear, according to Commissioner Jones, being very fastidious and preferring that part to any other.

Ten Girl Swimmers to Start Across Gate

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 21—Ten girl swimmers who will attempt to swim the Golden Gate tomorrow morning met at the P. A. headquarters last night and received their instructions. The race will start at 9:15 a. m. Boats and launches will be furnished by the Ariel, Dolphin and South End clubs. Each swimmer will be allowed a boat and two attendants. Those entered are: Edith Hickman, Ada Hersey, Eva Schmidt, Mae McCabe, Edith Ratuss, Mrs. Belle Crawley, Alice Goodman, Wallie Mahn, Katharine Jahne and Edith Vannuchi.

BIRD SANCTUARIES

States that now have sanctuaries set aside for bird life, following Iowa's pioneer idea, now include New York, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Utah, Minnesota, Georgia, Massachusetts, South Dakota, Wyoming, Arizona, California, Michigan, Washington, New Jersey, Virginia and New Hampshire. Plans are being discussed for bird sanctuaries in the following states: Ohio, Kansas, Alabama, Nevada, Tennessee, West Virginia, Vermont and Colorado.

SHOULD FINISH GAMES.

Consecutive winning streaks are seldom due to a pitcher's individual brilliancy, as is proven by the Cheney and Davenport streaks. Both men have been pitching brilliant ball, but Cheney was saved three times while compiling his record of eight straight, while Davenport has been batted out of the box twice, but he is still unbeaten. No record for consecutive victories should be placed on the books unless the pitcher finished all his games.

FOUR YEARS BETWEEN

Four years is an age in base ball. Only the other day Matty and Mordecai Brown met in a pitchers' duel at Chicago. When they faced each other four years ago the hits were scarcer than fleas on a fish. But in their last merry meeting the two former shut-out pitchers allowed some 34 hits and a matter of 19 runs between them. Matty was the better pitcher, allowing a mere matter of 15 hits.

In the future, professional golfers when competing in the national open championship tournament will play for more money than formerly. That much was definitely decided upon at a session of the United States Golf Association executive committee held at Philadelphia. To be exact, the national prize list will in future be $1300 instead of $500, with the amount of first money raised from $300 to $500. The new list will be as follows: First, $500; second, $250; third, $150; fourth, $100; fifth, $75; sixth, $65; seventh, $55; eighth, $45; ninth, $35 tenth, $25.

STOVE LEAGUERS ORGANIZE AND SEASON IS WELL ON ITS WAY ALREADY

Merry Talkfest Is Heard as to What Was, What Is and What Might Be in Baseball

While the Pacific Coast League still has a few more days to romp, and the active baseball season does not close until October 29, the Stove Leaguers are already in session. The Remember Boy and the Predicting Boy are on deck, and what used to be and what will be is being freely discussed by the wiseheimers of the game.

Walter McCredie is one of the high moguls of the Stove League, and Walter talks more in the off season than he does in the real season. In the meantime Walter has passed his opinion on baseball in general and wants the P. C. L. to cut down the playing season. That is, Walter wants to start one week later and finish up one week earlier.

Walter is also in favor of a longer training season. He says that three weeks is not long enough for a team to get into condition. All of which caused the Remember Kid to remark that some clubs train all season and then never get any nearer than the last hole to the pennant.

He also declares that Portland is going to be the best city on the Coast next season. Perhaps Walter says this so that the P. C. L. directors won't tie the can to his club and transfer the franchise to either Fresno or Sacramento. Still, nobody in this neck of the woods is breaking his neck to break into Al Baum's show, and Walter need hardly be afraid of Fresno trying to take his team away from his. Sacramento might do it, but the way Wolverton and Jacobs nicked the bank roll there will cause the boys to give a good long look before they begin to loosen up on the bank roll.

Still Have City League

Around this neck of the woods the old national game has not enjoyed much prosperity for many moons, and at present all the fans who follow the game have is the Fresno City League, and in the credit of the boys it must be chronicled that they are giving the fans a good article of baseball. Just why Fresno can not or does not break into a Valley league is something the writer can not understand. Fresno, Merced, Modesto and Madera would make a fine little league. Of course, Merced, Modesto and Madera, and also Fresno, would have to get away from hiring big-league timber. Fact is, this hiring of big-league timber by country teams does not do baseball a bit of good.

Far be it from the Sport Editor to dig up the little hammer and begin to knock, but Merced gained nothing last Sunday by signing "Rowdy" Elliott and others to help them win the semi-professional championship of the Valley or the State of California. Truth of the matter is, had Merced won, the team could not have claimed the championship, for "Rowdy" Elliott is a dyed-in-the-wool professional, and "Rowdy" plays baseball for the shekels in it. Fans who were at the game say that "Rowdy" played like a busher, and that his errors helped defeat the Merced boys more than anything else.

Of course, one could not blame Merced for bolstering up the line when Richmond did likewise, but would have been much nicer had Merced stayed at home and played against Modesto or Madera or Fresno, with a lot of the home-town boys in the line-up. It is the home-town boys who deserve to be recognized, and when baseball managers get back to this way of thinking, the game will come back into its own in the Valley, and not before.

Organization Would Help

The writer is of the opinion that a Valley league is the salvation of the game at Merced, Modesto, Madera and Fresno. These four cities could get together, draft a set of rules, each team put up a forfeit and go to it. Each team could be limited to fifteen players, and each club could be allowed to sign up three outside players during the season. Instead of paying anywhere from $200 to $300 for Coast League talent that is not worth it, this money could be spent at home with the home-town boys, where it should be spent.

The fans are partial, and the chances are a game of baseball at Merced between Fresno and Merced, with Fresno and Merced boys in the line-up, would prove far more interesting and would be a much better ball game than the one the Merced boys played with hired talent worth $250 and Richmond played with hired talent costing a like sum.

Sparks Is the Star of Michigan's Win

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 21—A field goal by Sparks in the first period and a touchdown by Maulbetsch just before the final whistle blew gave the University of Michigan a 9 to 0 victory over the Michigan Agricultural College football team here today. The game was fiercely played and severe penalties were numerous.

Sparks was the star. He made spectacular runs of 10, 15 and 20 yards and directed his offense with good judgment.

PRINCETON WINS EASILY

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 21.—The Princeton football team had no difficulty in disposing of Lafayette here today by a score of 33 to 0. If Coach John Rush of the Princetons had kept his regulars in throughout the game, the score would have been probably larger. He rushed in a string of substitutes in the last two periods.

HEAVY SCORING HERE.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 21.—South Dakota University proved no match for the University of Minnesota and the Gophers rolled up a score of 81 to 0 in today's game, which was played on a heavy field. At not time was the Minnesota goal in danger.

MOSS USED TO DRESS WOUNDS

NURSES MAKING MOSS INTO DRESSING

MOSS gathering long has been a recognized occupation.

In the southern portion of the United States, where gaunt sycamores and spreading live oaks are draped with festoons of the Spanish variety, many are the people who earn a livelihood picking and packing it for the market, where it is used for mattress filling. But it has remained for the great European war to open channels whereby a certain species of moss now is employed as a surgical dressing.

The Sphagnum moss industry has become a recognized calling during the last two years throughout the greater portions of Ireland, England and Wales. So rapidly has this branch developed that it now engages the services of thousands of workers, and, owing to ready assistance granted by landed proprietors, headed by the king and the princess royal, collectors find no difficulty in pursuing the work.

Sphagnum moss grows so abundantly that the supply practically is inexhaustible. It is found in damp places, so closely packed that often it forms cushions and clumps. Varieties range from large to small, and the colors differ from a very light green through pinks to deep reds and browns. Its cheapness, absorbency and simplicity of preparation, which can be done entirely by unskilled labor, gives it a tremendous advantage over cotton wool.

Preparation of the moss is simple. It is gathered as carefully as possible to keep it free from dirt and sticks. It is dried either on large pieces of cloth spread on the ground, or in coarse cloth bags suspended from trees or lines, so that it can be moved under cover in event of rain. Indoor drying by oven has proven unsuccessful, as the material thus is rendered so brittle that great waste results.

Next comes the process of cleaning, usually accomplished while the moss is slightly damp. Workers hand-pick it, exercising care not to break the pieces and carefully removing every particle of foreign substance. Pine needles are the hardest to discover, as they hide themselves maliciously and prove a nasty obstacle if introduced into an open wound. The final stage sees the packing—for the moss is not ginned, but packed into small bags of thin muslin. These vary in size, according to their purpose, and serve to prevent dust from filtering from the dressing.

Moss is superior to cotton wool in that it takes up twelve times its own weight in water. This is one of its virtues, for it renders frequent dressings less necessary, saving the physician time and the patient disturbance and uncomfort. Four varieties are commonly employed—sterilized, unsterlized, sublimated and sublimated-compressed. Some of the home hospitals sterlize their own, but the majority of the product is shipped away ready for instant use upon its receipt.

To many of the poorly-equipped French hospitals sphagnum moss is proving a mighty boon. Already it has reached Egypt, France, Mesopotamia, Serbia, Belgium, Italy and Russia. It is not entirely a new discovery, for records show that it was employed by the Celts as early as 1014. But it was little used and comparatively unknown until Charles Cathcart, of the Edinburgh Royal Infirmary, exploited its possibilities during the present need. Since then the making of the dressings has become a national industry in Great Britain.

SPHAGNUM MOSS ½ SIZE

CHIN SHOOTS THIS NEW PISTOL HAT

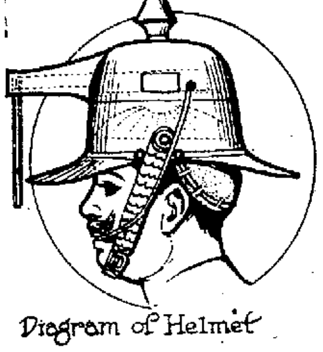

Diagram of Helmet

AN explosive hat that permits the wearer to shoot accurately in any direction his head is turned while his hands may be otherwise engaged, is a remarkable invention that is attracting the attention of police departments from one end of the country to the other.

The value to a soldier of a firearm of this sort is of course apparent and it takes but little consideration to see how superlatively valuable it can be to a policeman.

There are any number of occasions when a police officer finds it necessary to wade pell mell into a gang of rowdies or toughs and grab as many as he can hold. With both his hands occupied the policeman is at the mercy of any of the remaining members of the gang who have any desire to make trouble for him, whether it is a blow from a billy or a shot from a revolver.

With the hat that A. B. Pratt has invented and patented the policeman has what is practically a third arm and hand. If an attack threatens him he can turn his head and hat in the direction from which it comes, and by a movement of his chin, send one or more bullets into his attacker with an accuracy that is greater than that of a revolver pointed by hand.

The hat is made of light steel sheeting and is held firmly on the head by a number of strategically placed straps. From the front part of the helmet project the barrel of the pistol and also an apparatus for taking aim which is directly on a line with the eye.

The strap which runs under the chin holds the whole apparatus steadily straight, while another strap, which runs to the mouth, pulls the trigger and fires the bullets. The head of the wearer is so protected by padding that he does not suffer at all from the recoil.

FRANCE Forbids Luxury IMPORTS

A recent law prohibits the importation of a large number of articles, mostly luxuries, into France. Many of the articles whose import is forbidden come from the United States and England. The object of the decree, it is understood, is to make available more space in vessels sailing to French ports for such supplies as are absolutely needed by the government.

How They FIX PIGEONS to CARRY MESSAGES Safely

THE general notion that all that has to be done in forwarding a dispatch by pigeon is to catch the bird, tie a letter to its leg, and then liberate it, is utterly fallacious, as the method of attaching the message is of great importance. Besides, to be of much service, the bird must have been thoroughly trained; otherwise, if the distance to be traversed be great, the pigeon will in all probability lose its way, as it depends more upon observation than anything else for guidance in its flights.

Prior to the siege of Paris the method of affixing the message to the bird had not received that attention which it demanded, and consequently many dispatches were lost in transit.

At first the message was merely rolled up tightly, waxed over to protect it from the weather, and then attached to a feather in the bird's tail. But it was soon found that the twine which kept the missive in its place cut or damaged the paper, and therefore, in order to prevent it from being pecked by the pigeon and from being injured by wet, the dispatch was inserted in a small goose-quill two inches in length.

The quill was then pierced close to each end with a red-hot bodkin, so as not to split it, and in the holes waxed silk threads were inserted to affix it to the strongest tail feather. By attaching the message to this part of the bird's body its flight was not in any way interfered with.

Stefansson Finds a New Greenland

In the far north the new land discovered by Vilhjalmur Stefansson is, according to word sent south by the explorer, a second Greenland. Some time ago Stefansson had explored about 200 miles of its shore line and found high mountains on it. Stefansson, who went into the polar region in 1913, probably will not return to civilization during the present season, but will continue his work of exploring newly discovered land north of Prince Patrick land.

WILL GUIDE Ships In ICE by Aeroplanes

AEROPLANES for sighting icebergs and icefields, to enable a ship to steer clear of them, are being seriously considered by a Norweigan steamship company that has many difficulties from ice. The steamers of the line ply to Siberian ports by an Arctic ocean route, which is badly blocked by icefloes in some seasons.

Under the present method, when floes are sighted by the lookout, the steamer has to cruise back and forth until it finds a way through or around the floes, and much time is thus lost.

The proposal is to have an aeroplane on each steamer and to have one of the crew trained to fly. When ice is sighted the aeroplane would go up and the airman could in many instances see that in a certain direction the water was clear, or perhaps even determine the entire extent of the floes. His report would then enable the captain to fix the shortest route round the obstruction.

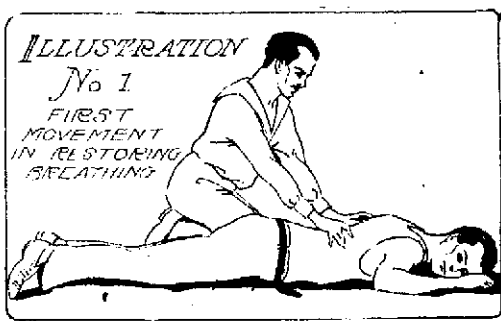
Methods of launching an aeroplane from the deck of a vessel are still imperfect, and other obvious difficulties appear; but the company has the idea in mind and hopes it may find it feasible.

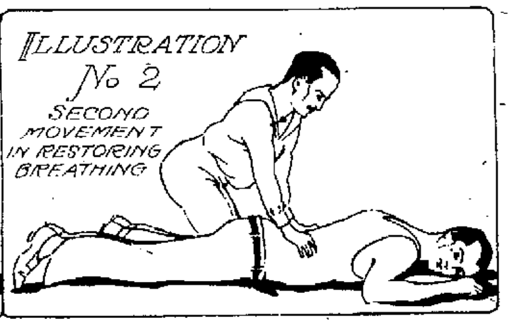
What HORSE POWER IS

TO LIFT 550 pounds one foot in one second requires what is known as one horsepower. Similarly a horsepower is able to raise twice that weight one foot in twice the time, or one-half foot in just that time. Moreover, it can raise one-half of 550 pounds one foot in half a second, or two feet in a second, and so on. Therefore, when we lift one-fourth of that weight, 137½ pounds, four feet in one second, we are exerting a horsepower. Accordingly, when a person who weighs 137½ pounds runs upstairs at the rate of four feet a second, he is exerting the equivalent of a horsepower. For a man weighing twice that much, 275 pounds, it would be necessary to climb at the rate of only two feet a second to exert a horse-power.

It is possible to do much more. As a matter of fact, a horse often exerts many times a horsepower. The average horse can draw a wagon up a hill where a ten-horsepower engine with the same load would fail. A horsepower does not represent the greatest momentary strength of the average horse, but is a measure of the power which he can exert continuously.

DEALS LIFE-SAVING MACHINE DEATH BLOW





What the Bluejackets' Manual of the United States navy advises for resuscitating patient: Remove shirts; lay the patient on his stomach with his face turned to one side; kneel beside him and place the palms on the small of his back just below the ribs as in Illustration I; lean forward and gradually bring the weight of the body on the hands as in Illustration II, thus forcing the air out of the lungs. Avoid roughness. Second motion: Release the pressure quickly and return to the original position. The first motion should occupy two or three seconds. After returning to the original position there should be a wait of about two seconds before repeating; thus there will be about twelve respirations every minute. Imitation of natural breathing is the object. These efforts should be kept up for at least two hours, or until natural breathing is restored.

THE deaths that have resulted from the use of such life-saving machines as have come to the market in the past few years have caused Pofessor Yandell Henderson of Yale to utter a cry of protest.

After a thorough study of the many different kinds of resuscitating machines that are generally supposed to revive a victim suffering from electric shock, asphyxiation or from inhaling water, he reaches the conclusion that no mechanical device is as effective as skilled manipulation by human hands.

Each of these machines, he says, has its advantages and furnishes a good means of supplying artificial respiration. They will not restore the heart beat nor counteract paralysis of the brain or nerve centers. Too many people hold a blind faith that they will accomplish these impossible things.

"There has probably never been invented an apparatus which of its own accord aroused such extravagant and unfounded expectations among the general public," says Professor Henderson, who is on the faculty of the Yale medical school in speaking of these resuscitators.

"It was, indeed, impressive to see the apparatus working automatically. Coupled with the ignorance of most persons as to the distinction between mere unconsciousness and respiratory failure, and as to what part treatment can play in resuscitation, the interest which the resuscitator excited caused it for a time to receive such an amount of free advertisement as would undoubtedly have resulted in its being purchased almost universally within a few years. Public opinion in numerous cities compelled the gas, electric light and telephone companies, and the fire and police departments to purchase resuscitators. From accounts of cases in which a certain machine was employed one would have supposed, and many persons, including even physicians, evidently did believe, that it was practically capable of restoring the dead to life.

"There is really no limit to the number of devices of this sort which can be, and perhaps will be, got up: hand-bellows, foot-bellows, bellows run by a motor, pumps, single and double, acting directly or through an injector. The mechanical requirements are easily met. The important thing is that the apparatus should be of such a simple character as not to impose on the credulity of the ordinary man. All that any apparatus yet invented can accomplish is artificial respiration with air enriched with oxygen. The superiority of a mere pump over any automatic apparatus lies in its simplicity. The same men who regarded the resuscitator with awe and wonder remark, of the 'lung-motor,' 'Why, you can blow up an automobile tire with that thing.'

"Even in respect to a simple pump, evidence is accumulating that physicians, as well as laymen, are prone to overestimate what can be accomplished with the apparatus. In consequence, the immediate application of manual artificial respiration is neglected, and thereby life is lost while the apparatus is being sent for and brought.

"The most important scientific point in this connection, however, is the fact that from the moment when spontaneous respiration ceases, whether by drowning, electric shock, excess of anesthesia, gas-poisoning, or any other form of asphyxia, the probability of restoration by any method grows rapidly less as the minutes pass. Probably ten minutes is the extreme limit of time beyond which restoration is practically impossible. It is true that there are occasional popular reports of persons who are supposed to have been in the water or buried in a cave-in for a longer time than this, and who have been restored; but in such cases it is highly improbable that there was complete submergence or that the reports in other respects represent the actual facts.

"In the large majority of the reports of alleged restorations effected with apparatus, the statement that the apparatus was telephoned for and was rushed to the spot is a significant item. A telephone lineman touches a wire which has been crossed with a power-line, and falls to the ground unconscious and apneic. A man who went to bed drunk in a cheap hotel is found in the morning with the gas turned on. A man in a trench in the street over a leaking gaspipe is overcome. A longshoreman falls into the harbor and is hauled out and laid limp on a wharf. Suppose that in such cases the rescuer runs to the nearest telephone. Apparatus is 'rushed to the spot.' If it arrives after the tenth minute (and it will seldom arrive so soon) the man is dead, and the vigorous working of the apparatus for the next hour succeeds at most in producing an emphysema in the corpse. Even in the unusual case in which the apparatus arrives and is applied in six or eight minutes, the chances of resuscitation are not nearly so good as they would be if the prone-pressure manual method had been begun within thirty seconds after the accident.

"In those cases in which apparatus was not applied until twenty or thirty minutes after the accident or after the patient was found—and such cases form the large majority of alleged cures—it is practically certain that the patient never ceased to breathe spontaneously, and that the apparatus contributed nothing material to his recovery.

"From these facts it seems fair to advise that breathing apparatus should be provided in those fields of work in which it can be at hand when an accident occurs, but not for cases in which it must be sent for. A reliable air-pump for artificial respiration is an important part of the equipment of a mine rescue crew—not so much for the men rescued from an exploded or burning mine as for use on members of the rescue party who may be overcome. Artificial respiration-apparatus could advantageously be kept at bathing beaches. It might also sometimes be useful for men in a city fire department. In nearly any hospital it is likely sooner or later to prove useful.

"Apparatus suitable for use on new-born infants should be introduced into every maternity ward. It does not appear, however, that unless the employees of a gas, electric light or telephone company have been drilled in manual methods and warned not to wait for apparatus, the purchase of apparatus will appreciably decrease the likelihood of fatalities outside of the central works. The general training of policemen, firemen and especially school children in the prone-pressure method would save more lives than the purchase of any amount of apparatus."

HERE Are STRANGE Eats of NATIONS

IT is not generally known that snails are considered quite a dainty dish in the west of England, at no less a place than ancient Bath. There, at a well-known eating-house, a capital trade is carried on in edible snails. They sell at 16 cents a quart. They are first boiled and then eaten cold, with vinegar. Those who have tasted them say they are far superior to the French escargots de Burgoyne.

In the United States some people are very partial to roast or boiled squirrel, or the smaller varieties known as chipmunks and gophers. These are prepared and cooked in the same way as rabbits, and the flavor is almost identical. Terrapin stew, which is very similar to turtle soup, is also a great favorite in many states.

In Mexico parrots are eaten by the commoner class, but they are rather tough.

The octopus or devil-fish, which, when boiled and then roasted, is eaten in Corsica and esteemed a great luxury.

The Gauchos of the Argentine are in the habit of hunting skunks not merely for the sake of their fur, but also for their flesh.

The edible birds' nests of the Chinese are worth twice their weight in silver, the finest variety selling as high as $30 a pound.

Ants are eaten by many nations. In Brazil they are served with a resinous sauce, and in Africa they are stewed with grease or butter. The East Indians catch them in pits and carefully wash them in handfuls like raisins. In Siam a curry of ant-eggs is a costly luxury.

The French eat snails, frogs and the diseased livers of geese—known as the luxury of pate de foie gras.

Quass, the fermented cabbage water of the Russian peasantry, is perhaps their most popular drink. The taste resembles a mixture of soapsuds and stale fish.

Balance Engines

IN the not very distant past many automobile manufacturers gave but casual attention to the balancing of their engines, trusting to the vibrations of the road to disguise those due to the engine or divert attention from the engine builder to the road builder or to the tire maker. Great improvements have been made, however, for it has been realized that proper balancing means much to the efficiency and life of the entire machine, as well as increased comfort to the user, and the advent of the eights and twin sixes brought the subject still closer to the designer. There is still much that can be done in the way of balancing moving parts and eliminating vibrations, and our best engineers are giving the subject careful study, although the frequent changes of model delays the results.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—Although at times unsettled today, wheat prices finished strong at the highest closing figures this season. A sharp advance in quotations at Buenos Aires caused anxiety among shorts here and it was evident that foreigners were picking up wheat on all setbacks. Gains amounted to 1 to 1⅝c net, with December closing at $1.70½ to ¾, and May at $1.70¼ to ⅞. Corn showed a rise of ¾ to 2¾c, and oats of ⅝@1½ to ¾c. The outcome for provisions was unchanged to 60c higher.

Attention of wheat traders focused chiefly on the drought in Argentine.

Corn like wheat had the highest close yet this season.

N. Y. FINANCE

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—Enormous trading in United States Steel was again the foremost feature of the week-end session that stock on its further advance of a point to 120⅝ coming within a quarter of a point of its record achieved the latter part of September. Dealings in Steel amounted to about 250,000 shares out of a total of 775,000 shares.

Other striking features were the new record made by General Motors which rose 36 points to 825, and the new maximums scored by sugar shares, Cuba Cane rising a fraction to 69⅞, American Beet 1½ to 101⅞, and Cuban-American 8½ to 226½, with a 12-point advance for Porto Rico to 210, that quotation, however being far below its high level.

The bank statement was the most encouraging presented of recent weeks, actual loans decreasing by almost $42,000,000, with a cash gain of about $28,000,000, and an increase in reserves of over $30,000,000, bringing the excess reserve to about $100,000,000.

GENEROUS FRESNO GIVES $1300 TO RELIEF FUND

Donates Substantially Toward Fund in Aid Starving People

Hope to Swell Amount to $5,000 By Today's Church Services

All Fresno responded generously yesterday to the cry of stricken Armenia and before the day was over more than $1,300 had been turned over to Treasurer E. E. Manheim of the local committee for the relief of the starving millions of women and children. Today, practically every church in the land will hold special services for the observance of President Woodrow Wilson's proclamation setting aside October 21 and 22 as "Armenia-Syria Relief Days," and from the churches in Fresno county and the San Joaquin valley will come additional donations that will swell the local fund to $5,000, it is expected.

Bright and early yesterday a small army of enthusiastic women and children gathered at the Young Women's Christian Association building and were supplied with bunches of small American flags to be sold on the streets to pedestrians, in office buildings, business houses, everywhere. In the four directions the flag laden charity workers departed, and before noon each and every one had returned many times for more flags, and still more flags.

Inadvertently, the boosters of the good roads project had decided on yesterday as their "Button Day," when good roads buttons should be sold for twenty-five cents. They soon discovered that their scheme was interfering with the relief work, and with a fine spirit of magnanimity they ordered all their workers to turn over their receipts to the relief fund and to devote all their efforts thereafter to amass a record contribution toward the relief fund.

By noon time the last flag had been sold and a searching party was hurriedly organized to visit all stores for the purpose of replenishing the supply of flags. A few additional bunches were found, but not enough to meet the demand and so it was decided to purchase larger flags and depend upon the generosity of the public to make up the additional expense. The buyers met them more than half way and hundreds of flags brought quarters and even half dollars during the afternoon. By nightfall not a flag remained for sale in the downtown business places and not a flag remained for sale with the relief workers.

"The people of Fresno have done their share royally," said Prof. Leon Ardzrooni, who acted as organizer here for the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief. "It is very encouraging to me to be shown such a hearty response and too much thanks cannot be given to the earnest men and women and children who have given us their time and their purses that bleeding Armenia might be rescued and the unfortunate women and children of that stricken country saved from starvation and a winter of sorrow."

The relief work is to be carried on in and about Fresno for another week, it was reported yesterday. Such encouragement was given the committee that they feel much can be accomplished toward adding to the fund by canvassing the outlying districts and neighboring towns.

Included in the total amount of funds collected yesterday are a number of donations mailed to E. E. Manheim by citizens. It is expected that further donations by generous spirited people will be received during the week. The money collected is to be transferred immediately to the American Committee in New York, where it will be used in the purchase of food and clothing for the Armenian and Syrian women and children in Turkey, Persia, Syria and Palestine.

BIG SIREN WILL BE SOUNDED EVERY HOUR TO CALL OUT VOTERS

Importance of Road Bond Issue Requires Full City Vote

Arrangements have been made to have the big siren at the Associated Raisin Company's warehouse blow every hour next Tuesday in order to remind every voter to get out and vote on the good roads bond issue.

This is being done in order to get a full vote, as it is pointed out that this issue is one of the most important that has ever been presented to the voters of Fresno county and that a full expression should be received if possible.

The big whistle at the packing house can be heard all over the city and by blowing it every hour it will remind the busy voter to take a few minutes off in order to vote on the good roads question.

FOUR INJURED IN MOTOR CAR WRECK

Sanger Pastor's Machine Thrown From Highway, School Teacher Hurt

Struck by a motor, which he declares was traveling at the rate of at least 40 miles an hour, a machine owned by Rev. L. Green of the First Presbyterian Church of Sanger, and containing three women, was demolished by the impact of the collision, while all of the occupants were slightly injured. The offending motor car is registered to the Chanslor-Lyons Company of this city.

Miss Elois Hicks, a school teacher of Sanger, sustained a fractured shoulder, while Rev. Green was badly bruised. Mrs. Green and a Mrs. William Byfield were but slightly hurt.

Rev. Green stated last night that he was waiting for a train to pass before turning from the State Highway into Elm avenue. His car was at a standstill. The other motor car, inbound to Fresno, bore down on them at a rapid rate, striking the minister's automobile and hurling it clear of the roadway.

Rev. Green endeavored to ascertain the name of the driver, but was refused any information, he says. He obtained the number, which he says is 125,210.

The women occupants of the car were rushed to Sanger for medical aid. L. B. Cary brought Rev. Green to this city, where arrangements were made to have the wrecked car taken to Sanger.

ALL NATIONALITIES JOIN TOGETHER IN "COMMUNITY SING"

First Choral Assembly at California Playground Attracts 1,000

American Folk Songs and National Airs Sung by Cosmopolitan Crowd

Russians, Germans, Armenians, Italians and Mexicans, not to mention a considerable number of native Americans, forgot the international complications of their various fatherlands, and became loyal citizens of a Fresno community last night at California Playgrounds and the first "Communal Sing" to be held in Fresno. The idea of all the people of a community gathering together for an informal session of choral singing is supposed to be of European origin and from the attendance of foreigners last night it may be gathered that the idea is pleasing to them. Hooded Russian-German women set next Italian girls in bright costumes. Father, mother and most of the family down to the latest addition were present, and led by their children, who through their contact with American music in the public schools were familiar with the songs, lifted their voices in "Kentucky Home," "America," "Auld Lang Syne," and other familiar airs.

Fully a thousand men, women and children were gathered within the circle of choristers and by word and action inspired the singers to overcome their diffidence, and was finally rewarded with an outburst of song. The plantation melodies of this country and old familiar English songs made up the bulk of the program.

Playgrounds Commissioner J. Q. Anderson was the informal presiding officer of the gathering. W. B. Munson, principal of the Emerson school, was introduced as a speechmaker, and was roundly applauded by some of his small charges who seemed to regard the sight of "teacher" making a speech from a box platform as a most humorous occasion.

Although but few of the juveniles present could claim American parentage, they demonstrated their Americanism by wildly calling for "Star Spangled Banner" when given an opportunity to choose. The hymn was sung by all nationalities with lusty enthusiasm.

The program of the evening was begun with the singing of "America" by all. The Germanic origin of the tune was indicated by the fact that although the words were unknown to many of the older singers, the air was perfectly familiar. An "Aloha Dance" by Alberta Zimmerman, Gladys Arbuckle, Rose Saleh and Thelma McClung, all girls of the California playground, followed. Blanche Smith accompanied on the ukelele. Chester Barlett and Miss Carolyn Blosser, supervisors of the California grounds, made arrangements for the program.

It is planned by the Playgrounds Commission to hold similar gatherings at Fink-Smith and Cosmos Playgrounds in the near future. The idea is being tried out this year, according to Superintendent R. L. Quigley, who plans to make these functions a regular feature next year.

ARREST MADE ON FIRE ORDINANCE

J. H. Faulkner was cited to appear before Judge Briggs Monday and answer to a complaint charging the violation of the fire ordinance. Assistant Fire Chief Berkoltz made the arrest, and alleges that Faulkner kept 50 gallons of distillate in an open tank after being warned that such was in conflict with the city ordinance.

Charming models for every figure and every occasion.

Other Coats From $14.95 to $35

Never before have we shown such a diversity of types, all following the season's correct silhouette. Equal popularity is accorded to the belted and semi-belted models that flare smartly from the waist and to the big, loose styles, flaring from the shoulders in sweeping fullness.

The wide cape collars on some of the models are trimmed with Hudson seal, mole, skunk or beaver; some have a velvet edging in darker shades.

There is such a fascination about these new Wooltex coats that we know there's not a woman in this city who could not enjoy and profit by seeing them.
